SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

Christmas Plants.

The advance in almost everything in the flower business has been really wonderful, but perhaps in no particular has this been more marked than in the production of blooming plants for the Christmas trade, and this has created such a demand that the improvement in quality and variety in the last decade is almost phenomenal. One does not have to look back many years when there was but a limited selection of plants at this season and the specimens grown were very inferior to those that are placed before the customer today. Primula sinensis was the stand-by, with a strain of cyclamen that would have only two or three flowers at the most, Begonia incarnata, and geraniums bearing flowers enough to give a bright color to the plant. Later the forcing of Duc von Thol tulips became quite an art to have presentable plants for the holidays. In looking over the beautiful collection of flowering plants now produced at this time of the year, one can but think with what difficulties the grower of a generation ago contended, and how limited the retailer was in his offerings to the trade.

Poinsettias.

The largest demand at Christmas for all decorative materials is, of course, in the bright red and the poinsettia with its scarlet bracts, often wrongfully called flowers, is particularly the plant grown for the holiday trade. It blooms at just this season and there is but little sale for it at any other time of the year, so it can practically be called the Christmas plant. When well grown either singly or with from four to six plants in a pot or pan, it is strikingly decorative and produces an effect which is equalled by no other plant. It, however, does not adapt itself to house culture, and lasts but a short time in the dwellings, the leaves dropping off, leaving the stem bare. So it is far better for the salesman to fully impress upon the customers that they are getting full value in having a plant of this color and size for a few days of the holiday season and hold out no inducements for future growth or long lasting qualities. These plants frequently lose many of their lower leaves with growers and where this happens if the pot is filled with small nephrolepis or other ferns the bare stems can be concealed and a very decorative plant produced. The decorating of these plants should be in red and of a shade that will harmonize with the color of the bracts, the Porto Rican matting or the waterproof crepe paper make fine pot coverings, and ribbon of proper shade passed through the foliage and tied with a handsome bow are nice decorative features.

Azaleas.

There are few plants which the florist handles that make so much showing for the price demanded or give so much satisfaction to the customer as the azaleas. The varieties most grown for the holiday trade are Simon Mardner, dark pink, invariably a nicely formed plant, full of flowers with plenty of foliage. This variety is probably the best for the holiday trade. Vervaneana is a bright rose with a white margin, the flower being frequently blotched and striped. The blooms are much larger than Simon Mardner and not so double, but the plant is not so shapely. Deutsche Perle is the white grown for early flowering, and is very popular, but the demand for white at this season is not so good as for those colors that are brighter. This variety is often ungainly in form, not being so shapely as many of the later varieties. White Vervaneana is also grown for a white. Mme. Petrick, pink, a shade lighter than Simon Mardner and just as shapely in growth, is growing rapidly in favor and is meeting with much approval by the customers.

In selling azaleas the customer should be informed that they require frequent waterings and a good soaking at least every day when placed in the dry atmosphere of the dwelling. It is well to have a card printed advising the customer of this and attach it to the plant before delivery. Azaleas need but few accessories to make them salable or decorative in the dwelling.

A suitable pot cover tied with a ribbon to match the flowers or to contrast harmoniously with them is all that is necessary. Large bows tied on this plant frequently make them look overdressed. The matting makes one of the best pot covers, the coarser woven seeming to set off the beautiful shape of the plant. In the delivery of azaleas it should not be lost sight of that these early blooming varieties are subjected to much forcing and they should be securely covered when leaving the store or greenhouse.

Begonias.

Of all the plants that are grown for pot culture and bloomed for the holidays none attract the attention of the purchaser more quickly than the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and its kindred sorts when they are well done. These plants, covered with their beautiful pink flowers, are sure to find ready sale and produce an effect in a store or office that can be done by no other. Unfortunately they do not do well in all dwellings, being very quickly affected by gas or too dry an atmosphere. No guarantee of their adaptability to surroundings can be advocated. We have seen two plants from the same lot go into dwellings; one remained in bloom through the winter and the other began to drop its flowers in three days. We have always thought that where this plant failed it was the result of neglect or environment.

Gloire de Lorraine is still the favorite variety with many growers. Lonsdale is a little too light in color to please many, and Glory of Cincinnati, although the flowers and leaves are much larger and the plant of much stronger growth, yet to many it lacks the gracefulness of the older variety. We, however, like the luxuriant growth of Glory of Cincinnati. When these plants are shipped they are of necessity tied in closely and when unwrapped the branches should be carefully spread apart, to give them the graceful appearance which they naturally possess. In the preparation for delivery a sheet of cotton batting should be first wrapped around the flowers to prevent them from being bruised and then covered with enough paper to guard against their being injured by frost. Pot covers of pink, white or green set the plants off and bows of gauzy ribbon if not overdone can be used in finishing them.

Primulas.

Primula sinensis, the variety known as the Chinese primrose, is still the old favorite with many at this season, for its adaptability for house culture is known and appreciated, but in comparison with some of the later plants it has not the finished or refined appearance, and has been forced into the background, yet there are many customers that desire this plant for their windows and if well grown they will find good sale. It is a little cheaper in price than the finer and larger plants and therefore appeals to a certain class of trade. With the pot covered with green waterproof crepe paper tied with a bow to either match the paper or the color of the flowers, it makes an attractive plant and one that is almost sure of giving satisfaction. At this season of the year the reds, although not quite bright enough to be called Christmas red, find good sale, and the pinks and whites are always in demand. Primula obconica makes a beautiful plant for making up baskets and also a satisfactory house plant, but this variety is to many poisonous to the touch and should be handled carefully.

Decorative Plants.

Among the decorative plants for Christmas one of the best is Dracena terminalis, its young highly colored leaves being very attractive at this season, and well grown plants will always be in demand. The other dracenas, especially Massangeana, meet with a good sale at this time. Boston ferns are always more or less in demand at this season for they make a very acceptable gift and large plants are more readily sold now than they have been during the fall. Crotons are grown extensively for the holiday trade and their highly colored foliage adds greatly to the display and they make fine decorative plants for the table. While they do not retain their beauty for any great length of time yet they make a splendid showing while they last, and as one of the largest growers of these plants says, "They last longer than cut flowers and are just as beautiful." A nice stock of the popular sizes of palms will be called for and it is good business to have them displayed. During the holiday trade there will be many people looking over the stock who do not often visit the stores and greenhouses and the dealer should grasp this opportunity to display not only his Christmas offerings but also fine samples of the stock which he always has on hand.

Cyclamens.

If any plant that the florist grows can be given a guarantee to continue to bloom after being placed in the dwelling it is the cyclamen, for in almost any light location and with good care these plants will continue to produce flowers throughout the winter. In very warm rooms, however, the blooms come out quickly and rapidly grow smaller. They will grow right beside the windows and not be affected by the cool draughts, and continue to push up their peculiarly shaped flowers for some weeks. These plants are particularly well adapted for plant baskets that are to be placed in the windows of residences. The single specimens find ready sale and with the exception of pot covers need no accessories to set them off, the sturdy little plants in fact look much better without any furbelows. The foliage of many of the varieties is beautifully marbled and is itself an attractive plant even if it had no flowers.

Fruited Plants.

Among the berried or fruited plants the imported holly and aucuba are the largest specimens and when well fruited are beautiful and decorative, but the sale of these large plants is limited. The two most prominent plants for Christmas are the ardisias and Otaheite oranges. The former is a very decorative plant when well grown and the berries highly colored, and is very satisfactory as a house plant. Tied with a handsome bow of red ribbon and the pot encased in a red matting this plant appeals very quickly to the buyer. It can never be made a cheap plant for the growth is slow and it takes a long time to produce a finished plant. The Otaheite when well fruited and colored is also attractive and these plants draped with golden ribbon can be made decorative. The solanums are also much in demand, the Christmas peppers appealing to many buyers and the old Jerusalem cherry is a favorite with many looking for a berried plant at a moderate cost.

Do Chrysanthemums Pay?

Every available seat in the Chamber of Commerce rooms was occupied and camp stools called into requisition for the regular meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club, at Lancaster, Pa., November 21, when the subject of the evening was "Do Chrysanthemums Pay?" M. J. Brinton of Christiana and B. F. Barr of Lancaster opening the discussion.

Mr. Brinton says that as chrysanthemums have been grown at his place ever since they first began to be a factor in the cut flower product of the greenhouse, and presuming that his firm had ordinary business ac-men, they must be a profitable thing to grow.

"Were I to grow carnations only, as some of you do," he said, "then I would either grow no chrysanthemums or at least only the space needed for propagation and the growing of the young carnations as they would follow each other without interference and little loss of time. I have tried on different occasions the potting of carnation plants from the field and holding them in frames to follow chrysanthemums but the quality of carnation blooms was so inferior to those from the earlier established plants that I shall try it no more. The grower who needs many small bedding plants in the spring can profitably use a good portion of space with the Queen of Autumn and follow with these plants, or with pot stock intended for Easter. As a rooted cutting proposition they can be made to succeed themselves to advantage, selling cuttings from them during the late winter and until time to renew the plants again.

"I have left sweet peas for the last suggestion as a crop follower for the chrysanthemums, and I believe they are one of the most profitable possibilities in the whole list. As I see it, there are two requisites for success, solid beds and head room. While peas planted in October or November are not likely to grow as tall as those planted in August, if they are well watered and fed they will push several feet above one's head. The same soil can be used if properly enriched, making the investment light. In planting these late peas do not plant the Spencers, for while they make an abundance of long stemmed flowers they do not bloom until the early outdoor varieties are almost beginning.

"In conclusion I would say that chrysanthemums pay. Anything that the public uses can be made to pay just as soon as high quality is produced at a moderate cost. The people want chrysanthemums and will pay for good ones."

Mr. Barr says that his personal experience has been varied. "Sometimes," to use his words, "I have found them profitable, sometimes not. If we can grow one flower to a plant that will wholesale at $2.50 a dozen or two flowers to a plant that will wholesale at $1.50 a dozen, growing the plants say eight by ten inches apart, we are making a fair margin of profit, providing the house can be used for other crops as soon as the chrysanthemums are cut. Varieties maturing before November could be sold at least 15 per cent less, leaving the same margin of profit, because we have the use of the space earlier in the season, and getting a start before the very short days of winter. It has been our custom the last few years to grow as few varieties as possible, each variety being scheduled to bloom at a certain season.

"The varieties we consider most profitable to us from a retail point of view are as follows: (early varieties), Golden Glow (yellow), Polly Rose (white), Gloria Pacific (pink). Unaka is considered a great favorite by many but with us it was a failure; (mid-season varieties) Robert Halliday (yellow) White Cloud (white) McNiess (pink) and Major Bonnaillon (yellow); (late varieties), both yellow and white Jerome Jones, Lynwood Hall (white) Maud Dean (pink) and Rosette (pink).

"We have been growing these varieties for the last four or five years. Some years ago I was very enthusiastic on the chrysanthemum question and bought stock of practically all the new varieties as they were introduced and found to my regret that the larger percentage of the new varieties were a total failure and a dead loss. There are exceptions however; for instance, when Yellow Jones was introduced I bought 500 plants. The first year the flowers did not pay for the labor of growing them, much less for the plants, which were quite costly. Giving them another trial the following year they did remarkably well, producing splendid flowers, and we have been growing them ever since.

"This is only an instance to illustrate that many times a new variety is discarded before it is given a fair chance. However, to make money out of chrysanthemums it is better to let them be tried out in different soils other than that of the producer before investing heavily in them. The chrysanthemum season is really the fall opening of the florists' business, and by giving them the care and attention needed to produce first class flowers, and with the proper disposition of the beds after the flowers are gone, I am quite sure they can be grown with a fair margin of profit."

These papers were followed by a general discussion in which many good points were brought out. R. S. Nagle having made a success of the very early varieties with the use of sash to cover an outdoor space. — Law found the following up with carnations from four-inch pots a success where Golden Glow was the variety used as a predecessor. In the discussion it was brought out that some years back John N. May, Summit, N. J., grew carnations in flats four inches deep, these flats being held in cool houses until the chrysanthemums were out of the way and then simply set on the beds, not shifted, giving good results.

S. S. Skidelsky was a visitor and advised the growing of one of the better new varieties, as the larger growers were discarding old varieties for new ones and they certainly knew what they were doing. He also made some remarks on the matter of publicity along newspaper lines and was followed by President Herr, who is in hearty accord with the newspaper end of this campaign. It is proposed to make a visiting tour about once a month during the growing season, taking in various establishments along the car lines. The first one will be November 30 to Manheim, some thirty signifying their intention of going.

FLORISTS' PALMS

Cultural Notes.

The passing of the month of October brings to mind the fact that the potting season is very nearly at an end, for palms in general do not make so rapid a growth after this month is gone and some of them practically cease growing from November to March. This means that it is not good practice to disturb the roots of such species during that period, for freshly potted plants are not good subjects for the retailer to handle, and also do not make much progress for the wholesaler unless they are given an unreasonable amount of heat.

It is doubtless well known to many growers of experience that the Kentias do continue to grow later in the season than the majority of commercial kinds of palms, but their growing season may not really prove to be much longer than that of the arecas or cocos, taking into consideration the fact that they do not start to grow quite so early in the spring. But yet this difference in habit gives a chance to the grower to shift some of the young stock of Kentias after the sale of some of the larger plants has made room for such work, for palms take some time to grow into money, and every month counts. In the autumn small shifts in repotting are the best practice, as too much unoccupied soil in the pots is of no special benefit to the plants and in case of careless watering may really prove to be a detriment. Therefore one-inch shifts are safer practice than to move them from 4-inch to 6-inch, or from 3-inch to 5-inch pots at one potting.

In spring one does not need to be quite so careful as to the size of the shift, provided the plants are well rooted and in a healthy growing condition. There is, of course, a limit to the smallness of pots in regard to palms, it being quite possible to grow a plant 5 feet high in a 5-inch pot, but such a plant looks and really is abnormal, and in addition to this a customer is rarely willing to pay an 8-inch price for a plant in a 5-inch pot, so these overgrown plants seldom prove very satisfactory. This applies particularly to Kentias, because these plants will thrive with less root space than many others. The Phoenix demand more root space, though they may also be grown in under-sized pots by means of judicious feeding and fairly high temperature. But when a Phoenix is kept too long without a shift it forms such a cushion of strong fleshy roots in the bottom of the pot that the whole plant is lifted above the rim, and it becomes a difficult matter to water such a plant properly.

One may remedy such a condition in the spring by pruning off the mat of strong roots and then repotting into as small a pot as may be convenient for the purpose, but such treatment is too much of a shock for the plant when it is about to go to rest in the autumn, and might result in the loss of some foliage. Firm potting, thorough watering, and sufficient heat are three particular items in the successful culture of commercial palms, and yet there are some limitations on each of these items. Regarding the firm potting it may be said that anyone that is used to the work can pot any palm up to the 4-inch size with no other tool than the fingers and thumbs, but from 5-inch pots upward a thin rammer is required in order to get the soil down where it belongs in the pot. Thorough watering means giving water enough to completely wet through the ball of earth in the pot, and if one watering is not enough to do this then repeat the dose until the soil is moist all through. Then syringe freely overhead and beneath the foliage, using a good pressure of water, so that dust and any loose insects may be removed.

Both watering and syringing are best done before noon at this season of the year, syringing as early as the sun heat brings the temperature of the house up to 75 degrees. Sufficient heat is a somewhat elastic term, but it indicates for Kentias a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees during the winter, about the same for Latantias, and 62 to 65 degrees for arecas, cocos and Phœnix Rœbelinii. Rhapis are comparatively hardy and will keep in good condition through the winter in a night temperature of 55 degrees, and a few degrees lower will not do them any harm. While palms are not likely to show marked differences in general condition from a few degrees' variation in the night temperature, yet it is more satisfactory to follow an even standard and the night man should have proper instructions to that effect. Shading on the glass becomes less necessary as the days shorten, and from November 15 to February 15 there is but little shading needed.

Retubbing Phoenix.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I have a large phoenix to transplant for a customer. It is in a tub about 24 inches square and slightly deeper. The height of the palm is over nine feet. Would it be safe to remove some of the roots with some of the soil and put it back into the same tub? Also, what fertilizer would you mix with the soil? If not practical to use same size tub how much larger should the new tub be? Will you also give me your opinion as to a fair charge for storing this palm during the winter? The leaves spread out over eight feet square, but of course I could use the space under them for other palms.

Illinois.

G. W. J.

It would be better to postpone the re-tubbing of this palm until next March, as at that time the roots will resume their growth much more rapidly than they would at the present season. The roots would stand pruning, provided the plant is kept in a warm and moist house for several weeks afterward. Use good ordinary potting soil with the addition of about a five-inch pot full of bone dust to the quantity required for the job. In case you decide to use a larger tub there should be two inches of clearance around the old ball, in order to allow space to ram in the fresh compost. Storage charges vary considerably according to the locality, but a charge of one dollar per month would be moderate for such a plant.

BROWN DEER, WIS.—The Mueller Greenhouse Co. is preparing to erect three new greenhouses 26x300 feet. The preliminary grading, etc., will be done this winter and the building will start in the spring. The entire plant, to consist when complete of five houses, each 26x300 feet, and one propagating house 15x60 feet, will be devoted to the growing of carnations.

OTAHEITE ORANGE.

THE CARNATION.

Some Timely Suggestions.

Everything having been attended to as regards the supporting of the plants by wire rings, strings or whatever method is adopted, the general routine of caring for the plants comes next in order. They will need disbudding regularly as the new shoots come up and bud out. Allow the buds to get large enough to handle properly before disbudding. Rubbing out the side buds when they are very small as early in the season as this has a tendency to throw the flowers to one side, but it is not meant that by allowing the buds to get large enough to handle properly they should be left on to draw all the strength out of the main bud. Another important point is where to stop in removing the side shoots from the flowering stem. Long stems to the flowers are as desirable at this time of the year as any other, but the lower shoots of the flowering stems are the growths for the season's blooms, so that it is necessary to draw the line more closely at this time than later in the season and be satisfied with a medium length stem for a while yet.

It is a pleasure to go into a house of carnations at this season and find everything in order. This is the season for the plants to build themselves up preparatory to the dark, dreary weather which we are bound to get during November and December, when plant growth will be very slow. Therefore it encourages the growth of the plant a great deal to follow up closely every little detail of the work. Keep the soil in the beds porous and sweet by guarding against its becoming too wet. Sometimes considerable of the soil will wash toward the center, preventing that part of the bed from drying out properly. The only thing to do when this occurs is to level the loose soil back again. Temperature and ventilation are two very important factors. An even temperature should be the aim at all times, running a little below the regular degree for a couple of weeks yet or until the weather conditions make steady firing necessary. This gives the plants a chance to make strong healthy growth.

Cold draughts blowing on the plants should be avoided and particular attention given to keeping them clean from insects. At this season the flowers lack the keeping qualities of later on, owing particularly to the abundance of pollen that is now found in them. It is therefore better to cut the flowers a little tight and set them in water for 10 or 12 hours before sending them to market. Now is the time to get a good supply of live soil together for potting up the young stock during the winter. Do not add any more manure to the fresh soil than is necessary to put a little life into it. The soil should be stored out of the weather in some easily accessible place. Another important item is to arrange for the propagating sand. It will be but a very short time before it is needed again.

C. W. JOHNSON.

THE ROSE.

Tying and Disbudding.

One of the most important things at hand in the rose houses at this time, is the tying. In order to have good strong plants for mid-winter blooming they must have plenty of air circulating in and around them and plenty of sunshine where it will do the most good. If the tying is neglected, especially if the plants that are being carried over were pruned hard, they usually make so many growths the foliage becomes so dense that it excludes too much air and light; and naturally in a short time if they are not kept tied they will lose a great amount of foliage, become drawn and show a tendency to produce blind wood.

When one is tying there is much wood that is practically useless that can be severed. Especially is this true of the carried over stock as, no matter how carefully one has pruned, there will be a number of weak growths come that will only choke up the plants and cause a loss of foliage on the good wood. Richmond should be watched carefully for this reason, and very often where Killarney has made three or more canes to prune back on each plant they will make practically as much thick growth as Richmond; and as stated above while one is tying, a good deal of useless wood can be removed as we go along. Again, one must be careful not to draw the plants together too tightly under the tie.

Disbudding requires a great amount of judgment at this time for it is quite a temptation to let the flowers come on now and many inexperienced growers are over anxious to begin to reap their harvest. We all know or should know that the chrysanthemums from now on till the latter part of November will crowd the roses to the wall, and there is seldom anything more than a mild demand for even the best of rose stock during the chrysanthemum season. So we disbud accordingly, and as we have so often stated in these columns that for the small grower we think cropping (in the true sense of the word) is not advisable; and if one has the skill to have his plants producing quite fairly day by day, his net returns for the season will, we think, show better results than by cropping all off, perhaps when prices are soaring, and roses to burn on a slump market.

The Compost.

We would suggest that some of the soil for next season's compost be hauled now before bad weather sets in. We won't go into details in trying to describe the best soil for this purpose any more than to state that a good stiff clayey loam is preferable to a light sandy soil, and a sod of long standing is best on account of the great amount of fibre it contains. Any soil from a field that has been set to grass for several seasons and has been known to have produced good crops of grain, grass, etc., should make good rose soil. If the soil is hauled and dumped conveniently near where the compost is to be prepared (preferably in the spring), and the frost is allowed to work on it during the winter, then mixed in the spring with good cow manure, it will be found in fine condition. If one cannot haul it at this time the ground should at least be plowed and when the ground becomes frozen it can be loaded by hand easily and piled up or a top dressing of manure placed on it to be washed into it during the winter. Almost any stable manure will do for this, as it will have to have the cow manure added anyway when the spring mixing or composting takes place.

One should also prepare soil enough now for the winter's potting and get it under cover; also sand for propagating. This should be kept in a dry, clean place. Good wash sand is excellent for this work if free from vegetable matter where one cannot get good bank sand, although the latter is preferable, owing to its freedom from dirt. About the first demand for soil will be the potting of the manetti stocks there is any difficulty experienced in having the foliage dry off properly. Now that there is an increase of artificial heat look out for red spider, fumigate regularly and keep the fumes of sulphur in the house by applying it to the pipes. If steam heat is used and one pipe is painted for several feet along each joint the whole length of the house about every two or three days there should be no trouble caused by mildew unless there should be a bad dose of it. In this case sulphur should be used until it disappears.

Russian Experiment Stations.

A law ratified by the emperor during the summer of 1912 is sure to be of very great importance to Russian agriculture. This law deals with measures relating to the opening and maintenance of agricultural experiment stations throughout the country, the government undertaking to provide three-fourths of the necessary funds. The development of the stations is in the hands of provincial zemstvos and agricultural communities. The balance of trade in Russia has to be main-if one intends doing any grafting, and when mixing the soil or piling it up in the rough, use one part good cow manure to four parts soil; but if the soil and manure can be kept dry it is very easily mixed as one wants to use it, and it is a good plan to have some shredded cow manure on hand all the time, as this is always ready to mix with the soil for potting purposes. We have found that it gives excellent results for pot roses as well as for light mulchings.

The dissemination throughout the country of knowledge concerning scientific agriculture is seriously needed, and it is to that end that the new law has been promulgated.

New Trees in Arnold Arboretum.

It might have been expected that the last year with its exceptionally dry summer and remarkably cold winter would have damaged many plants in the Arboretum, but on the whole the collections are in unusually good condition and as yet show little effect of the severe climatic changes of the winter, states the Bulletin issued by the Arnold Arboretum. The influence of the weather on the plants raised from seeds collected in western China has been watched with interest, as a number of them were planted last year in exposed positions that their hardiness here might be tested. The winter has shown that a large number of Chinese trees and shrubs new to our plantations can probably be successfully cultivated in Massachusetts, and of course in all the regions south of Massachusetts. The following are some of the most important of these trees: Davidia involucrata should perhaps be mentioned first. It is a medium sized tree related to our Flowering Dogwood, but with one large floral bract in place of the four smaller bracts of the American tree. Davidia is described as one of the most beautiful of all the flowering trees of temperate regions and its introduction a few years ago into cultivation through French missionaries was a matter of great horticultural interest. It has lived for several years in the Arboretum and has flowered twice in Europe. Of especial interest is Cladrastis sinensis, introduced by Wilson, as it adds another to the list of genera represented in the eastern United States and China. The American cladrastis, better known as virgilia, is one of the rarest and most beautiful of the trees of the United States. Unfortunately, the Chinese species promises to be of less value as an ornamental tree. The flowers, which are sometimes faintly tinged with pink, are smaller than those of its American relative and are borne in erect, not drooping clusters. The leaflets are smaller and the bark is of a darker color. The two new catalpas from western China, C. Fargessii and C. Duclouxii, are both uninjured. In Phellodendron chinense there is an important addition to the eastern Asiatic genus phellodendron, represented before in the Arboretum by three species. It is good news that Staphylea holocarpa has come through the winter in good condition. This is a tree twenty to twenty-five feet tall, producing in May before the leaves appear pendulous racemes of fragrant flowers varying in color from white to rosy lilac. Mr. Wilson speaks of it as the handsomest of its genus, and one of the most beautiful of the small flowering trees of western China. The different forms of the so-called European Walnut (Juglans regia), introduced by Wilson, and the distinct J. cathayensis, a tree with splendid foliage and nuts resembling those of the American Butternut, are uninjured by the cold. Populus lasiocarpa, which has lived in the Arboretum uninjured during the past two years, adds a very remarkable and handsome species to the large group of these trees which can be cultivated here. A still more beautiful species brought back by Wilson on his last journey and still unnamed has passed the winter without injury. Even the liquidambar of central China, L. formosana, is uninjured and may prove hardier here than the native species which suffers in eastern Massachusetts except in favorable positions.

The greatest of all the hazels, Corylus chinensis, judging by the plants at this time, gives promise of becoming an important addition to the ornamental trees which can be cultivated here. With an average height of from sixty to eighty feet and a girth of trunk of from eight to ten feet, in favorable situations on the mountains which cover the mountains of the Tibetan frontier indicates that these trees may also be hardy in this climate. The introduction of these conifers was the object of Mr. Wilson's last journey to China, and they are now growing in the Arboretum and in many public and private collections.

It can be said that generally the new Chinese species of oak, beech, of Hupeh it attains a height of more than a hundred feet with a trunk five feet in diameter. There is much interest in the various forms of cherry raised from seeds sent home by Mr. Wilson, who found an unexpectedly large number of species in several of the groups of the genus prunus to which the cherries belong. They are nearly all quite new to science and of course have not been found before in gardens. Thirty of these new species or varieties have passed through the winter uninjured, and only two species, which will probably not live here, have suffered. Among these species are a number of great beauty and this group perhaps is the most interesting of the deciduous-leaved trees obtained by Mr. Wilson during his first journey. The hemlock of western China, Tsuga yunnanensis, has now lived for two years in the Arboretum. This is one of the largest and most widely distributed of the conifers of China. The fact that it grows with the spruces and firs birch, willow, poplar, pear, maple and ash, besides some of the less well known genera like idesia, euptelea, poliothyrsus and eucommia, judging by the experience of the past year, are likely to succeed here and it is probably reasonable to hope that not less than seventy-five new species of trees will be added to our plantations by Mr. Wilson's first journey to China.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Basket Vases.

There are all sorts of jars for holding flowers, from the cheap tin and fiber buckets to expensive china and glassware. Many of the fiber jars are useful for cut flowers when placed in the ice box, but are hardly the thing for window or store decoration, although many storekeepers make use of them for this purpose.

A much better plan is to place the common jar in a basket cover. These are now offered by the supply men in great variety, many of them furnished with zinc linings or of a size that will admit and hold nicely stock-sized fiber vases. A few chrysanthemums and autumn leaves arranged in vase or tinlet of this description will have a much better decorative effect than when used in the plain jar. They are to be had in all colors—shades of green, brown, gilt, two-toned, gun metal, or made to go with any kind of store fixture.

The shapes and sizes are as valuable as the colors. Every store should have a dozen or two of these wicker or basket vases or jar holders. Arranged in these receptacles the stock presents in addition to its natural beauty a decorative effect that adds materially to its appearance, and customers who are "looking" are often influenced to the point of buying when the ordinary closely packed jar of flowers would be passed by. K.

Thanksgiving in New York Stores.

Harking back to the days when some of us were husky boys and were wont to make trips in a "rattle-trap" horse car to the end of the line, then stumble on over frozen ground to a greenhouse, we may well say that the world, at least the horticultural part of it, is growing better. These trips, cold and tiresome as they were, sometimes ended in sore disappointment on finding that some other fellow had taken time by the forelock, got there ahead of us and secured the best of the available stock. While a variety of complaints may at this time be heard from various branches of the trade, it would indeed be an unreasonable man who could complain of the quantity or quality of stock.

Though many of the best chrysanthemums have been cut, the retail stores are yet well stocked with them and some excellent varieties are seen. Roses are in profusion and the window decorations are prodigal in their use. Great as American Beauty has been, we sometimes think that its glory will soon be dimmed by some new variety. Though but few of Mrs. Charles Russell are yet seen, enough is known of it to start endless gossip as to its possibilities. Mrs. Geo. Sawyer is another rose that is much sought after and Milady seems to be the red rose of the near future. Killarney, Radiance and Lady Hillingdon remain popular and all are striking features at this time.

The fancies of the old poets ran much toward the rose and it was worthy of their muse. If they could look around the flower stores of the present day and see some of the productions of Dorner, Fisher, Ward and others, we doubt not that they would be inspired to sing of the beauty of the carnation. To show the popularity of the carnation in a more practical sense, it may be stated that for the Thanksgiving trade it is one of the few stocks that has practically doubled in price. The saying that there is always a demand for carnations has been more than emphasized during the past week, and while they are not yet at their best, surprisingly good stock may be seen. The lily of the valley, as useful for the bridal as for the bier, retains its popularity and is seen in all its perfection.

There sometimes have been predictions made that the orchid supply would become exhausted, but this has not yet come to pass. Orchids in garlands of smilax or in glasses are features in many of the most pretentious show windows and add richness to any decoration. The gardenias are no longer novelties and have now taken their place among the staple stocks with the great improvement in their quality and culture. The lilies, once an Easter luxury in the floral world, have become such a part of the day's business that it is possible their beauty and usefulness may, in some instances, be undervalued. Of "the modest shrinking violet," what shall we say? Considering its history, associations and past usefulness, it qualities of the hanging baskets of begonias of the Lorraine type may sometimes be questioned; their grace and beauty never. There is no occasion for any florist to hang up in his store a little eight by nine picture to give "publicity" to flowers, for a few of those hanging baskets of begonias flanked with luxuriant ferns, will do the trick. Azaleas, poinsettias, heather and camellias are also seen in all their beauty and if to all these we add the bright foliage plants like the crotons and dræcnas, on great banks of palms and ferns, it will readily be seen that horticulture and floriculture are marching to the drum-beats of progress, A. seems a pity to see it so overshadowed by its more showy sisters. There is yet a demand for violets and we hope there always will be, but it is an undeniable fact that they are losing caste in "high society." Sweet peas of excellent quality are seen, in fact, the exceptionally mild autumn has sent to market a wealth of cut blooms that we believe has seldom or never been equalled.

As it is with the cut flowers, so it is with the flowering plants. The lasting essary to settle the soil round the roots. They will require very little more than a light syringing until the leaves begin to develop. A temperature of 45° to 50° is what suits them best till they acquire a good sheet of foliage, when they can be advanced gradually to 56°. They are very impatient of heat and any attempt to force them will surely end in failure. When the flower buds begin to show color, they will stand a temperature of 65° if necessary. C.

WITH THE GROWERS

Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.

A recent visit to this noted firm of nurserymen and florists showed that their business is constantly on the increase. As the season for digging and shipping outdoor stock is now practically ended, though the mild autumn weather has prolonged it, we will enumerate a few of their greenhouse specialties, for they have a large glass area and every house is well stocked.

We found a force of men preparing for shipment many fine palms, araucarias and other exotics. The palms grown at this range, both in quantity and quality, are very notable features. In boxwood and bay trees there is an immense stock to choose from and these features alone make the place worthy of a visit. The seeker after color can find plenty of it here. There are houses of poinsettias that would delight the eyes of an artist and they are already all ablaze with color. There is an immense stock of fine azaleas that will be in for the Christmas trade.

The fine foliage of many dracaenas, if not as pronounced as the blooming poinsettias, lends variation among the ferns and other foliage plants. A noteworthy feature is the many fine plants that are being grown on for future sale, such as hydrangeas, large tubs and vases of English ivies, etc., for eternal vigilance is one of the mottoes of this firm. They aim to be prepared to fill all the orders that come in and have something left for seed, as the farmer would say. One notable feature is a fine stock of Ficus elastica and F. pandurata. The old-fashioned rubber plant is still on the job, so to speak, and there are no better ones than those grown by this firm.

Returning to flowering stock, we found fine bougainvilleas, begonias of the Lorraine type, primroses and a variety of other fine stocks. On account of the great increase in their business they have recently greatly enlarged their office rooms and facilities, and an atmosphere of business prosperity pervades the whole place. Much of their stock goes to the New York market, but their shipping trade to distant points is also large.

A. F. F.

The Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

Although the Julius Roehrs Co. has been many years in business and the name is one to conjure with in the horticultural world, it is worth while, as Christmas draws near, to call attention of their remarkably fine stock of plants. It would indeed be a large undertaking to attempt to enumerate all the stock that their acres of glass cover, so we will be content to mention a few of the leading features.

Though primarily plantmen, they grow a great amount of stock for cutting, notably orchids. "Always orchids," one of the members of the firm once said to the writer, and that statement remains unquestioned. We cannot at present recall how many thousand square feet of glass covers the orchids, but if that alone were standing separately it would be considered a large range. Here have been gathered from time to time the best products of the orchid producing countries. Unless you are a post-graduate in orchid lore, you will see fine specimens of all the orchids you know anything about and then some more. A force of men are working all the time in the orchid houses, for even if they do "grow on trees" in their native wilds, such primitive methods are not in vogue with those who grow for a crop. Connected with the orchid houses are large and convenient potting and packing rooms and every other facility for rapid and efficient work.

Lily of the valley is another product of this range, the culture of which attracts attention. It is kept coming all is not easily grown, but that might depend upon who was growing it. However that may be, it is growing all right at this range, and there is house after house of it, showing that richly tinted foliage that betokens proper treatment. The crotons are a fine feature and there are dracaenas in variety and a mass of other beautiful foliage plants.

Azaleas, rhododendrons and the various berried plants are always popular factors in the plant trade and they

the time, is cut and bunched with great care and the valley grown at this range is much sought after in the New York market.

In the plant sections, at present there is a most remarkable exhibit of the Begonia Glory of Cincinnati and others of that type. We counted ten houses and possibly missed a few, filled with these begonias in all the glory of perfection. When a photographer tries to get the impression of such subjects his finished work is crude indeed and even we fear, some of the "old masters" would have made a sorry job of it. There are some things that cannot be described, painted or photographed with complete satisfaction, they must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated.

Passing on, we find among other Christmas favorites, the poinsettias, which are another blaze of color. There is being grown at this range a new poinsettia, a pink, which is a novelty. Time was, and not so long ago, when the question was asked: "Will the camellias come back?" Well, they are back, and judging by the quality of stock seen at the Roehrs range, they are here to stay.

Another notable feature is the great stock of Adiantum Farleyense. It has sometimes been said that this plant too are here in quantity and perfection. If the philanthropic Andrew Carnegie could see the heather grown here, he might be tempted to bestow a pension on the head of the house, provided he did not prove as ungrateful as the ex-president and the near-ex-president have been. But a part of the good things to be seen at this range have been enumerated and visitors to New York who are interested in horticulture should include Rutherford, N. J.

Philadelphia Notes.

The Jos. Heacock Co. is still sending out large palm orders. They say it is the best season ever. A new drove of tested cows has been added to the dairy at Rolefs. The firm hopes now to have all the fertilizer required for this rose growing branch.

M. Rice & Co.'s last minute sheet, offering the indispensables for Christmas, is very timely. It is well worded and illustrated, so that the busy man can see the stock offered at a glance.

The publicity committee of the Florists' Club has met several times and is laying out a program that if kept up to schedule will bring great results.

Griffin Brothers of Turkford are sending some fine cattleyas to Ed Reid, who says he cannot get enough of them.

The H. A. Dreer Co., at its city store, 714 Chestnut street, had a window filled with cocus in various sizes, all very artistically arranged. A window of the Mordrecht or Glory fern the week before attracted much attention. This variety is certain to be a winner.

The Leo Niessen Co. handled an enormous amount of stock last Wednesday. Their great facilities were taxed to the utmost. Double and single violets, carnations and American Beauty roses are special features here.

The new Berger Autocar went into service last week. It is a beautiful machine and is a great help in making deliveries.

Godfrey Aschmann is wearing a broad smile these days. The large morning mail orders start it going early. He says business was never better. K.

HOLIDAY HELPS TRADE.

The last week has been the best for some time. Good feeling prevailed among the public in general, with the result of an increase of trade for the annual Thanksgiving. The florist ought to give thanks that his specialties received the support of the buying public as they did. All classes seemed to be purchasing, from the street waif with a few cents, to the millionaire with his orchids and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses. It is pleasant to note that personally we saw very little salted stock which will give the public an incentive to purchase more after the lasting qualities of the flowers have been established. Roses and carnations were especial favorites. Chrysanthemums to make a large showing were taken up quickly. As reported last week, carnations were scarce and commanded a higher figure. Some of those who went in for roses are of the opinion that they had better stand in with their old love. Because of the higher temperature required, and the longer season of firing, and the ups and downs of the roses, they figure they would have been money ahead if they had not changed. Chrysanthemums are gone. Roses are not any too plentiful. Carnations are scarce, along with sweet peas. Single violets are in fair demand but the double ones are not much wanted.

NOTES.

Peter Fisher's new carnation Gorgeous is going to be the kingpin next year. With three-foot stems and big flowers, this variety is in a class by itself; and the productiveness is there also. We are glad Mr. Fisher has another good thing.

PRICES ADVANCE.

Business during the last week has picked up considerably and everybody seems to be satisfied with the Thanksgiving trade. There is plenty of stock of all kinds and the prices have advanced a little.

NOTES.

Geo. H. Cooke had the decoration for one of the social events of the fall, the wedding of Miss Laura Beatrice Merriam, daughter of Wm. R. Merriam and wife, to James F. Curtis, assistant secretary of the treasury. The house was elaborately decorated in the drawing room, where the ceremony took place. The flowers were all white. Chrysanthemums, lilies of the valley and gardenias were used in profusion with maidenhair ferns and palms. The bay window was completely hidden by a lattice which was hung with asparagus vines, in front of which stood the priedieu. The bridal party made their way to this from the music room, their path being marked by broad white moire ribbon. In the music and dining-room the flowers used were pink and in the hall were pots of palms and flowering plants. A special feature of the wedding was the boutonnières worn by all the servants. They were small old fashioned bouquets made of lilies of the valley, white roses and maidenhair in a dainty lace holder with a bow and ends of white gauze ribbon. The bridal bouquet was a handsome one made in shower effect of lilies of the valley, white dendrobiums and white spray orchids made to carry on the arm.

Gude Bros. had the golden jubilee and fiftieth anniversary of the Calvary Baptist church decoration, using a great quantity of palms and ferns, 300 yards of Christmas roping, 700 large yellow chrysanthemums and 200 yards of broad yellow ribbon. They also decorated for the opening of a new furnishing store, using southern smilax and from thirty-five to forty baskets of flowers and horseshoes, giving it the appearance of a flower shop instead of a haberdashery. St. Patrick's Church decoration for the mass of all nations was also done by Gude Bros. Large palms, ferns and chrysanthemums were intermingled with the flags of all the nations.

The Washington Floral Co. has a new rose called Lady Caprice. It is a two toned pink, very much like Radiance and having a flower larger than the American Beauty.

Walter Carson, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., has accepted a position with O. A. C. Oehmler. G. C. D.

Baltimore.

The Maryland Horticultural show, held at the Fifth Regiment Armory the week of Nov. 19, was a great success. Fine fruits, vegetables and grains, surrounded by exquisite plants and blooming flowers, made a scene worthy of note.

A week or two later would have produced a larger showing of roses, but chrysanthemums of the choicest were there in abundance. The park board had a fine exhibit of plants and ferns which added very much to the decorations. The seedsmen and bulb people, the greenhouse supply men, etc., were well represented. A fairly good crowd was present each evening, and the usual premiums of silver cups and money were distributed.

Thanksgiving came in with a light mantle of snow—a typical day, and very good for the business. The sales on that day were up to the usual trade for the season. The social functions will soon start now, which always creates a demand for flowers.

The florists are busy getting their Christmas stock in trim. Very fine poinsettias are coming in. This is certainly a Christmas flower, the red is so bright and attractive, and large sales are annually made of it.

BEST THANKSGIVING IN HISTORY.

The Thanksgiving trade was the best ever experienced here. Favored with cold bright weather, which was preceded by the warm, cloudy, and rainy variety, the change seemed to give unusual life to trade. Wednesday was better than Thursday, but a heavy demand began early Wednesday morning and continued till late the following day. Chrysanthemums were the chief item called for, and the supply was fully equal to the call. Violets were greatly favored, but the use of Pom-pon chrysanthemums for corsage bouquets robbed the violet of some of its popularity. American Beauties were a factor in the trade, and though high priced, many of them were sold; other roses held their own on the general call, and many were sold. A shortage of them developed early on Thursday. Valley, too, was not equal to the demand, while too many lilies were on hand, and the poorer grade of chrysanthemums moved sluggishly. Carnations were short of the demand, and the quality of most of them available was poor, though really high prices were realized on them. Small baskets of assorted flowers found much favor with the public and many were disposed of. These effects are constantly growing in favor, and all retailers are prepared for the spirited call for them. Friday the expected quiet followed the previous day's feast of flowers, but Saturday unusual activity developed, and all good flowers on the market were easily disposed of. Chrysanthemums are approaching the end of the season, and as only a few good flowers are available carnations will now receive a correspondingly increased demand. All growers of these, however, report only a fair crop and in some cases poor prospects for good flowers and not many of them for the present.

The club meeting Monday evening, December 2, was only fairly well attended. Wm. Dilger, now in charge of the park system of London, Ont., was a visitor, and interested the members by the reading of a paper on horticultural societies, and their relation to the parks and private grounds. This paper was prepared for and read before the Horticultural Society of Toronto, November 14.

Conrad Schaefer, Wabash avenue, had a boiler to give out on Thanksgiving day, but the mild weather saved him from a further loss and the quick installation of a new Capitol heater makes him feel more comfortable.

Albert Vinkler of John Breitmeyer's Sons' store, is suffering from an attack of blood poisoning which affects his right arm. He has been unable to work for the past five weeks.

SALES INCREASE.

All reports on business for Thanksgiving indicate an increase in the volume of sales. Violets and American Beauties were perhaps the best sellers for the better class of trade, while chrysanthemums, carnations and Killarney roses ran a close second. Valley was scarce all week. Orchids cleaned up and were short of the demand. Aaron Ward roses for corsage bouquets were in good demand, but the supply fell short. Calandula is again coming in and as usual meets with a good demand. Paper Whites and stevia are arriving daily, but do not sell as rapidly as they should. The public seems to want carnations, carnations; in fact, it is very seldom a good carnation is not as "good stock" as any flower grown at any time of the year. At present they are bringing a fair price with only half enough to fill orders. Richmond roses are not over plentiful, but growers are promising a good supply for Christmas and after. Chrysanthemums from now on will be less plentiful. The cut for Thanksgiving day has cleaned the houses of most growers and made room for other stock. A few, but very few, sweet peas are beginning to make their appearance. The small button chrysanthemums and pompons are about done for. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

MARKET CLEANED UP.

Thanksgiving cleaned up the market thoroughly and as a result the clearances are regular. As a whole only stock of the highest quality is coming into the market and it is bringing a price, when past prices are considered, commensurate with its value. Shipping business is very good. Roses, with the exception of the white ones, clean up regularly. The white is in very large supply and since Thanksgiving it has been selling up each day, but not with the vim of its sister roses. There has been a strong call for Richmond. American Beauties are good and are proving the best of property. The carnation supply is very short and unless it increases each bloom may be worth its weight in gold. Double violets sell nicely. The single ones are excellent and are selling at sight. Both valley and orchids clean up well, in fact, at the close of last week more might have been used. Both callas and Easter-lilies sell well. The chrysanthemum offerings include some very choice Chadwick. Stevia is offered in quantity and is finding only an ordinary market. Other flowers include narcissi, pansies and mignonette.

NOTES.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday evening at the club rooms. It was not very well attended in spite of the importance of the meeting. Judging from the report of the entertainment committee the banquet and lecture of President Richard Vincent, Jr., next Monday, December 9, at 8 p. m., at the Burnet House, will be well attended. Those who wish to go and have not their tickets can get them by applying to any wholesaler or to A. C. Heckmann, Jr., Ray Murphy or Chas. H. Hoffmeister of the committee.

On Saturday, November 30, E. G. Gillett's strenuous service as a member of the building committee of the new Price Hill Masonic Temple was ended when the edifice was formally dedicated with imposing ceremonies.

Geo. Magrie has made arrangements for his usual consignment of holly for the holidays. He promises that it will be better than ever before.

C. E. Critchell is already having a strong demand for Christmas goods, particularly crimped wire rings and artificial poinsettias.

P. J. Olinger has been cutting an elegant crop of American Beauties and Killarney roses. They are selling at sight.

The local members of the craft are truly sorry to hear of the death of Arthur Harbeson of Harrodsburg, Ky.

OBITUARY.

Charles Dingee.

Charles Dingee, founder of the well known firm of Dingee & Conard, notice of whose serious illness appeared in our Nursery Department last week, died at his residence, West Grove, Pa., November 28, in his eighty-ninth year. He was of French Huguenot parents, his father being one of the leading physicians of his day in and around Philadelphia and was a man of marked personality, while his mother was of the Welch family, closely associated with, if not a blood relation of William Penn. One brother survives, William Dingee, the designing engineer and inventor of the J. I. Case Co., for more than 40 years, who is now retired, and resides at 5811 Madison avenue, Chicago. He had one son and one daughter by his first marriage, Wm. J. Dingee, now in Paris, France, and Mrs. Benj. Price of Atlantic Highlands. By his second marriage to Miss Lynch, sister of P. J. Lynch, the well known present head and active manager of the Dingee & Conard Co., and Heller Bros. Co., New Castle, Ind., there is one daughter, Mrs. George Barnard, wife of the present mayor of New Castle. Mr. Dingee founded the Dingee & Conard Co. in 1850. For the past 15 years, he has been practically retired.

Leopold Landreth.

Leopold Landreth, of Bristol, Pa., died December 1 in the sixty-eighth year of his age. He was educated at the Pennsylvania Military Academy and at Heidelberg, Germany, and was subsequently for nearly 30 years a partner in the seed firm of David Landreth & Sons, but in 1903 he retired from the seed business, though continuing to reside at Bristol.

Isaac Husbands.

Isaac Husbands died at his home in Bellevue, O., November 23, at the age of 75 years and 7 months. He was a native of England and had resided in America since early manhood. He learned the rudiments of the flower business and landscape gardening while yet in his native country. After living in Cleveland, O., for several years Mr. Husbands returned to England where he married Miss Alice Gough, returning again to America in 1877. He was gardener for Dan P. Ellis of Cleveland for a long time but for about seventeen years had been a florist at Bellevue, until a year ago, when he sold his business to R. C. Arlin. Four children and the widow, Mr. Husbands' second wife, survive. The first Mrs. Husbands died nine years ago.

Walter Hart.

Walter Hart, a florist of Pontiac, Ill., died November 25 at the age of 79. Mr. Hart was born in England, but removed with his parents to this country when quite young. He had lived in Pontiac since 1873 and was one of the town's best known citizens. He was engaged as gardener at the state reform school for two years immediately after locating at Pontiac, but resigned to enter business for himself. The widow, four children and twelve grandchildren survive. The funeral was held at the Methodist Episcopal church Wednesday afternoon, November 27.

Charles C. Munsell.

Charles C. Munsell, a retired florist of Hartford, Conn., died November 19. He was 77 years old and had not engaged actively in business for the last six years. Mr. Munsell was a veteran of the civil war. He began the flower business as an employe of D. A. Spear, with whom he remained for 17 years, but eventually opened a store of his own and conducted it for a period of 16 years. He was a prominent member of the Lodge of Good Templars, the G. A. R. and the I. O. O. F. He leaves a daughter and two grandchildren. The funeral was held November 21.

Peter Kunst.

Peter Kunst, one of the pioneer florists of Grand Rapids, Mich., died November 26 at the age of 75. Mr. Kunst started what is now known as the Crescent Avenue Floral Co. in 1875. He was a native of the Netherlands but had made his home in Grand Rapids since 1865. Two sons, Peter and Cornelius Kunst, were associated with him in the business. He is also survived by the widow, two other sons, Louis and John Kunst, and a daughter, Mrs. Nellie Kramer.

Peter Lauch.

Peter Lauch, at one time a florist of Pittsburg, Pa., died recently, aged 82. He is survived by three sons and two daughters.

Davenport, Ia.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED.

Thanksgiving trade was quite satisfactory to all concerned with plenty of everything—with the possible exception of yellow chrysanthemums—to meet all demands. Some firms report an increase of perhaps 15 per cent over last year, while others claim about the same amount of business, with prices about the same. Chrysanthemums were, of course, first choice, yellow being in the greatest demand. Roses were plentiful, but hardly enough carnations came in. Lilies, callas, stevia, Paper Whites and Romans and violets added to the variety.

NOTES.

The weather has been quite mild and clear, and there ought to be a good crop on for Christmas. Poinsettias and azaleas at several of the establishments are coming alone fine.

The Tri-City Florists' Club was very fortunate in securing Pres. Vincent of the S. A. F. to deliver a lecture at the meeting of December 3.

CLUB'S ANNIVERSARY.

The Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary with a grand dinner at Coopers, Ltd., 103 Notre Dame street west, Friday, November 29. The large hall was beautifully decorated under the supervision of President Wm. C. Hall. A large vase of the new rose Milady, from A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., was admired by all. About two hundred sat down to a splendid menu.

Jas. McKenna, who was the first secretary, read from the old minute book which contained the early history with all the old names of members at that time, and then he called upon all the charter members to rise, of whom twelve responded, among them Jos. Bennett, Jas. McKenna, John Doyle, John Dunlop, Geo. Trussel, John Walsh, J. Perrin, Geo. Huggins, John Eddy, A. C. Wilshire, A. Meyer. President Hall reminded those present that none of them looked any older than they did 25 years ago and all should be able to attend the fiftieth jubilee when still greater strides will have been made than in the last twenty-five years. "Sister Societies" was responded to by Walter Muston for the Canadian Horticultural Association, C. A. Smith for Lachine and J. Bales for St. Lambert. John Walsh spoke for "The Ladies." Geo. Pascoe was on hand with the Victoria Rifles Band.

Jos. Bennett of Lachine, who had been the club's first president twenty-five years ago, occupied the seat of honor. Geo. A. Robinson acted as toastmaster, a place he ably filled. A large bunch of telegrams of congratulations, and regrets at not being able to be present, from friends, were read by Mr. Hall. Among those present were: Walter Muston, president Canadian Horticultural Association; Herman Simmers, Toronto; H. B. Cowan, Peterboro; the professor of horticulture at Macdonald College; president of Lachine Horticultural Society; secretary of St. Lambert and secretary of St. Anne's Societies; Chairman R. Burrows of the Montreal Horticultural Society. The ladies had for the first time been included in the invitations to a club dinner and were there in great numbers, and in future ladies will be included in all the club's festivals.

The first toast, "The King," was heartily joined by all singing "God Save the King." "Canada" was replied to by Herman Simmers and H. B. Cowan. Responding to "The Club" Jos. Bennett gave a glimpse of conditions just before its formation and recounted the incidents which led to its organization. This was the first club in Canada, but shortly afterwards several others were formed. L.

TRADE IS BRISK.

Thanksgiving business was very fine with a shortage of stock but with all orders pretty well filled. Carnations were very scarce in this market and the scarcity will continue unless bright weather sets in to help them along for the holidays. Roses are also scarce and bring good prices, with the greater demand being for yellow. American Beauties are also scarce but those that do come in are of a fine quality. Sweet peas are making their appearance but not in quantity. Lily of the valley is arriving in fine condition in sufficient quantity to supply the demand. Chrysanthemums are practically out of the market and there is also a scarcity of Easter lilies. Violets are still in quantity as well as in demand and there are plenty of greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

C. C. Pollworth and wife shot a large doe on their hunting trip in the Iron County woods. Mr. Pollworth gave a venison dinner on December 30 to the officers and directors of the Calumet Club of which he is a member.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is well pleased with Thanksgiving business. This firm is beginning to cut rather heavily from their carnations and expect to have a fine lot for Christmas.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports having had a very fine Thanksgiving trade. This firm is cutting some fine chrysanthemums which sell readily.

Gust. Rusch & Co. say they had an exceptionally fine Thanksgiving trade both in the city and shipping departments.

Theo. Boettcher is cutting some exceptionally fine mignonette which finds ready sale on the local market.

The Currie Bros. Co. report Thanksgiving better than ever with the entire force kept busy continually.

Nic Zweifel had quite a cut of carnations for Thanksgiving and all of a very fine quality.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. recently increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $125,000.

Walter H. Hummel & Co. contemplate opening a retail store shortly.

PROSPEROUS OUTLOOK.

The business outlook in St. Paul and Minneapolis is good with continued prosperity apparently certain. The month of December will probably prove bigger in a business way than at any other time in the history of the flower trade, both for grower and retailer. People are buying luxuries and higher priced goods than in several years, which would indicate that there is general prosperity not only in this section but all over the country. Taken as a whole, this year is better than last. Indications point to the prospects of a bigger year next year than this. All claim to be running away ahead of last year at the present time, and have been during all this month. The empty ice boxes showed how successful the Thanksgiving business was.

MARKET CLEANS UP WELL.

Thanksgiving Day was from all accounts satisfactory to wholesalers and retailers alike. There were a great many chrysanthemums on the market and a fair supply of roses and violets were cleaned up at good prices. Carnations were scarce, but there was not much of a call for them. Chrysanthemums, American Beauty roses and violets seemed to have the call. There was a good supply of all greens. Lily of the valley had a very good sale.

NOTES.

We regret to announce an accident to Frank Filmore, Sr., last Wednesday. The old gentleman, who is 88 years of age, slipped over a mat and broke his leg. It is feared that because of his advanced age recovery is impossible.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. had a fine stock of chrysanthemums, roses and lily of the valley, also some extra fine lilies. This firm has added an automobile to its delivery service.

The Metropolitan Floral Co. reports splendid trade.

"Baby" Christmas Trees (SPRUCE)

A FEW years ago we introduced these beautiful miniature trees to the trade, and the supply each season has not equaled the demand. They are almost perfect in shape and in various heights of from 18 inches to 42 inches, with a spread of 12 inches to 42 inches. The base is firmly attached to a round block of selected white birch about 5 inches in diameter, and they are not only desirable for table decoration, but likewise suited for basket and other artistic work. We have arranged for an increasing number for the coming season, but urge early purchase for shipment as wanted.

THANKSGIVING TRADE.

The Thanksgiving trade this year with most of the wholesalers was very good and in nearly all cases reported much better than that of last year. One large dealer said that in former years the Thanksgiving sales did not equal more than those of a good Saturday but that this year they were extremely large and exceeded all expectations. The supply of roses and carnations was far too short and was sold at an early hour. Long stemmed American Beauty roses were scarce and in some instances the extra fancy flowers sold for as high as $6 per dozen, but the majority of the specials brought $5. The supply of short American Beauty roses was more plentiful but the quality of these flowers was none too good. White roses were very conspicuous but cleaned up well after the supply of colored ones was sold. Killarney in a great many cases was decidedly off color but even at that they were bought up quickly. Richmond sold well and the quality of the stock that was offered was very good. Roses in general had a good call and there was no surplus stock in sight when the day's sales were over. Last year the supply of carnations for Thanksgiving was large and the stock sold at low prices; this year it was just the opposite and anything that looked like a carnation was quickly sold. The red sold first and many sales for the extra select stock were reported at $5 per 100. The average price, however, for carnations of good quality was about $3 and $4 per 100. The supply of chrysanthemums as last year was large and there were plenty of these flowers to go around. The varieties to be seen in largest quantities were W. H. Chadwick, Golden Chadwick, Timothy Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Mayor Bonnaffon, White Bonnaffon, Nagoya, Dr. Enguehard, besides a fair supply of a few other late varieties. Pompons and anemones were also to be had in large quantities but had a very good call. The best chrysanthemums were sold for $3 per dozen and $20 per 100, although much inferior stock sold for less. Last year, generally speaking, the late chrysanthemums averaged better prices, but this year it was the early varieties that commanded the high prices. The supply of lily of the valley was short and the demand was very brisk. The demand for violets for Thanksgiving was not as good as former years and this stands good for the entire season. Orchids, especially cattleyas, sold well and the better flowers sold for about $6 to $7.50 per dozen. Gardenias were in fairly good supply but sold quickly at prices ranging from $2 to $4 per dozen. Sweet peas were none too plentiful but Paper White narcissi were seen in abundant supply at several houses. Mignonne and stevia, especially the latter, were very plentiful and had very little call. Greens were plentiful and no shortage of any kind was reported. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were the big days, but the market was quite brisk on Thanksgiving morning. The retail stores did not do much business until the afternoon of the day before Thanksgiving, which was quite unusual compared to former years. The day after Thanksgiving stock was very scarce and commanded better prices than it did the day before. Trade was very good the latter part of last week and continued so until Tuesday, December 3, when business fell off considerably. There is not much stock in the market however and a few large orders would clean it up quickly. White roses are the most plentiful and lilies are very scarce. Carnations are still bringing fancy prices with very little stock obtainable.

The Florists' Club has been unable to secure a hall sufficiently large for the next regular meeting at the old quarters and will meet in the crystal room of the Hotel Sherman December 5, at 7:30 p. m., when the election of officers will be held. The lecture by Richard Vincent, Jr., which the ladies are invited to attend, will start at 9 o'clock. The ladies' waiting room will be found on the same floor as the crystal room.

S. A. Jamieson, with the Universal Portland Cement Co., will resign his position on January 1, 1913, to accept a position with the Geo. M. Garland Co. of Des Plaines. Mr. Jamieson will represent the Garland company in the Northwest and will open a branch office at either St. Paul or Minneapolis, Minn.

Stollery Bros., the Wilson avenue florists, had a Boston fern sale at their store last week, when a large number of surplus plants were moved at a reduction in price of 25 per cent. This firm is building up a large trade and their neatly arranged window is always a good advertisement.

Peter Reinberg had a big supply of roses for Thanksgiving which enabled Tim Matchem to fill all his orders in full. The stock is still arriving in large quantities and the outlook for a big supply for the holidays is very encouraging.

Chas. W. McKellar has received a letter from Paul M. Palez, with Vestals, Little Rock, Ark., in which the writer states that he will again be a candidate for alderman on the democratic ticket.

There was a meeting of the experiment station floricultural advisory committee at Urbana, December 3, to consider plans for the future development of the greenhouse plant.

Vaughan's Seed Store has arranged a special bouquet green and holly warehouse and shipping department for Christmas greens on the West Randolph market.

Joseph Foerster says that the Thanksgiving trade at Kyle & Foerster's store was very satisfactory and was beyond his expectations.

John Kruchten had such a big demand for his fancy grown gardenias for Thanksgiving that he was unable to fill all of his orders.

At Hoerber Bros' store roses and carnations are again the principal offerings now that the chrysanthemum season is nearly over.

Winterson's Seed Store is again on deck with a large supply of baby Christmas trees and is now busy booking orders for them.

Miss Mae McAdams, who is now attending the University of Illinois, spent Thanksgiving day here with her father, Andrew McAdams.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is supplying its trade with choice Paper White narcissi and local grown double violets.

John Michelsen, with the E. C. Ameling Co., says that violets did not average as good this season as last year.

Frank Pisternick, formerly buyer for the Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co., is now with Canger & Bergmann.

Percy Jones was well pleased with his Thanksgiving business, which was one of the best ever.

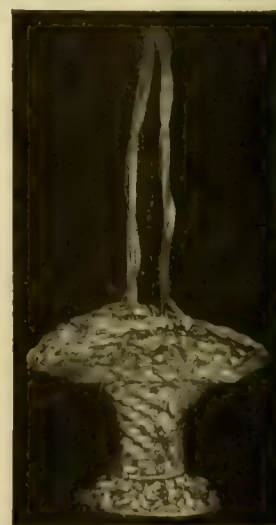

August Jurgens returned on December 1 from a delightful visit to Mississippi and Alabama.

Ed. Armstrong, formerly with A. Lange, has entered the employ of the Geo. Witthold Co.

Weiland & Risch had their share of the Thanksgiving trade and sold out at an early hour.

The A. L. Randall Co.'s supply department is busy filling holiday orders. Erne & Klingel find trade as brisk after Thanksgiving as they did before.

Bassett & Washburn have received word from George Mount, the well known florist of Canterbury, England, that he was just elected mayor of that city. It will be remembered by many that Mr. Mount and his son Percy visited this city recently on their tour of this continent. Bassett & Washburn cut their last chrysanthemums this week, but these were followed by a new crop of American Beauty roses which are now demanding the attention of the store help.

A testimonial dinner was given by the friends of Joseph A. Mendel on the occasion of his retirement as a member of the board of Cook County Commissioners last Monday, December 2, at the Bohemian American Hall. The hall was artistically decorated for the occasion during which Mr. Mendel was presented with a beautiful diamond ring of much value. The trade was represented by Joseph Ziska and his sons, John Ziska and Joseph Ziska, Jr.

Edw. L. Martin and Henry Gabel left this week to book orders among the out-of-town growers for the Chicago Carnation Co.'s new scarlet carnation, the Herald. A. T. Pyfer is going to give a free excursion to his firm's greenhouses at Joliet soon when an invitation will be extended to all of the local growers to see this variety growing.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association will feature cut poinsettias for Christmas as well as a full line of all other seasonable flowers and greens. The directors of this organization held a meeting at the store on December 4 when the usual business was transacted.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. was obliged to call in several of the men from the greenhouses at Morton Grove last week to assist the regular store force with the Thanksgiving trade. Business was very good at this house and much better than was expected. The plant department at Morton Grove announces the arrival of a large importation of roses for Easter forcing.

Phil Schupp is pretty busy these days looking after both the J. A. Budlong store and greenhouses during A. H. Budlong's absence. Wm. Homberg, his right hand store man, is a valuable assistant and keeps things humming while he is at the range.

Wietor Bros. are featuring a fine grade of American Beauties in addition to a large supply of roses and carnations. N. J. Wietor says that his firm's crops are going to be right for Christmas and that their supply will be larger than that of last year.

E. E. Pieser says that there was only about five per cent difference in Kennicott Bros. Co.'s sales of the day before Thanksgiving and the Saturday following. Of course this is due to the increase in prices which followed the holiday.

Zech & Mann are filling orders for fancy lilies this week, which are somewhat scarce. Mr. Zech says that trade is very good and that there does not seem to be any let-up at all.

Captain Scheunemann of the Christmas tree and greens schooner Rouse Simmons is reported lost in lake storm with crew of seventeen.

Robert Groves, the well known fern dealer of Adams, Mass., was a visitor on November 25, leaving the day following for Cincinnati.

Robert Northam says that Thanksgiving at George Reinberg's store in former years was only equal to a good Saturday, but that this year it was more like one of the big holidays.

Miss Gunterberg injured her left thumb quite severely one day this week while she was closing the door of her safe.

YOU know that it's the customers that come back and buy again that count. Satisfied customers are the ones who come back and keep coming back.

Just for example—there's Mr. Willig of Poughkeepsie—It was along in 1900 that he bought his first Iron Frame house of us—one 28x250 feet. Ever since then he has been replacing his old wooden ones and expanding his range until he has over 30,000 feet.

Every foot of them is Hitchings' construction. Starting in a small way, as he did, he of course did not plan for a large central power plant, but kept adding boilers until now he has seven Hitchings' boilers, five of which are the new model sectionals. We could name you, off hand, dozens of men just like Mr.

Willig, whom we have built for year after year. It is the strongest argument any up-to-date builder can put up, that their houses are the houses to build. We will have a new construction to announce very soon.

New York.

BUSINESS MUCH BETTER.

Thanksgiving business was good and for the remainder of the week the wholesale market was in better condition than at any time this autumn. It is true that stock was not completely cleaned up, but the Thanksgiving trade went far toward the finish of the chrysanthemums and the supply suddenly waned. On November 29 and 30 few good chrysanthemums were on the market and while some scattering lots are yet likely to arrive, it seems impossible that they can longer continue to be leading factors. Noteworthy incidents of the trade were the "spurts" in the prices of carnations and lily of the valley, both of which practically doubled in price and are still keeping well up. For such carnations as Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward five and six cents was the ruling Thanksgiving price, this, of course, being for exceptionally long stemmed stock of these excellent varieties. Short stemmed stock went readily at three and four cents. The best lily of the valley sold for five and six cents, possibly some extra fine lots went higher. On Saturday, November 30, the market was nearer to a scarcity than it has been for a long time and some of the buyers roamed the wholesale district nearly all day. It touches the sensibilities of the seasoned buyer to have prices go up with a bound. However, present indications point to higher prices from now on till Christmas, which is but reasonable to expect, as there has been a long season of leanness. In roses there is some excellent stock of American Beauties on the market and prices have advanced. The tea roses are also doing better. Mixing stock, such as stevia and Paper White narcissus is plentiful. Violets are doing better and have crawled up to 75 cents a hundred, a few specials having sold for $1 a hundred. There is also an upward tendency in orchids.

Monday, December 2.—There is an average supply of stock on the market this week but no surplus. Prices are keeping up to about what they were at Thanksgiving. The demand for special stock is lighter than for the medium grades. Weather, cloudy but mild.

NOTES.

Reports have reached this city that Miss Emily Pierson, daughter of A. N. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., was painfully injured December 1 in a wreck on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Willimantic, Conn. She was badly cut about the head and face by flying glass and one of her hands was also badly cut. It was at first reported that Miss Pierson, who is a beautiful woman, was disfigured for life, but later advices indicate that she will completely recover and escape with a few scars. Miss Pierson is a philanthropic woman and an eloquent speaker, is a champion of woman suffrage and has labored to ameliorate the condition of working girls.

One of the most elaborate dinner decorations seen in this city this season was arranged by J. H. Small & Sons at the Waldorf-Astoria November 30. It was for the St. Andrew's Society in celebration of its one hundred and fifty-sixth anniversary. The decoration was a beautiful display of heather, so dear to the hearts of all Scotchmen. Six hundred members and guests gathered round the festal board, among them Andrew Carnegie. The pipers skirled and there were speeches by Ambassador Bryce, Dr. Henry Van Dyke and others.

The Warendorf Bros. store in the Ansonia Hotel is among the handsome stores of upper Broadway and is always doing business. It is at the Ansonia that their venerable mother makes her home and her four score years do not deter her from active interest in the business. Another of their stores is at Madison avenue and Fifty-ninth street, it being managed by one of the brothers. During the past week this store was very busy with a number of wedding decorations.

Reed & Keller's factory and florists' supply store, 122 West Twenty-fifth street, is now a very busy place. Mr. Reed, it will be remembered, is the inventor of some of the most useful appliances in the supply business and their business with jobs all over the country is simply immense. Mr. Keller is always active in pushing their local trade.

General Manager Joseph Millang of the New York Cut Flower Co. is feeling cheerful over the quality of roses that come in from the Scarborough and Briarcliffe ranges, and the carnations from the Cottage Gardens. The way they clean up makes him positively happy.

The store of Thos. Young, Jr., is always beautiful with the finest stock in the market. We recently noted an exceptionally fine window display of orchids here. His gardenias, grown at his Bound Brook, N. J., range, are praiseworthy features.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co., 62 Vesey street, continues to dispose of, at auction, great quantities of boxwood, conifers, rose bushes, bulbs, etc. R. MacNiff is the auctioneer, and it is needless to add that he can picture the merits of the stock in eloquent language.

Alfred Kotmiller, who recently opened a retail store on Madison avenue, is showing unique and artistic window decorations, one of his latest efforts being along the line of the old-fashioned bouquet.

Moore, Hentz & Nash have been handling during the past week exceptionally fine American Beauty roses from the Bedford Flower Co., Bedford Hills, N. Y., and from Henry Hentz, Jr., Madison, N. J.

Though chrysanthemums of the show varieties are growing scarce, Philip F. Kessler of the Coogan Building has during the past week been handling very fine stock. Good stock is Phil's hobby.

The feature of Thorley's House of Flowers during the past week was the grand display of heather in the large show windows which was finely contrasted by large hanging baskets of foliage plants.

Thos. Barker, who with his brother has growing interests at Morristown, N. J., has associated himself with Siebrecht & Siebrecht in the wholesale business at 136 West Twenty-eighth street.

At Alexander McConnell's they have had a very busy week. The Thanksgiving business was heavy and decorations for weddings and other social affairs made a rush of work.

There is no doubt that from now on to Christmas the plant trade will loom large, for the growers and dealers have the finest collection of plants ever seen in this city and vicinity.

Chas. F. Lawrence, a young man well known in the retail trade, has opened a store at 344 Columbus avenue, near the American Museum of Natural History.

Charles Millang varies the monotony of selling flowers by occasionally selling an automobile. He recently sold a fine delivery car to the Colonial Florists.

A feature of the carnation trade is the fine Mrs. C. W. Wards which M. C. Ford is receiving from the Henry Hession range, Flatbush, N. Y.

There has been great activity at the store of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. during the past week and much fine stock has been disposed of. A. F. F.

NOVEMBER CLOSES WELL.

The last week in November was full of life and activity. Large quantities of flowers of all kinds were in such demand that in some lines the supply was not sufficient to go around. This was the case particularly with the various yellow roses. Bulgaria or Mrs. Taft also sold up every day. Carnations have shortened up, or the demand is better, for very little loose stock is seen in the commission houses. Any jar of good stock generally has a paper in the pot marked sold. Chrysanthemums were large in both supply and demand. The quality of the stock was excellent and good prices were realized for all grades. Bonnaffon, Yellow Chadwick, Yellow Eaton and Golden Eagle were the best yellows. Jennie Nonin, Lynwood Hall, Jerome Jones were the whites, with Maud Dean and the huge Rosetta the leaders in pink. The late pompons sold very well. The chrysanthemum men say this has been one of their best seasons. The violet has also been a factor and large quantities of both double and single were sold. Two foot-ball games, the Cornell-Pennsylvania contest on Thanksgiving Day, and the Army-Navy game on Saturday, made large demands for corsage bunches of violets. Gardenias are about equal to the demand. The higher grades are fine. Cattleyas are scarce and command high prices, although the growers say better figures were obtained at this time last season. THANKSGIVING TRADE GOOD.

Fall weather in all its variations has been the popular thing in Buffalo the past week. Trade for Thanksgiving was as a whole good and the supply of stock plentiful with the exception of carnations. Chrysanthemums, always depended upon to last until Thanksgiving, were plentiful but the quality not up to the standard, the unusually warm month hastening the end. Roses were plentiful and brought good prices for the day. There were not as many receptions and dances for the young lady and gentleman from college as in former years. The state teachers' convention also had a tendency to lessen the festivities as it was in session for three days and took up the time of many.

NOTES.

The smoke of election is just clearing and the first sign visible to the eye is for Mayor, Wm. F. Kasting. To say that it is not meeting with approval would be false. It will be hard to beat him.

The wholesalers upon whom the city depends for Christmas stock are well satisfied with the goods they will sell, and have no fear but that all in Buffalo will be well cared for.

Department stores are decorating for Christmas, which gives some florists large orders for laurel, the only green allowed by the fire underwriters for interior work.

Autumn foliage in the arrangement of chrysanthemums was quite generally used this year and was a much appreciated change from ferns and asparagus.

Miss Lindsay, bookkeeper at S. A. Anderson's, was called to her home at Fergus, Ont., last week on account of the death of her mother.

George Cramer is again at S. A. Anderson's.

BISON.

Decatur, Ill.

The growers have been active in building operations here this fall. John N. Bommersbach has just finished up three houses, containing in all 15,000 square feet of glass, and has installed a No. 6 Kroeschell hot water boiler, using three in cross connection for heating the entire range of 60,000 square feet.

The estate of Albert Bommersbach has just completed the erection of three houses totalling 15,000 square feet and has installed a steam heating system for the entire plant of 30,000 feet.

C. W. Harrod has built a greenhouse with a glass surface of 1,000 square feet.

BAD AXE, MICH.—G. M. Deady and son Alfred will build a greenhouse here next spring. Alfred Deady is now taking a course in floriculture.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

J. M. THORBURN & Co.'s preliminary trade price list is out this week.

CHICAGO railroads are in some cases demanding prepayment on evergreen and holly freight shipments.

LEOPOLD LANDRETH, formerly of the firm of David Landreth & Sons, died at Bristol, Pa., December 1, in his sixty-eighth year.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—Otto Bofinger, manager of the Lawrence, Kans., branch of the Barteldes Seed Co., has succeeded J. F. Hickey as manager of the local office.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.; J. W. Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose, Calif.; Theo. Cobb, representing D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; A. T. Ferrell, Saginaw, Mich.; J. M. Kimberlin, of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Calif.; A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.; Ernest O. Pieper, manager of the Braslan Seed Growers Co., San Jose, Calif.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, December 4, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3.25 to $4.25 per 100 pounds. Onion sets in storage have not improved during the continued mild weather. Some cases of sprouting are reported.—S. F. and J. C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., and Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., are attending the Wisconsin canners' convention at Milwaukee this week.

President Page Takes Vacation.

Owing to his rather poor health recently, President Chas. N. Page of the American Seed Trade Association, has just started for California to be gone about six weeks. He will visit the seed growers in the Sacramento, Santa Clara, Arroyo Grande, and Ventura districts, where they are now planting onion, beet, carrot and other roots for seed production, ending his trip at San Diego, where he will spend the holidays with Mrs. Page and three children who are staying there this winter. He expects to return to Des Moines, Ia., about January 12 to 15.

Congressional Seeds For Next Year.

In connection with congressional vegetable and flower seeds, according to Secretary Wilson, of the department of Agriculture, in his annual report just received, there has been a steady improvement in the quality distributed, and that this has been appreciated is shown by the increased demand for them. That part of the congressional seed distribution covering vegetables and flowers for 1912-13 will require about 600 tons of material. These seeds will all be assembled, packeted and distributed by the first of April, 1913. In round numbers, about 61,000,000 packets will be put up and mailed. In addition, there will be special sets of cotton seed and special sets of seed adapted to dry farming.

Parcel Post.

President Page of the American Seed Trade Association writes as follows regarding the parcels post decision of the postmaster general:

"Seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants will be permitted in the parcels post mails, under regulations as to size and weight applicable to other parcels post packages, but at the rate of postage of one cent for two ounces or fraction thereof, regardless of distance.

"It will therefore be noticed that the decision is against us as to rate, but still seedsmen are permitted to send packages weighing as high as 11 pounds. There seems to be some question as to whether ordinary postage stamps, or the new distinctive stamps will be permitted on such parcels of seeds.

"This law should be corrected in such a way as to give horticulturists the option of using the parcels post rates if they so desire."

The Seed Importation Act.

The Secretary of Agriculture has designated Tuesday, December 10, 1912, as the date for a hearing on the rules and regulations to be promulgated by him for the enforcement of "An Act to regulate foreign commerce by prohibiting the admission into the United States of certain adulterated grain and seeds unfit for seeding purposes." The hearing will be held at ten o'clock a. m. in the office of the chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

Frost Protection.

On an extensive truck farm the protection of crops against frost in the fall is a serious problem. It entails much labor and also skill as under our variable climate it is as easy to err one way as the other. A little too early or too much covering may mean as complete a loss by heating as insufficient protection would mean by freezing. When we realize that we operate under a possible range of temperature of from 70° above to 25° below zero, of various durations, and coupled with all kinds of degrees of moisture, also high winds, the task cannot be considered easy. It requires the closest attention, study and timely preparation; in fact, preparation is half the battle; we must be ready with every aid at a moment's notice.

We carry operations well into the winter as markets are better then than during the gluts of summer. Thus we carry the following crops: celery, cabbage, brussels sprouts, spinach, parsnips, salsify, carrots, beets, turnips, green onions, head lettuce, endive, Scarlet Globe radishes, dry onions and squashes. We employ every kind of storage from the cellar, cold frame and trench to covering with earth, hay, cloth or corn fodder. Large amounts of horse manure are used; this we pile to induce heating and use it then as it becomes more pliable and packs closer. For complete protection against severe cold there is nothing better than alternate layers of such manure and earth. Much depends upon the evenness and thoroughness of the work done. We have seen 2 inches of manure, 2 inches of earth, another 2 inches of manure and again an inch of earth resist zero weather for a month. To be successful in this work we must understand the nature of the crop, the length of protection desired, the time of the year and the probable weather.

Early in the fall there is a great deal of heat in the ground which is a big factor. This heat is gradually lost, hence we must calculate accordingly. Some crops like spinach will stand severe cold if quiet, while others, like bleached celery, head lettuce and endive, are easily revived. These latter three will survive hard freezes when green, but after bleaching commences they become tender and are easily lost. When sash is used on cold frames we must bear in mind that glass is a conductor and a cold night will penetrate deeply if the glass is exposed. However, every little aid by hay, litter or canvas is a big help.

Ventilation is often neglected. Crops covered with cloth, hay or corn fodder, receive automatic ventilation as the air will penetrate these, although slowly; while with sash, boards and earth cover we must arrange for air. On trenched celery we have for some years used a porous roof made from corn fodder and straw most successfully, using the boards only in times of rain. Such a roof permits a constant change of air yet keeps out the cold.

Spinach is ruined by driving winds at a low temperature if not covered with snow. Anything that will intercept the wind is a help. We use corn fodder and lima bean vines extensively, as any tight material like manure will surely smother the crop. We make it a practice to investigate and test everything frequently, often daily, so as to be thoroughly posted in regard to conditions, and attention is given at night if needed. We cannot afford to raise a fine crop of celery and ruin them in one night for the lack of a little covering.

No profit is made on Azaleas any more; therefore only cash with order will be accepted.

Ferns.

Our Ferns Are All Pot-Grown.

The growing of Nephrolepis for the past five years has been one of our leading specialties. We have three houses, which were rebuilt this summer, especially adapted for the growing of first-class stock. Ferns do not do well in old houses. They need houses with plenty of sun and good, fresh, sweet air. Old, dark houses bring fungus and make spindly plants.

Neph. Giatrasii. This is a new fern, very graceful, of weeping habit, short and bushy, very much admired by every one who has bought it. 4-5 1/2-6 in. pots, 25c, 35c, 40c and 50c.

Neph. Whitmani, 4-in., 20c; 5 1/2 to 6-in. pots, 30c, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in., 75c.

Neph. Scottii, 4-in., 20c; 5-in., 35c; 5 1/2 to 6-in., 40c to 50c; 7-in., 75c.

Boston, 7-in., as big as a washtub, $1.00, worth $1.50; 5 1/2 to 6-in., 40c to 50c; 5-in., 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Neph. Elegantissima Compacta, 6-in., 50c.

Neph. Scholzei, 7-in., as big as a bushel basket, $1.00; 6-in., 50c; 4-in., 25c.

Adiantum Hybridum, the new Maidenhair Fern, large 4-in. bushy, 15c; 5-in., 25c.

Cyr. Falcatum or Holly Fern. Everybody looks for Holly Ferns at Christmas. We have large 4-in., 20c to 30c.

6-in. pans (azalea pots), made up of three large Boston Ferns, now very bushy, 35c, 40c to 50c per pan.

We have a big assortment of 2 1/2-in. Dish Ferns, now ready, $4.00 per 100; 3-in., $7.00 per 100.

6-in. pans made up of 3 in. Wilsoni Ferns, very attractive, would sell like hot cakes for 75c. Look! only 25c per pan for three big plants.

Asparagus Plumosus and Sprengeri, large 4-in., $10.00 per 100 (or 10c).

Asparagus Plumosus, 2 1/4-in., $3.00 per 100; 5 1/2-in., made up of three 4 in., 15 in. high six weeks ago, 35c to 40c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2 1/2-in., $3.00 per 100.

Ficus Elastica, Belgium or American stock, 5 1/2-in., 30c, 35c to 40c; 6-in., 50c; 7-in., 75c.

Aspidistras, variegated, 6-in. pots, 15c per leaf; green, 6-in. pots, 10c per leaf. Plants have from 5 good leaves upward to 10 leaves.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

We have a house full and wish to sell them.

This is another great specialty of ours. We have grown them very extensively for the past twenty years. Our special treatment makes the flowers very bright. We have the Bright Red and the Pink Lonsdale. Have a houseful. Now ready, in bloom for Christmas. 6-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00; 3-in. pots, 12c to 15c; 5 to 5 1/2-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. We are always short of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Please order in time.

Our usual Christmas strain of Begonia Improved Erfordi are now ready; large 4-in., 15c to 20c.

We also have the finest Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, in bloom, 5 1/2 to 6-in. pots, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 4-in. pots, 35c to 40c.

An Araucaria Excelsa from Belgium, when trimmed for the Christmas table or for the parlor, is a substitute for a Christmas tree that has no equal. Always green, makes no dirt, never drops its foliage, and can be kept in the parlor as an ornamental plant for years. Can also be used for the next Christmas.

Araucarias Our Specialty.

6,000 at hand, all sizes.

Christmas trees are scarce this year. I know of a good substitute. Just look at the picture! Doesn't it look nice? It is an Araucaria Excelsa in Christmas attire, imported from Belgium, taken out of Godfrey Aschmann's Araucaria House—a beauty. Its everlasting green branches certainly will amaze and amuse the dear little ones, as well as every member of the family. It will take up less room than a Christmas tree, and will also serve two purposes: First, at the Christmas table; second, as an ornamental plant for the parlor it has no equal. It is a much better keeper than palms or any other plant. We are well prepared; have many thousands of them, the choicest stock Belgium could furnish us, and will be able to supply all wants in all sizes and prices. 5, 5 1/2, 6 and 7 in. pots 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 12-14-16-18-20-25-30 40-50 in. high. Prices reduced one half. 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Robusta Compacta, April, 1911, importation, 6-7 in. pots, fine bushy plants, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 each.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

THE executive committee of the American Association of Nurserymen announces that the next annual convention will be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

CHARLES DINGEE, founder of the well known firm of Dingee & Conard, West Grove, Pa., whose serious illness was noted in this column last week, died November 28, at his residence. An extended notice of Mr. Dingee will be found in our obituary column elsewhere in this issue.

The Sugar Maple.

From the time the earliest explorers discovered Indians making sugar from the maple tree until the present day, the production of maple sugar has been an important industry in the United States, is the interesting information contained in Farmers' Bulletin 516 soon to be issued by Secretary Wilson. The industry is purely American, Canada being the only country outside of the United States that produces the product. The bulletin says:

"Maple sugar and maple sirup are considered delicacies and are not produced in such quantities as formerly. The aggregate of all pure maple products and the many imitations may be the same, for it is said that were all the maple trees cut down, and thus the supply of maple sap cut off, no drop in the quantity of sirup or sugar would be noted. Within the last six or seven years there has been a renewed tendency toward the production of a better grade of maple products.

"Maple sirup or maple sugar prepared by the best methods is a light-colored, pleasant-tasting product. Contrary characteristics are the result of uncleanly methods and possibly sour sap in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, and were manufacturers to take greater care in their methods their results would show improvements. This better grade may not appeal to many people who have been accustomed to the dark, stronger grades."

In relation to the present growth of the sugar maple the bulletin states:

"Within its wide range the sugar maple appears as a precomitant tree only in the New England states, New York, southern Canada, northern and western Pennsylvania, and in parts of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota. In the southern Appalachians it occurs in scattered bodies where climate conditions are similar to those of the North. In the extreme northern part of New York state and the adjacent district of Quebec the forest growth is often almost pure maple, and even considerably further south, where beech and birch become associate trees, the sugar maple holds its own as the dominant species. In northern Pennsylvania, at an altitude of over 1,000 feet, the mixture is much the same as it is in New York. In Ohio, Indiana and Illinois a similar condition is found; but as the hilly country disappears the maple retreats to the richer and damper soils leaving great areas to the oaks and chestnuts."

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink — a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

Give Your Plants All the Sun.

You can do so by simply using the Sunlight Double-Glass Sashes on your hot-beds and cold-frames. A $\frac{3}{8}$ inch layer of dry air between the layers of glass affords ample protection. No mats or other covering ever needed.

They let in all the light and all the heat that the sun's rays carry. But they never permit the stored heat to escape or the outside cold to enter.

With these sash half the labor and cost are saved; and far better and earlier plants secured. They give you flowers and vegetables when they are luxuries.

Many Thousands Giving Perfect Service.

This is the U-Bar, the bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

At a glance that's apparent. The reason is, the U-Bar. To put it another way; you can put a gold plated harness on a heavy draft horse and hitch him to a swell little runabout—but with all his trappings he ambles along draft horse fashion just the same. So by the same token, putting a curved eave on a greenhouse does not make it a U-Bar curved eave house. It only looks something like it from the outside. A U-Bar house is distinctly different and it's the U-Bar that makes it so. Send for a catalogue and find out just why.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

Wreaths.

With the cheaper grades of Christmas wreaths it is much better to purchase them of the dealers than to attempt to manufacture them, for they are made where the material is plenty and by cheap labor that learn to handle them very rapidly, but the better wreaths the dealer can arrange himself and make a finer article and also introduce features that are not found elsewhere. A few sprays of holly or bunches of winterberries and red immortelles will often brighten up a green wreath and make it attractive.
The wreaths of pine, with the cones worked into them, are particularly pleasing and always attract attention when shown. A good supply of holly-ribbons is a necessity at this season, and the wreaths displayed should have a nice bow of this tied on them to show the customer how these Christmas offerings are to be used.
These small details are all of great assistance to the sale at this time and are all carefully attended to by up-to-date dealers.

Plant Baskets.

The presentation to the prospective buyer of plants in baskets or boxes has become a prominent feature of the trade at both Christmas and Easter and a great many of these are arranged and sold by the large stores.
Occasionally the report is made that the call for these is not so large as formerly, but invariably this is caused by the dealer not accurately feeling the demands of his trade. It is not every store that will have a trade that purchases the high cost assortments, but baskets of all sizes and shapes can be obtained and small boxes are easily and cheaply made, and these covered with bark are nicely adapted to this work and are really inexpensive. The baskets of willow can be purchased at a moderate price, and these can be filled with cheaper plants for those that do not want to make expensive presents. With a trade that ordinarily does not pay more than two or three dollars for a plant, a ten or fifteen-dollar basket is altogether too expensive to offer them at first. This trade must be educated to these nice gifts by first inducing them to buy some at not so high a figure. They will greatly admire these more costly arrangements, but will have to be shown that plants in this form are satisfactory, and will first buy something cheaper. Nice boxes and baskets can be put up at the same prices that they have been in the custom of buying, and when they prove satisfactory larger and more expensive offerings will be purchased.

Many growers and dealers use their specimen plants for their boxes and baskets, which makes them expensive, but this is unnecessary. There are always in every grower's collection many plants that are one-sided in their growth, lose many of their leaves, or in some other way are far from being plants that can be called specimens and would not find sale, and these can be put in the baskets with the best side out or with a few small ferns to cover up the blemishes and sold. By so doing what would in all probability be thrown away, or at any rate be a loss, can be made to turn the balance in the right way. The plants in these arrangements are always set very close and this helps to cover up any deficiency that the plant has.

Baskets are now offered by the manufacturers with tins to conform to the baskets, and in these the plants can be set, and with proper care they will make a splendid ornament for the home that will last a long time. The arrangement of the plants, especially in regard to the colors, should be carefully studied. The reds will, of course, be the most in demand. Poinsettias make a nice basket offering in themselves, but with the exception of those who have wealthy customers the basket or box should not be made too expensive, for these plants do not last any great length of time. A beautiful effect in red can be obtained by filling the basket with decorative plants and placing among them nicely berried sprays of winterberries. In the arrangements containing the different plants bearing pink flowers, it is necessary to use judgment in the selection of colors or they may clash. The cerise neither harmonizes nor contrasts well with any of the bright colors, white only being permissible with this shade. The plants with variegated foliage should also be used with care. It is not well to use too many in one basket, but to have plenty of green decorative plants to set them off.

Many beautiful effects may be produced by the proper assembling of the Christmas plants in these offerings to the trade. While these are made up in most cases of the more expensive plants and intended for the wealthier class of people, yet by the application of good judgment very beautiful arrangements can be put up with the cheaper plants.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Retailing Cut Flowers by the Box.

There are without doubt more boxes of cut flowers sold and delivered by the retail florist than any other of the many things he makes up or carries in stock. The order may come by mail, or over the phone, or it may be left personally by the customer, who desires to select the flowers or at least see the stock from which the order will be made up. The selection of flowers for such an order should always be made by a competent person so that justice may be done the customer and at the same time the house may be insured the necessary profit. The well meaning but thoughtless ema strip of cotton at one end. This is cut the width of the box and being only fastened at one end of the strip it is brought up between the ends of the flowers and the box and acts as a sort of cushion to protect the flowers. A little wad of wax or tissue paper is often placed at one end. This also acts as a cushion and raises the flowers—which would otherwise lie on the bottom—so that they are more readily seen.

Plenty of wax paper, projecting well over the edges and ends of the box, should be used as a lining and then it is ready for the flowers. There is one thing more, and this is a piece of tape, fastened by running through two holes in the bottom of the box about the middle and one inch from either side. Some florists have this tape pasted by the box man in all their boxes, large and small, where it is always ready for use. When the flowers, with the exception of a few used to top off, are all placed, the tape ends are brought across and tied, pressing the stems gently but firmly together and preventing any movement. In arranging, the longest stems should go in first, and the shorter next, and so on, until at the end bunches such as valley, sweet peas, violets and the like fill up the rest of the box nicely. Arrange the colors so they will harmonize and place strips of wax paper between the layers. Some florists keep a quantity of wax paper squares in small sizes and place a piece under each flower, allowing the corner of the paper to stand up to support it.

The topping off of a box often adds much to the looks and costs but a trifle more. A little maidenhair, or a few fancy fern fronds, together with pansies, or a few violets, a sprig or so Festooning.

It always pays to have festooning artistically hung in the store or office. It is part of the Christmas trade, but the customer will never know that the dealer has it unless it is shown in the best possible shape. To leave in the original coils does not attract the purchaser, so it is better to festoon the salesroom and show the public how these ropes of foliage can be made attractive. The festooning of laurel is by far the best, and does not have the cheap look that the festoon of bouquet green has, and this year the latter being so scarce is at nearly the same price as the laurel. Large halls and churches are invariably hung with the laurel festooning, but if these are lofty and the festoons do not come down to the level of the eye coarser greens can be used. Arbor-vitæ for such locations makes very suitable festooning.

Prepared Flowers.

Baskets of dried and prepared flowers make very decorative features for the holidays. The prepared branches of beech and the highly colored fern fronds make up beautifully. The red ruscus is also very bright and showy and just the right color for Christmas. The sprays of dried statice work in nicely with the highly colored foliage, as do the spikes of eulalia or pampas grass. All these prepared flowers and leaves arrange beautifully in handle baskets and if adorned with bright ribbons that are in harmony with the colors used, make fine offerings for the Christmas trade and they will be ornamental throughout the winter.

ploye will, if he is in the humor, give too great value for the money and leave little if anything for his employer. Or another time he brings trouble by careless selection and packing, which may result in the loss of a customer.

With the price in mind and all that is intended for the order selected, packing is the next thing to consider. It may seem a small matter, but there is quite an art in packing a box of flowers. In the first place the box should be of a size sufficient to hold the flowers without crowding and yet not so large that the quantity selected will fail to fill it sufficiently. Some florists have their box makers paste in of valley or mignonette, a tiny bud or two, or anything of this kind, often gives a finishing touch to an arrangement that is worth much more than the cost. Do not put the lid on until the flowers have been sprinkled. Don't use too much as what lies in the bottom will soften the box and it will then be delivered in very bad condition, particularly if it happens to be strapped on the bottom of several together. Some florists will not send a box out without wrapping and others want their creations to show and never paper except in cold weather.

A pretty way to finish off a box is to arrange a spray of oak leaves, pine branch with cones, holly, wild smilax or other such green, and with it place a flower or two that fits in with the season. These are tied on with a silver or gilt cord or with the wrapping tape twine, either before it is papered, if at all, or afterwards. Some of the trade are very particular as to their boxes, selecting an odd color, such as a brown, and using as an ornament a red seal on a corner, or again using it to seal the ends of the tape or string after the box is tied. Others must have all white. Some will use folding boxes, while the madeup and more expensive pasteboard is none too good for high class houses. Another method of preparing for delivery which saves the price of a box and often makes a hit, can be used in the case of a loose bunch for a vase, or a few chrysanthemums or other such selection. These are rolled—the flowers all showing—in a cornucopia of rather stiff white paper partly flattened out with one of the ends of the sheet bent back, to which is pinned the card together with a bunch of pansies, or a small flower or two. The bottom or handle can be tied with a silver cord and a sprig of something caught in. The address tag can be tied here with the loose ends of the cord.

The Directoire Wreath.

Directoire wreaths are usually small and upstanding in effect, high in front and similar in form to the laurel crown of old. They will look pretty when combined with full rich garlands with shower effect. If a public hall is to be decorated a garland made of holly and boxwood combined is desirable, making about a yard of holly garland and then a yard of boxwood garland, and so on to the desired length. From the boxwood sections suspend showers made of holly, which should be of different lengths, attaching to the main shower strand a tiny circle of red berries. From the holly sections of the garland suspend a directoire wreath, to the base of which may be added a butterfly bow of red ribbon. Cover all stretches of wall in this manner. In the corners arrange groups of Christmas trees. The trees should be in tubs and finished with a grouping of ferns to cover the tubs. These corners of the hall can be made into a circle group, allowing the Christmas trees and some tall palms to diverge to the side center wall, using a wide red satin sash ribbon as a sort of dividing line from the rest of the hall, especially if dancing is to be the main entertainment.

From the ceiling, in the center, suspend an immense ball of red berries from which hang showers of mistletoe. At different intervals from the ceiling in the center suspend large circles of berries to which tiny electric lights covered with red catgut can be effectively placed. From these circles also suspend showers but these should be made of red berries. If a doorway is to be decorated use the directoire wreath, using about three in a group, making a sort of curtain or shower effect from one side. This should be made of holly and red berries and tied back with a red satin ribbon. Place directoire wreaths where they will be most effective. It is well to bear in mind that the directoire wreath is not a complete circle wreath but is open at the lower end like the crown, as before mentioned, and in using it in decorating the open part should be down and the ribbon—if one is to be attached—should be fastened to each open end—this open end showing but little in the finished wreath—but the ribbon attached to each end will be most effective when tied loosely in a bow several inches below the directoire wreath.

This wreath will also look well on the buffet dining table if two are put together in the center with the full heads meeting. In this case red berries should be profusely used in the head piece. Arrange a very wide red satin ribbon from under the sides on which place tall candle sticks of the mission variety, making a red berry shade for each. From the opening of the directoire wreath at each end make a rope of red berries and extend to edge of the table. Place along this rope of berries or rather in the center of it down the table small bonbon dishes filled with red candies. In the center of each place a candle with a side shade attached to it made of red berries.

For favors use rings made of berries to which a long loop of ribbon has been tied in order that they may be carried over the arm. Another word about the directoire wreath: when making be careful that the thickness is mostly at the top and gradually terminates in a point towards the lower center. They must be carefully regulated, taking care that the leaves are turned in one direction. Again referring to garlands—when boxwood is used the garland can be embellished with rings made of berries and slipped over the boxwood garlands at different intersections. Strung holly looks very well and is quickly done. It looks like a rich cord when properly made and is very useful in draping garlands or half wreaths.

A very large boxwood wreath will look pretty on the wall of a ball room with the center filled with tiny red bells but these must be of different lengths. These tiny bells can also be attached to the outer lower half. At the ceiling above the wreath attach a red satin ribbon and bring to the center where the wreath is attached. From the sides of the wreath suspend garlands of boxwood on which the red berry rings have been pulled over at different intervals. From these rings of berries small red bells can be advantageously attached. Christmas trees decorated with the tiny red Christmas bells with a scattering of white cotton on which silver frosting has been dusted to represent Jack Frost will look well in this combination. The same effect can be secured from a chandelier, using a large bell in the center surrounded with the smaller bells. The clapper of the large bell will look well made of mistletoe.

Fin: Wedding Decorations.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs taken at the residence of Patrick Calhoun, Cleveland, O., October 12, the occasion being the wedding of Mr. Calhoun's daughter. The decorations were arranged by the J. M. Gasser Co., which has a nationwide reputation for fine work. On the same day this company executed another beautiful wedding decoration at the home of Dr. J. C. Wood, Cleveland, Dr. Wood's daughter being the bride.

Park Employees' Examinations.

WEST CHICAGO PARKS.

Each candidate, upon entering the examination room, is given an identifying number. Throughout the examination he is marked according to that number and all papers which he writes are likewise numbered. His name, address and other personal information are included on a sheet which is sealed in an envelope, and nowhere on the examination papers or in the oral tests is his name divulged. After all markings are completed, the identification envelope is opened and his name and address determined.

The subjects of examination are: experience, special subject, and physical. The first has a weight of 3, the second a weight of 5, and the third a weight of 2, in determining the final average or standing on the eligible list. The experience paper is the only part of the examination which is written. In order to make the written work as simple as possible, mimeographed forms are used which require only that the candidate write in the meager details regarding his age, schooling and practical experience. A copy of one of these experience forms is published herewith.

The special subject, which is the most important part of the examination and weighs one-half of the total weight, is conducted as far as possible without requiring any written work on the part of the applicants. For florists it includes oral questions on the preparation of soils, the extermination of insects, the method of propagating, forcing and caring for plants, and questions on fertilizing, transplanting and watering are also included. Augmenting the oral test, there is a practical test which consists in having the candidate pot a number of plants and give the names of 15 or 20 plants which are pointed out to him in the conservatory. Throughout this test he is known to the examiner only by his number.

The physical test is designed for the purpose of determining the candidate's bodily fitness and his ability to perform the work required of him. A person who is well educated and of long years' experience in floral work, may be rendered unfit for our positions if he is physically unsound or is too old to handle a wheelbarrow or do other heavy work. The physical test is given the smallest weight in the examination in order that a man may not receive a passing grade merely because he is an athlete or possesses great strength. The physical test does not consist of exercises which would require a gymnast for their proper performance, but consists of simple tests for the back, arms and legs and general tests by the physical examiner to show co-ordination.

In the case of examinations for gardeners, the written work is reduced to a minimum. The subjects are experience, special subject and physical, each weighted as stated in the case of florists. The candidate is required only to write his past experience.

The special subject for these examinations is oral and practical. The oral work includes questions on insects, grafting, pruning, fertilizing, and planting trees, shrubs and perennials as well as questions on the planting, care and maintenance of lawns. In the practical test the candidate is required to name 15 or 20 trees, shrubs and perennials which are pointed out to him in the park, and he is further required to demonstrate the proper method of pruning and planting trees and shrubs. The physical test is the same as that for florists. Because the work of gardeners is entirely outdoors and requires ability in climbing trees, no persons over 50 years of age are allowed to compete.

In examinations for higher positions, such as head florist and foreman of florists, the best illustration is the test which was given for head florists on February 27, 1912. Our head florist is in charge of the Garfield Park conservatory, and of all floral work in the system, as distinguished from landscape work. It is therefore necessary that he be a well educated man and one who is capable of handling correspondence, ordering supplies and materials and keeping records. For this reason the examination was of a much higher standard than those described above and it necessarily included considerable written work. However, oral and practical tests were included in the examination in order that the examiners might judge of the personality of the candidate and in order that they might observe other qualifications which could not be determined by a written test.

The subjects of the examination were: special subject, experience and educational. The first had a weight of 6, the second a weight of 3, and the last a weight of 1. You will note that we have no physical test because of the small importance of this feature as compared to the training, experience and executive ability required. However, each candidate was required to furnish a physician's certificate regarding his health and physical condition.

In this examination the usual practice was followed of giving the candidates identifying numbers and having their names unknown to the examiners. The examiners included W. N. Rudd and Edwin F. Kanst. Prof. Dorner of the University of Illinois, was also invited to act as an examiner, but *previous engagements prevented his attending. The written test in the examination was designed to call out the candidate's resourcefulness and originality as well as his executive ability and practical knowledge of the work.

The practical test included the identification of a considerable number of greenhouse plants and an interview of about a half an hour with the examiners. In this interview the subjects covered included the design and arrangement of greenhouses and a discussion of the present conservatory and any needed additions or changes therein, together with the management and handling of the employes in the floral division. The experience paper brought out the candidate's age, schooling and all practical experience he may have had. The educational subject, which was written, included the writing of a letter, the making out of a payroll, and a few simple arithmetic problems.

The above statements should make clear the methods of examination. The board has recently prepared a chart showing all the positions in the service of the West Park system, showing the authority and responsibility of the various departments and the method of organization.

ORCHID NOTES.

Calanthes.

The culture of this orchid has increased by leaps and bounds of late years, and there are no more popular cut flowers from the time of the flowering of Cattleya labiata on until the C. Trianae comes in. The flower spikes will last three weeks after being cut, and can be held on the plant for two months as the buds open in succession for a long time. It is worthy of remark, however, that very few succeed to the fullest extent with calanthes, and the reason is a simple one. It must be remembered that the plants are native to the hot, moist, shady jungles of Burma, and that even C. Veitchii, the product of gardens, has been found there as a natural hybrid. These conditions give the key to the culture under glass in that plenty of heat is required from the start until the plants are in full flower, and if it can be arranged so that warmth may be given by means of a small heater all through the summer months, during the nights which are often cool and days that are both damp and cool, there is no orchid easier of culture, or as profitable to grow considering the number of spikes that can be produced from a given space. The bulbs, too, increase rapidly; it is safe to estimate that the stock can be doubled each year in quantity by natural increase, and spikes of bloom are a reasonable result from a six-inch pot.

Another favorable feature of calanthe culture is, that the benches on which the plants are grown for about nine months of the year are available for other plants during the other three months, that is, when the crop is cut in January the pots may be stored under the benches in a warm dry place until growth begins in April, thus making valuable space for Easter stock, which is quite a consideration, easily compensating for the little extra heat given in summer.

All the calanthes suitable for commercial culture are deciduous, and about this time commence to grow again, and as soon as the shoots are seen at the base of the bulbs these must be shaken out of the old soil, the old dead roots shortened, but leave enough on to enable the bulbs to be firmly potted, using 6-inch pots that are hard burned and will not turn green every two weeks. These orchids are terrestrial, but need plenty of drainage, quite as much as a cattleya; the potting soil must, however, consist principally of fibrous loam, tough sod broken up, and if this is not available the usual fern-fibre may be substituted with the addition of some loam, the object being to have a very porous compost, this and the ample drainage making it possible to feed the plants in the growing season frequently and every time they are watered with weak liquid manure in hot weather this will be necessary every day. There is no brand of fertilizer that can be used as a top dressing except sheep manure, and this is easily washed off in watering. Any chemical if used will burn the roots as the plants are strictly surface rooting and easily injured, so the feeding must be done with the watering, using a weak solution often until the foliage begins to turn yellow and the flowers to develop.

From the time the leaves begin to unfold, shading is necessary during bright sunlight, the best growers using white on the roof, with the addition of cheese-cloth during the earlier hottest months to be safe from burning of foliage. The plants when newly potted may be placed well up to the light, lowering them as the plants grow higher, keeping a temperature of at least 70° at night; 75° would be better with plenty of moisture in the atmosphere by frequent damping down. Spraying overhead is very risky the earlier part of the year, and if done later on in July there should be no surplus moisture on the foliage at evening; it is apt to bring "black-spot disease" in the bulbs, and also damping of the young growths. The two year old bulbs, if any, should be kept for increase. They will start again and their offshoots will flower the second year. Strong bulbs of last year should make two strong flowering bulbs the present season and thus the increase is rapid compared with all other orchids.

Calanthe Veitchii is the most popular kind; it is one of Dominy's earliest hybrids, raised in 1859. Not all the plants we now have are the result of his cross, however, for others have produced the same thing with considerable variation as to color, size and shape of bulb or compact flower spike. Thus we have many forms of C. Veitchii, the poorest being the old "bottle-necked" formed bulb. This is pretty well eliminated from collections now owing to the pale color, and some day we shall see whole houses of the variety known as C. Sandhurstiana, the brightest of all. As before stated, Boxall, the great orchid collector, found C. Veitchii wild in Burma, growing where the two parents, C. rosea and C. vestita, are also found wild. The plant was sent to England and flowered there with H. Low & Co. in 1893, or 34 years after the plant had been given to us by the hand of the hybridist.

Calanthe vestita and its two varieties are the next in importance, both being white flowered, one having a yellow eye and the other being dark red, with sprays of flower that arch gracefully and often seen two feet long. The plant known as C. Regnierii is the latest of all to bloom and it is also the strongest grower. Geo. McWilliam of Whitinsville, Mass., has raised many fine calanthes from seed by the use of this last species. They are, in fact, the finest calanthes known and he is to be congratulated on his success and pioneer work in showing others how well these fine winter flowering plants can be done. Critical flower buyers are ever ready for something different, and if it is good, so much the better. We know of Calanthe flowers that were exhibited at a show, were then sent to Washington, D. C., and there served to decorate two festive occasions, still in good condition. What more can one expect?

THE CARNATION.

The Christmas Crop.

The Christmas crop is the most interesting and important part of the carnation grower's work at this period, and unless the foundation for it was laid some months ago there will not be much to look forward to now. It is not a crop that may be forced along in a couple of weeks, for the growth that produces the Christmas flower has been in progress for many weeks, and to get that stiff stem and large flower that gladdens the heart of both dealer and customer, it is necessary to give a steady temperature, an abundance of fresh air, plenty of water but not too much, and to watch out for predatory insects.

A steady night temperature of 50 degrees is just about right to give the best results, and if this temperature is often exceeded the growth will soon show it by its long-jointed and soft appearance. Too much fertilizer will also soon show its natural effects on both growth and flower, and especially if the fertilizer be one that is rich in nitrogen, for example, sulphate of ammonia or nitrate of soda, both of which are very quick acting nitrogenous manures; and either one used to excess will produce sleepy flowers and general dissatisfaction.

Light top dressings of lime are frequently beneficial to the carnations during the winter, not only from the fact that the application of lime to the soil tends to correct any acidity that may be present, but it also helps to release some of the insoluble matter that may be found, notably some compounds of potash. It is probably the latter action of the lime, that is, the releasing of some of the potash the soil contains, that accounts for the stiffening of the stems that is attributed to the lime.

A period of dark and damp weather after the application of some special fertilizer is one of the trying things to the grower, for the action of nitrogen especially is likely to be injurious if such weather prevails for any length of time. Liquid fertilizers are seldom required until after the holiday period, partly from the fact that a good compost will seldom be exhausted enough to require liquid feeding before the middle of January, and partly because this method of feeding is not so satisfactory when given while the days are shortening. Some soils seem to be much benefitted by occasional top-dressings with wood-ashes, and for that matter this is a fertilizer that is not likely to do harm to any soil, its chief manurial value being found in the potash and lime it contains.

But as has been frequently remarked before, the only way to find out what the soil needs is to experiment from season to season, and while doing so to keep a corresponding bench or portion of a bench without the manure, in order to keep a check on the results. Propagation is now one of the matters the carnation man needs to keep in mind, for early cuttings make the best plants, always provided that these early rooted plants are not allowed to become pot-bound and stunted before they are planted out.

The propagating benches should be in a clean condition before the sand is put on, and if all woodwork about the benches had a good coat of whitewash and the whitewash were mixed with some solution of copper sulphate before using, there would be less risk of fungus developing after the bench is filled.

Some growers will use the same sand for more than one lot of cuttings, and possibly it is safe to do so if a soaking of boiling water can be given the sand between crops, but it is better practice to remove all old sand after a crop of cuttings has been rooted therein, and to refill the benches with clean sand fresh from the pit. Then take the best cuttings that can be had, protect them from sun and draughts, water them in thoroughly after planting in the sand, the latter having been made firm before the cuttings were put in, keep the temperature as near 50 as possible, and there should not be any difficulty in getting them to root.

As to whether the leaves ought to be trimmed on a carnation cutting or not, we would say that this is partly a matter of taste and partly one of convenience, for the trimmed cutting is easier to plant than one having all its foliage. In addition it has not quite so much evaporating surface exposed to the air during the period it is in the propagating house, and before it has roots to support it.

W. H. TAPLIN.

The Most Trying Season.

We are reminded by the nearness to the holiday season that we are also drawing close to the most trying period for the carnation plants as well as to the season of the highest prices for the flowers, and it behooves us to watch closely and cater to the plants' needs, at the same time encouraging in every way the development of the blooms without causing any condition that will lead to the deterioration of the health or growth of the plant for the future. Every grower is of the same desire just now and that is to be able to get in a large cut of flowers during the holiday season and many are tempted to resort to extremes of temperature and other ways to force the flowers open. But this can be carried just so far and no farther without injury to the plants.

A house of plants well up in bud that are showing color can be given a few degrees higher temperature for a week or so to hasten out those buds that are nearly ready without any material injury to the plants, provided the soil is held a little to the dry side, but a break of this kind from the general culture of the plants must be governed by caution and common sense. It would be folly to raise the temperature of the house from 4 to 6 degrees and then pour a flood of water on the roots, as it would be also to allow the soil to become extremely dry. Personally, I am opposed to any forcing of the carnation for any purpose whatsoever but am free to admit that there are exceptions to the rule and instances where a few degrees higher temperature, as previously stated, will not lessen the vigor of the plants but will hasten the development of the blooms.

Many growers will plant a house of red carnations, top them and treat them generally throughout the season with the main object in view of having them produce a heavy crop of flowers during December, January and February and then as the room is needed for the young stock of the other varieties gradually clean out the old plants to make space for the young. In a case of this kind every extra flower that the plants can be induced to mature during the months stated is so much gained but the warning signal of the poor keeping qualities of a carnation flower grown in a high temperature should always be before the mind of anyone who follows out this method of treatment.

The condition of the market for carnation blooms at this time is such that there should not be any need of holding on to any flowers. Allow them to be cut right along steadily as they develop. There is too big a supply of fine plant stock for Christmas about the country to think for one moment that there will be any place for over ripe cut flowers. Everything will have to be crisp, fresh and of good color.

The general routine of culture should be given strict attention. The matter of temperature is one of great importance. Do not allow any extremes in either direction. Watering is also of equal importance. It will be necessary to watch the soil more closely as the firing becomes steadier. The work of keeping the shoots in the rings or supports should also be attended to closely, and another thing of equal importance is that of fumigating or keeping down the insects. To allow the green fly to work on the growths quickly plays havoc with them. Red spider will make itself troublesome if given half a chance and the very best guard against this is to maintain an even temperature at all times with ventilation as the weather permits.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Stock Plants.

There has been so much written on this subject it is beyond us to supply anything new. In fact, it seems hardly necessary to repeat the details which have so often appeared in the columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST. It is only in the hope that some of the suggestions offered will be of service to the inexperienced that we are prompted to write this article. The chrysanthemum is generally perpetuated by cuttings taken from the base of the plants, which have just passed their flowering season. Each grower must decide how many will be required to meet his demands, which may be from a few plants to several thousand of a kind. It is difficult to give advice as to how many to save, for much depends upon the varieties grown; some are more productive of cuttings than others and also root more freely. Strong stock plants should give from twenty to one hundred each by May 15, and if the first few batches of cuttings are planted on benches and treated as stock plants these figures may be increased many times.

The old plants are usually lifted and planted closer together to economize space and in this operation one must be governed by their size. As a rule, two to four inches apart according to their vigor, will suffice. Such varieties as the Chadwicks, Virginia Poehlmann and several others which do not make rhizomes or underground stools, succeed better if allowed to remain undisturbed where they flowered and to those growers who do not require the room we would suggest that this plan be adopted; or if the transplanting can be deferred until they are making active growth, say the middle of February, so much the better. Those who propagate for their own use and are not obliged to begin this operation until March should keep the stock at a low temperature, anywhere between 40 degrees and freezing point will answer. Those who are interested in the distribution of plants and cuttings and desire early deliveries will need to keep them slightly warmer, say about 50 degrees. The judicious application of water is very important. Keep them a little on the dry side until the sun begins to return and greater activity is manifested. Give abundance of air at all times when the weather will permit and a light situation is preferable. Never put them under the benches or in dark, shady corners if you expect first-class cuttings.

Care of Cut Blooms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

We have had some trouble with our chrysanthemums. We cut them fresh, leave them stand in water from six to eight hours before shipping, and we have had some complaint of their withering a couple of days after.

J. H. B.

Appleton, Wis.

The keeping qualities of cut chrysanthemums are influenced by many conditions. In the first place, some varieties possess more substance than others and thus are able to remain in good condition for a longer time than others. Conditions under which they are grown also have a decided effect. Very nitrogenous food, like nitrate of soda, has a tendency to produce soft petalage. Those which are grown in a low temperature, with an abundance of air, will keep the best and allowing them to develop fully or nearly so, before cutting, is a step in the right direction. The petals mature, become dense or firm, the same as the foliage at maturity. From our observations most of this trouble is due to premature cutting. Storing in water in a cool place before they are to be used is beneficial. Further than this we can not suggest anything to J. H. B. that would be of assistance.

ELMER D. SMITH.

Diseased Chrysanthemum Foliage.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Enclosed please find leaves of chrysanthemum Jeanne Nonin. They are planted side by side with other varieties in the same house and the same soil, Jeanne Nonin being the only one that has the disease. It starts at the bottom of the plant and works up until it reaches the flower in some of them. Any information as to the disease, cause and treatment will be appreciated.

C. F. C.

Ontario.

The samples of foliage supplied by C. F. C. are affected with one of the several kinds of leaf spot which are quite prevalent. We would conclude this species of fungus disease is the one known as cylindrosporium, and whenever apparent is usually found on Jeanne Nonin—in fact as C. F. C. states, no other varieties are affected. Bordeaux mixture and several other fungicides are recommended, but the applications should begin when the plants are small and before this trouble is noticeable to be of much use. In the case of Nonin we think any condition that checks the growth will develop it. The best results we have had are from stock planted before they became pot-bound and kept in an active growing state throughout the season.

Marketing Narcissus and Hyacinth Blooms

IN FRANCE.

If the rose and carnation cultures of the Department of the Alpes-Maritimes have made the floral prosperity of the Cap d'Antibes and the region about there, from Cannes in southern France to Ospadeletti in Italy, certain it is that the narcissus and hyacinth blooms of Ollioules have made rich the peasant growers of this comparatively unknown sunny little corner of Mediterranean France. In the Department of the Var, in which Ollioules is situated, and of which Toulon is the chief commercial city, there are some six thousand acres given up to floral cultures on a commercial basis. By far the greater part of this area is laid down in narcissus, hyacinths and violets, with a scattering acreage back from the coast devoted to perfume plants, and a trifle more, near Bandol, to those curious little dried blossoms known to the commercial world as "immortelles," or "everlastings."

Nowhere else on earth does the Vrai Narcisse, the Narcisse Tazette, the Campanelle or the White Roman hyacinth reproduce or flower so luxuriantly as here. A million francs worth of bulbs are bought in this market alone by American dealers, and during the cut flower season, from November to April, the miserable shack of a railway station which serves the little it was impossible to predict the flower crop. Practically the same is true of the narcissus, of which at least 250 acres were planted at Ollioules, chiefly the grandiflora, ornatus and Golden Spur.

Because of the insidious cryptogamic malady which has made the hyacinth crop of these parts so problematical in recent years, its culture, at Ollioules at any rate, taken from the point of view of its prospective cut early in January and be at their best before the last week of the month or in the early days of February.

The Dutch Hyacinths, curiously enough, have not given expected results at Ollioules, in spite of the fact that an increasing number of Dutch growers are locating here, or at least are enlarging the scope of their relations by planting out on hired ground.

Some millions of freesias are produced at Ollioules, but the iris, anemone, gladiolus, tulip and Lillium Candidum are cultivated for their blossoms in but feeble quantities. What prosperity this great industry has actually brought to Ollioules—to Hyeres, Le Pradet, la Garde, Carquieranne, and Solies-Pont as well—only one who has learned something of the history of the traffic on the spot can realize unless it is all set down for him in black and white. The bulb cultures of Ollioules began in 1880, and within a dozen or fifteen years became the chief industry of the neighborhood (the phylloxera having meantime all but destroyed the grapevines which had previously been a source of riches), but only with the means of the rapid expedition of cut flowers in recent years by special cars attached to regular trains, later by the famous "Train des Fleurs," by increased parcel post facilities, by improved methods of packing and handling, by hermetically sealed special cars and by a special staff of travelling sorters, has it been possible to guarantee the arrival in far-away markets in good condition. All this was primarily the work of a syndicate, the Ligue Florale du Sud-Est, at least so far as the development and refinement of the traffic is concerned. By such paternalism the commerce of these parts has grown to its present huge proportions.

Actually the base of the bulb and cut flower industry of Ollioules rests on the hyacinth and the narcissus, the latter particularly with respect to the "trompette" and "grand monarque" varieties. Of a peculiar rusticity the narcissus can be made to grow luxuriantly in many places where bourg of Ollioules temporarily shelters nearly a quarter of a million paniers of cut flowers of the above mentioned varieties almost exclusively. These are ultimately handed over to the "Cut Flower Special" of the P. L. M. Railway, which each night flies onward to Paris, with connections for the markets of London, Berlin, Cologne, Hamburg and St. Petersburg, at a speed only equalled by the famous Cote d'Azur Express, filled with joyous livers bound to or from the capital and Monte Carlo's gaming tables.

Open air bulb culture in winter is a thing to make the American enthusiast green with envy. Some few hyacinths hereabouts are grown under glass frames, and some even under straw mattings which are rolled up during the day and stretched out again at night over low frames, a practice which obtains more largely in the open air carnation and rose cultures further east on the coast, and already treated of in a former article. Above all the bulb cultures of southern France, whether the product is sold as "oignons a fleurs" or as blooms, remain practically a monopoly of Ollioules and its neighboring battery of little townlets.

Renoncles have this year, to a larger extent than formerly, been planted at Ollioules, some four million having been put into the ground by one grower alone, chiefly of the varieties commercially known as Romano, Merveilleuse, Barbarousse, Hercule, Carmin, Seraphique, Viridis and Supreme. Up to December the growth of Renoncles was normal, but at that time flower return, has considerably diminished. There are not more than a hundred and fifty acres exclusively planted with hyacinths the present season. The blooms of the hyacinth have every expectation of being of the usual luxuriance, whatever the extent of the supply, and may be expected to mature the hyacinth fares but badly. On the other hand its very peculiarity seems to demand certain exigent conditions which are more nearly approached at Ollioules, and certain other districts neighboring upon the great French war port of Toulon, than elsewhere on the French and Italian Riviéras.

The secret of a successful cut flower commerce all depends upon the ability of the grower to market his product at a propitious moment. Particularly does this apply with regard to low cost open air production as at Ollioules. With glass-house forcing the problem is quite of another sort and has no consideration here. The open air, the warm southern sun, the sheltering mountain background, and such provision of wind-breaks as, in some instances, may be thought necessary are the only means employed to encourage flower growth at Ollioules.

From four, five, six or seven blooms can usually be counted on as a season's result from a single planted narcissus bulb—the traffic in cut flowers, it should be understood, being quite apart from that of growing "re-producteurs" (bulbs) for the market, the two seldom being carried on together.

Prices for the blooms vary considerably according to the demand and the time of their arrival in the northern markets. If the temperature of the early winter has been mild and the crop of a supreme abundance, prices may be low; or again, in the case of a rigorous season, the reverse may be the case and high prices rule. A basket of five kilos (approximately six pounds) of 48 dozen of narcissus blooms will bring all the way from five to fifteen francs according to ruling conditions, say one dollar to three dollars; but only at an average of seven francs a basket ($1.40) does it become really profitable to the grower who is also loaded with the cost of packing (emballage perdu) in reed baskets which he supplies free and shipping charges to Paris or a frontier station, such as Boulogne, if for England, or Petit Croix, if for Cologne or Berlin. This latter charge is invariable—1 franc, 25 centimes, approximately twenty-five cents. On November 20, 1911, the five kilo baskets of narcissus were quoted on the Hamburg market at seven francs, and at Cologne at eight, the latter being the ruling price at Paris on the same day, except that the demand of the capitol is for 100 bunches to the basket, at of course double the price of the five kilo paniers.

Early in November, on All Saints Day, where the blooms have proved sufficiently precocious, Paris will absorb all of Ollioules' visible supply, often at forty francs ($8.00) the hundred dozen, three times the habitual ruling price of a fortnight later. Of 3,000 bulbs planted to the "are" a first year's return in blooms is perhaps 375 dozen of an average value of 56 francs, 25 centimes, approximately a gross return of $450.00 an acre. The second year gives the same, or a trifle more, while the third year often returns 1,000 dozen of a value of 150 francs, $2,000.00 gross, to the acre. The fourth and fifth years may produce 1,500 dozen to the "are," which at 225 francs works out $3,000.00 to the acre.

It is to be borne in mind however, that no charges are imposed on these returns as yet, and when the figures are reduced to a bare 125 francs net return to the "are," 12,500 francs to the hectare, approximately $1,000 an acre (in the year of the greatest productiveness) the return is not enormous, at least not according to American standards, though it suffices here. Many a small peasant grower with his wife and children working the garden to the exclusion of hired labor may make on a half acre bit of ground, "bon an, mal an"—good season and bad—but a quarter of the above named sum if everything goes well. That, surely, is not a great return, but again it suffices, in the absence of a more remunerative occupation, for even if he would the peasant grower often lacks the ability to develop his business and enter the open market, almost invariably selling his product to a negotiant or shipper who meets him with various demands for traditional rebates, which he protests against, but which he allows nevertheless, because he has not the machinery, the initiative or the education which enables him to do otherwise.

These are the ruling conditions in the Department of the Var. Farther east, in the Alpes-Maritimes, bordering upon the Italian Frontier, in the region of Nice, the open air narcissus culture commonly gives a return of but 40 francs an "are," a bare $300.00 an acre net. It is thus shown that in spite of the semi-protected rose and carnation cultures which produce such magnificent returns on the Riviera the flowers of almost all the bulb cultures of southern France bring the most profitable returns when produced in the neighborhood of Toulon, notably at Ollioules.

There is much for the American grower and shipper to learn with regard to the handling of the cut flower traffic by observing the methods in vogue in southern France, and when on Broadway, or Chestnut Street or Michigan Avenue, you can buy violets for a penny a bunch, or narcissus or hyacinths blooms at from five to twenty-five cents a dozen, the love and appreciation of flowers may be said to have extended to the masses who today spend their nickels and quarters on a riot of moving-picture and music-hall shows with nothing in return as a result.

Some statistics of the French post office authorities with regard to the parcels post shipments of cut flowers from southern France should be interesting in view of the fact that we have nothing of a like nature to correspond, above all at the price. A parcel of six pounds costs seventeen cents; ten pounds, twenty-five cents—delivered anywhere within the great rhomboid of modern France. This makes it possible to sell violets of Hyeres, the narcissi of Ollioules or the carnations of Antibes at Brest in Finistère, at Rouen in Normandy or at Dunkirk in Flanders at bargain prices, and since they don't grow in those places, and can't be made to, who does it hurt?—not the local dealers, for they too, get their supplies in the same manner.

From Hyeres, in February, 1909, 12,000 parcels of cut flowers (chiefly violets) were sent to England, 9,000 to Germany, 12,000 to Paris, in all, nearly 40,000 separate shipments, counting those sent to other parts as well. From Ollioules 205,000 separate shipments were sent out in the five months' season; 180,000 from Hyeres; from Carquieranne, even, a little bourg of but a few hundred inhabitants, went 55,000; from Antibes there were shipped 110,416; from Nice, 3,106,777 and from Cannes 233,962. These totals are something incomprehensible to the stranger, but it is cheap transportation that does it.

This is the real popularizing of the love of flowers, the vulgarization, the French somewhat enigmatically call it. At any rate it is the bringing of cut flowers to the masses, a thing that the gold and marble fitting of the florists' shops of the busy corners at home have not been able to do. The traffic is as yet in its infancy in America. Who is to be the real popularizer? Is the new cult to have its headquarters in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia or San Francisco? Growers, shippers and dealers should get ready for it. The fad for flowers is surely headed their way. It bids fair to knock out the caramel craze, and a good thing it will be doing. Not all saccharine sweetness lies at the bottom of a box of candy.

M.

WITH THE GROWERS

John N. May, Summitt, N. J.

It would not seem natural to visit Madison and this part of New Jersey and not call on J. N. May. Roses are the main crop at this establishment but a considerable number of carnations are grown, as are also quite a quantity of pompon chrysanthemums. The pompons were in exceedingly fine shape and a bench of yellow, another of white, and a house of late yellow, were as pretty as a picture. All were clean and healthy, with fine color of bloom and luxuriant foliage. The Enchantress family of carnations is the favorite here, and they appeared to be quite at home in this soil, the plants being strong and heavy, and ready for business.

The roses were all in good health, a house of Sunburst being especially good, both in growth, size and color of flower. Mr. May is getting a better color with this rose than any we have seen this season. A house of the old Bon Silene was quite a novelty as we had not seen a good bench of this old-time favorite for many a day. The plants were in fine shape, sending up a good crop of blooms. American Beauties are grown to some extent but the main crop is Killarney and its sports. The Brides and Bridesmaids that this place was at one time famous for are not grown at all any more. Everything about Mr. May's establishment is neat and well kept up.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, L. I.

This establishment has long been noted for the high quality of the stock turned out and this season is not going to be any exception to the rule. Everything on the place, from beginning to end, is in fine shape. The reason for this can easily be seen in the systematic and thorough way in which the place is run. When the chrysanthemums are done another plant of some kind is ready to take their place. A house of lupins is already in and another of sweet peas, following the early mums. We note a fine looking bench of winter-flowering wallflowers, also several benches of the mignonette or polyanthe type of rose, in fine vigor, just beginning to send up fine sprays.

The commercial varieties of chrysanthemums were all cut out, with the exception of some Golden Eagle, President Roosevelt, Maud Dean and a small lot of Harvard—a new crimson which as grown here is one of the best of this color for commercial purposes that I have ever seen. A light pink sport from Maud Dean is also very beautiful. It is a big improvement over the parent variety, not only in color but also in form and fullness. The pompons are also grown here in quantity. They are mostly varieties possessing good commercial qualities and were in fine shape all along the line, particularly a bench of Baby and another of the variety Frank Wilcox, or as it is known in the west, Mrs. Frank Beu.

It is to be expected that in a visit to the Dailledouze Bros.' place our chief interest would be centered in the carnations. We expected to find fine stock, both as to growth and quality of bloom, and we found it with every variety grown. Some of the varieties did not measure up to the Enchantress family as they grow it, but this type is grown here as good as the best to be found anywhere. White Wonder was in fine shape, both as to the quality of bloom and the condition of the plants. Several seedlings

Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I.

The Cottage Gardens Co. is famous for the fine carnations produced and is the home of the varieties Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward. After seeing the fine vases of Matchless (white) and Vivid (cerise) on exhibition at the American Institute Show we were eager to see these varieties growing. A large house is given up are under trial. One in particular, a good commercial pink, occupies one of the large houses. It is not of very large size but the growth and freedom of bloom is very good and looks to be a great producer.

Another house is given up to Enchantress Supreme for blooming and several benches to the same variety for propagating purposes. Also a house of cuttings of this variety was already in. This is a salmon sport of Enchantress and as seen growing here it is a decided improvement, not only in color, but in the form of bud. Although it grew side by side with Enchantress we could not find any hump-back buds, while a number were found among the Enchantress. The color of the petalage is not only salmon on the upperside, but is of the same color on the reverse. Mr. Dailledouze says that the color deepens as the season advances and is better in midwinter than now. This being the case, this variety should displace Enchantress to a great extent.

C. W. JOHNSON.

to Matchless and it certainly is as fine a carnation as is to be seen anywhere at this time of the year. This flower is very large, pure in color and of fine form. It is not quite up to White Perfection in purity or form of flower but it is going to make that variety hustle for first honors at the exhibitions. The large quantity of stock on hand means that this will be prominent at the shows this season.

The variety Vivid, as the name implies, is a very bright cerise. This is a very striking flower, a good grower and very free, but—Tyler, who has charge of the growing at this establishment, is not quite satisfied this year and expects greater things next season when the plants will be given a better show. This season's plants were propagated late and were small when planted. A number of seedlings are on trial, a house of crimson looking good and several others coming along. The main plantings of Mrs. C. W. Ward were pinched back late and are not yet in full crop, but the plants promise well. Alma Ward is not grown to any great extent any more, it being found that others are freer and consequently more profitable. Beacon is at home in good shape as usual. Everything about this place shows close application to business.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Brown Floral Co., Canton, O.

The Brown Floral Co. of Canton is fast coming to the front as one of the great establishments of Ohio. Last season three new houses, each 36x300 feet, were erected. This season four more houses and a large propagating house have been built. While the houses erected this year are not as large as those of last year, they are being admirably fitted up for the culture of mixed stock. All the benches are of concrete construction and great skill has been shown throughout. All the houses are equipped with the Advance ventilating apparatus. The Brown firm has a large part of its 100,000 square feet in roses, chrysanthemums and pot stock, but the larger part of the space is devoted to carnations, in the culture of which they excel. They now have many plants of a pink seedling that originated with them and that looks very promising. It is a cerise pink and of a shade that is equal to any variety we have seen. This company has a large wholesale store near the B. & O. depot where a fine line of supplies are also kept in stock. Near the city square they have another store that caters to their large retail trade. Charles Brown, the head of this concern, has been in the flower business in Canton for thirty-two years. He first located on what is now Brown avenue, the thoroughfare having been named for him, and remained there twenty-two years. Ten years ago he bought his present location near the Stark county fair grounds and has continued improving ever since. In the greenhouse management he is ably assisted by C. A. Charlson, who has been with him for twenty-six years, and who is a fine grower and a genial man. Though Mr. Brown is reputed to be wealthy he leads the simple life and is a hard worker, but is never too busy to lend a helping hand to worthy purposes.

The Dreer Delivery System.

The firm of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., is another of the many progressive concerns which either have already discarded their old style horse delivery systems or are rapidly doing so. This firm laid the foundation of its present efficient system last year by installing a three-ton motor truck and soon learned that this is the ideal manner of handling large quantities of goods quickly.

"With these auto-trucks," says a member of the firm, "we not only make quick delivery to railroad and steamship companies of orders for customers living at a distance, but we are also enabled to quickly deliver the orders which are received from customers residing in the city and nearby suburban towns. The present Dreer system consists of one three-ton truck which is automatically heated during cold weather, one three-ton truck with tarpaulin sides and one two-ton machine, all of which are efficiently handled by men who formerly had charge of our horse-drawn vehicles. Besides the great advantage of quick service, this method of delivery, together with a complete telephone service, brings us in such close communication with the nurseries nine miles distant that we are now enabled to conduct our seed and plant business in as satisfactory a manner as if they were under the same roof."

What is true of the Dreer firm holds good with many other concerns and this system of delivery seems destined to crowd the horse out almost entirely. It appeals to the small florist quite as much as the larger firm, a light car being now possible at small cost. The first cost may be about the same or a little more than for horses and wagons, but the cost of maintenance and the fact that one machine will do the work of several horse-drawn wagons and one man will take the place of two or three must be taken into consideration. The running expense of an auto and a horse and wagon are about the same and the auto does not eat when not working. A further advantage lies in the fact that a machine will cover much more territory than a horse in the same time, and this gives the florist a fine chance to expand.

The Roses of Roumelia.

The real rose garden of Europe is the Thracian plain, in Bulgaria. Here are grown the most fragrant roses of the world in such great quantities that the plain is transformed into a veritable bower.

This is the region which supplies the world with the best attar of roses. The very best is stamped Kasanlik. One hundred and seventy-three Thracian villages in the region of Kasanlik are devoted to rose culture. Roses, roses everywhere, until the air is fairly oppressive with the superabundance of odor.

This, at least, the Bulgars owe to Turkish occupation of the plain. Attar of roses was a Turkish secret at one time. It was a sort of home industry. They grew the roses in their private gardens, and distilled the attar to supply the harems. It was one of the many luxuries of the wealthy Turkish household, as oils and perfumes at the baths of the last days marked the degeneracy of the decline of Rome. The Ottoman dilettante has gone, but he left rose culture as his legacy to Thrace. Now it has become a very modern industry, and is being exploited by large firms and combines. Many of the thrifty Germans have found this a very palpable means of making a fortune in the Balkans. It seems to strike horror to the soul of the poet, an insult to one's finer sensibilities to think of rose culture as so purely material, but it is none the less true that there are rose speculators in Thrace who are growing as corpulent as some of the American grain speculators on Wall Street. Whole plots of roses, bed after bed of them, are bought before they are even in bud. Representatives of the firms are found in all of the big cities of the world.

The distilling of the rose for its essence originated in Persia, the word attar in Persia meaning fragrance. Up to three hundred years ago only rose water was known. Then the Persians discovered the method of extracting the essence. The secret spread to Arabia and through the Orient, was picked up by a wandering Turk, who took a rose tree with him from the Barbary states, and planted it in Kasanlik, and so began the industry characteristic of the whole Turkish empire, but more particularly in this little tract—this little out-of-the-way place that used to be Roumelia. There are plenty of regions where roses are grown but nowhere so successfully as here. The attar rose is a product of climatic conditions, and while the same methods that have made the industry as prolific in Bulgaria have been tried elsewhere, no one has yet been able to produce anything "just as good."

The rose harvest begins about the middle of May and lasts until the middle of June. Picking is done by women and children very much the same as American fruit growers and gardeners employ berry pickers. About two acres of land produce 6,600 pounds of roses. Think of talking of roses by the pound! Almost a desecration, it seems. But millady of Europe and America to whom attar of roses is an indispensable article of toilet does not know how much more desecration this same emblem of poets and lovers is put to before it finds place on her dressing table.

The rose petals are distilled in a copper vat resting upon a furnace. A cooling tube enters the top of the vat on one side and passes out into a flask on the other. The operation lasts about an hour and a half and must be kept up constantly, for if rose petals stand over twenty-four hours they deteriorate in value and must be used for cheaper grades of the essence. The rose water must be distilled twice in order to extract the attar. From forty litres of rose water, five litres of attar are distilled. Upon the attar collects a yellow oily layer, which is skimmed off by means of a cone-shaped bowl.

Of course, even the best attar of roses in this modern age of adulteration is never pure. There are various processes of adulteration. White rose petals are often mixed with red, the white being more abundant but less valuable for attar. Attar of geranium is used to adulterate the attar of roses, too. This is made in India, and recently its importation has been forbidden by the government, but it is still being used secretly. Oil of turpentine, too, is a favorite form of adulteration.

It would seem impossible that the peasants who grow the roses even for industry should not imbibe something of the beauty of the flowers. And indeed they have. A simple, kindly folk they are, given to trusting much. Too much, indeed, for they are being ruthlessly exploited by merchants and monopolies. Many of them make their own attar of roses by the old-fashioned simple methods. This the shop keepers often choose to buy at a very nominal price rather than incur the risk and expense involved in manufacturing by modern methods. In spite of adulterations, to make one pound of attar of roses, it takes 4,000 pounds of petals. And for one ounce of attar manufactured by the home methods of the peasant, he receives 18 shillings. The London merchant values the same goods at 8 pounds.

Coffee.

The Secretary of Agriculture will soon issue Bulletin No. 79, of the division of research and reference, Bureau of Statistics, on the coffee industry. It contains a record of the history, origin and cultivation of the tree; world's production, trade and consumption by countries; per capita consumption in specified countries; prices on New York market for a series of years; tariff rates in various countries; substitutes and adulterants. The bulletin is of more than usual interest, in view of the extensive use of coffee in the United States.

In the world's production of coffee, Brazil holds the preeminent place. In 1800 the exports from Brazil amounted to 1,720 pounds; they have steadily increased until in 1909 they were more than 2¼ billion pounds. The area in Brazil suitable for coffee cultivation covers about 1,158,000 square miles, or an area larger than the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Texas and California; but the area under cultivation is small compared to that which could be cultivated, but little over two million acres being in coffee in 1905. About three-fourths of the world's output is grown in Brazil and the State of Sao Paulo alone produces one-half of the world's supply.

The history of the valorization scheme by Brazil is of great interest, not only to those interested in coffee, but to students of economics in general. The state of Sao Paulo borrowed more than seventy millions of dollars in 1908 and bought and stored nearly one billion pounds of coffee for the purpose of maintaining prices on the various markets, these having become very low, due to over-production. Since the buying and storing of this coffee the government through a committee has sold between three and four hundred million pounds.

Venezuela and Colombia rank next in amount produced, each growing in the neighborhood of one hundred million pounds annually. Mexico, the Central American states and the Dutch East Indies also produce large quantities. The only coffee produced in the United States is grown in Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

The United States received coffee from 48 different countries in the past five years, the great bulk coming from South and Central America and Mexico; lesser amounts were imported from the Dutch East Indies and British West Indies, and from one and one-half to two and one-half million pounds from Arabia (Aden).

In the total amount of coffee consumed, the United States leads all other countries by a wide margin. The imports amounted to over one billion pounds annually in three of the last ten years. Germany, France, Austria-Hungary, Netherlands, Sweden, Denmark and Norway each import large quantities. Netherlands, Cuba, Sweden, Norway, Finland and Belgium each have a larger per capita consumption than the United States. The cooperative per capita consumption of coffee and tea in the United States and the United Kingdom, 1866-1910, shows an increase of 87 per cent in the consumption of coffee and a decrease of 11 per cent in that of tea in the United States, while the United Kingdom shows a decrease of 36 per cent for coffee and an increase of 87 per cent for tea. In other words, the United States consumption of coffee per capita is about 15 times that of the United Kingdom, while the consumption of tea in the United Kingdom is about six times greater than in the United States.

The price of Santos No. 7 coffee on the New York market rose from 5@7½ cents per pound in 1902 to 12½@16½ cents in 1911, an increase of more than 100 per cent in the ten year period.

The import and export duties levied on coffee in the principal countries and their possessions show a wide range. The tariffs on this produce range from free admission in some of the principal consuming countries to absolute prohibition from entry in some of the producing countries. The principal countries admitting coffee free of duty are the United States, Netherlands, German Southwest Africa and several of the British colonial possessions.

Chicory, cultivated in Belgium, Netherlands, Germany, France and the United States, is used perhaps more than any other one adulterant. In France the manufacture of chicory into a commercial product is quite an important industry. Certain coffee substitutes, including roasted chick peas, roasted acorns, etc., are used quite extensively in several European countries. Over 100 factories, said to be engaged in the manufacture of coffee substitutes in France, produce 53 million pounds annually; 568 such establishments, including 412 factories for the manufacture of coffee substitutes from figs, are reported in Austria-Hungary; in Germany nearly fifteen thousand people are employed in the coffee substitute trade, and the annual production is approximately 220 million pounds. The imports of chicory and coffee substitutes into the United States are comparatively small in recent years.

Poisonous Moonseed.

The poisonous nature of moonseed (Menispermum canadense) has again been forcibly brought to notice through the death of a small boy at Lemont, Ill., from eating a few of the fruits. The boy, who was seven years old, found what he supposed were wild grapes as he was returning from school. He ate three of the fruits and in the course of a few hours became violently ill. In spite of medical attention he died the next day. Many dealers in decorative plants offer the moonseed for sale and it appears to be extensively planted for covering arbors and the like, its poisonous nature apparently not being suspected. The fruits are large, deep purplish-black and quite attractive in appearance. When grown about dwellings, one ignorant of its qualities might easily be tempted to try it with disastrous results. The vine, however, is a very decorative one with large, glossy angular leaves that are free from the vermin that attack many climbing plants. Fortunately the species is dioecious, that is the stamens and pistils are on separate plants. By using the staminate form one may have the plant without danger of poisoning, but he ought to make sure that it is really staminate.—The American Botanist.

Automobile Tires From Potatoes.

Few botanists ever acquire sufficient funds to put them in the class of those who are annoyed by "tire trouble" and so are not directly interested in the synthesis of rubber, but as plant students they may take an academic interest in the matter. The American Botanist is authority for the statement that many attempts have been made to make artificial rubber, but only recently has the task been accomplished. According to Scientific American two German chemists have recently produced rubber equal in all respects to natural rubber, starting with such unpromising objects as potatoes. In the last step of producing rubber synthetically, a hydrocarbon called isoprene is exposed to metallic sodium and rubber results. All that remains, then, is to find a cheap source of isoprene. This can be made from starch of any kind, potato starch being as useful as any. Taking this starch it is first fermented to form fusel oil and acetone and from these the isoprene is produced. It thus appears that the humble potato may support life in an entirely new way. Last year the world used nearly seventy-five thousand tons of natural rubber and the demand is steadily increasing. In May, 1910, rubber brought more than $3.00 a pound, but this is an unusual price. The British, who have always been fond of speculations in rubber, have founded a company with $2,500,000 capital to manufacture the new artificial rubber. It is said, however, that notwithstanding the fact that the artificial product seems to be identical with the natural, it is not likely soon to crowd it in the market. Only a small amount of isoprene can be made from a given bulk of potatoes and the cost of producing this is still very great.

Lord & Burnham's Western Factory.

One of the famous English essayists said that gardening is the greatest of human pleasures and another writer has it that

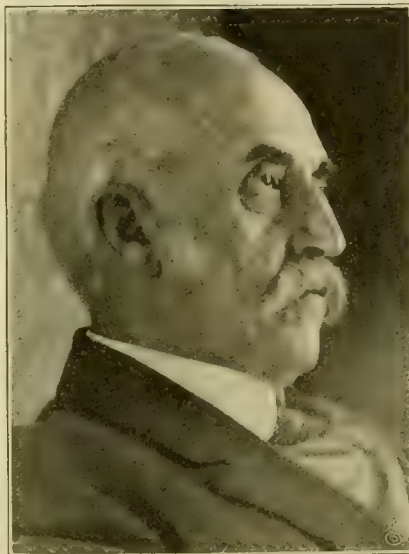

Who loves a garden
Loves a greenhouse, too.

While these sentiments were applied mainly to British horticulture they are true of other temperate countries, perhaps in lesser degree, even the western continent showing a decided tendency in the same direction as men acquire wealth and leisure. There can be no doubt as to the friendly attitude of the inhabitants of the United States and Canada toward gardening and that the greenhouse and conservatory as necessary adjuncts of the home and garden are coming into popular demand is well borne out by the growth of the business of building greenhouses, private as well as commercial, the latter now because of climatic conditions already an indispensable institution in the production of flowers, fruits and vegetables for market.

The Lord & Burnham Co., the well known New York horticultural builders, found the growth of the business such that in May, 1909, it was thought advisable to open offices and establish a branch manufactory in the west. Accordingly Geo. Sykes, a member of the firm, long familiar with its traditions for good work in this line, opened an office in the Rookery building, Chicago, and located the factory site at Des Plaines, a Chicago suburb some 35 minutes' ride from the city, the original buildings as shown in the illustration herewith occupying an area of 140x200 feet, exclusive of power house, coal shed and boiler rooms, with track accommodations on the Soo and Chicago & Northwestern Railroads. One of the best features of this establishment is a concrete loading platform running the entire length of the factory level with the floors of the cars and the buildings so that loading and unloading can be done at a minimum expenditure of time and labor. Another very important feature is a concrete cistern in two sections with capacity for 150,000 gallons. This was built for the storage of rain water from the buildings to be used in the boilers and to insure protection against fire.

Compared with the home factory at Irvington, N. Y., where there are something like 300 employees, this to many will seem a small place, but there is plenty of room for its development and even now the work of extension has begun, additions nearing completion increasing the plant to double its original capacity, with a force of 80 employees. The present plans include the addition of a foundry and boiler shop next year. The extent of the firm's operations may be imagined when it is stated that for some years the annual business has exceeded $1,000,000. In the boiler department another idea of the business may be gleaned from the item of 4,000 boilers turned out of the firm's factories and sold in one year, this total including residence as well as greenhouse boilers. In addition to structures required for plant life this firm has built greenhouses for many other purposes, including swimming baths, winter tennis courts and for the purifying of oils and the bleaching of ivory.

The Tale of the Christmas Tree.

Roared the wind and rolled the wave
That buried a helpless crew
And a Christmas ship in a Christmas grave
Beneath the fathoms blue.
(And marking the grave on the breaking sea
There tossed alone a Christmas tree.)

Spinning and spinning around it sped
Along with the sweeping lee,
Leaving behind the sunken dead
Deep in an inland sea.
(Till dripping and sogged the waters bore
A Christmas tree to the leeward shore.)

Dripping and green on the sands it lay Bright with the drying foam,
Till a fisherman came and took it away
To his two little boys at home.
(And, my, how they laughed in childish glee
At the sight of the beautiful Christmas tree!)

Lighted with candles and laden with toys
Gaily and proudly it stands
On Christmas eve, and the fisherman's boys
Are clapping their little hands.
(And this is the tale of the Christmas tree That came from the grave in an inland sea.)
—Ben Hecht.

Captain Herman Schuenemann.

Captain Herman Schuenemann, for many years a familiar figure in the Chicago trade, is reported dead—drowned with his crew, his partner, Captain Nelson, and the latter's wife, in the treacherous waters of Lake Michigan which already had claimed a brother, Captain August Schuenemann. A common story, this of a lake captain and his crew. Sad to their friends and relatives, and yet all too common for the world to give more than a passing thought and utter a perfunctory "too bad!" Sailors are peculiarly subject to the vicissitudes of life, and sooner or later the waters they love exact their toll of a large proportion of them. So to the world at large the breaking up of a ship and the loss of the crew is "only another lake tragedy" and soon forgotten.

But Captain Schuenemann was not an ordinary lake captain engaging in an ordinary freighting business, and this Christmas in hundreds of homes when the family gathers round the Christmas tree or the dinner table there will be sorrow for the lost captain, even though his face was not known to those present. Captain Schuenemann's business was the gathering of Christmas trees, bouquet green and boughs for cemeteries. Each year, at the most dangerous season, he scoured the upper reaches of the lake, defying the storms of late November that children of all ages might have their Christmas tree. Each fall for years he had tied up his schooner, the Rouse Simmons, at the Clark street bridge, loaded to the gunwales with Christmas trees and happiness for little children and big children who had not forgotten. But this year there will be no Rouse Simmons and no Captain Schuenemann at Clark street, and though there will be Christmas trees they will bring with them the sobering thought that there will be no more Christmases in this world for the man who had helped to make Christmas happy for so many others.

Captain Schuenemann, Captain Nelson, Mrs. Nelson and the crew, seventeen souls in all, set sail from Manistique, Mich., November 21. Ordinarily they would have returned to Chicago two days later. Since that time, however, nothing has been heard from the "Christmas ship" and quantities of wreckage and greens washed ashore near Pentwater, Mich., and Two Rivers, Wis., point to the loss of a vessel, and the Rouse Simmons is the only craft unaccounted for. Positive proof of their drowning is lacking, but that any of the seventeen will ever be seen alive again is almost past hope.

The gathering, transporting and selling of Christmas trees is a business, of course. Captain Schuenemann was engaged in the work to make money, and it is as a commercial venture that a paper devoted to commercial affairs is most interested in his operations. Yet, at this season of the year, it is peculiarly appropriate that the other side of business should not be forgotten. For back of the sale of flowers and greens and Christmas trees is something better than money, and if this were not so there would be no flowers and Captain Herman Schuenemann.

Christmas trees, there would be no money for flowers and Christmas trees, there would be no money at all. If there were nothing better than money back of all the hustle and worry of the business world there would be no incentive to hustle or worry.

And while Captain Schuenemann was a business man, he was something more, and that is the reason his death has brought sorrow to thousands who never saw him. That is why thousands will venerate this big strong Viking of the inland seas who yearly braved death in an old-fashioned vessel at the worst time of the year—a modern, Christianized Viking, bringing instead of war and plunder, a message of "peace on earth, good will toward men."

Mrs. Schuenemann and family, it is understood, will carry on the Clark street bridge business in Christmas trees and greens.

The Late Charles Dingee.

In the death of Charles Dingee at West Grove, Pa., November 28, notice of which appeared in our last week's issue, the flower and nursery trades lost one of their most noteworthy personalities. Mr. Dingee was born in Lancaster County, Pa., January 1, 1825, and spent virtually his entire life in horticultural and kindred pursuits. His early apprenticeship was served under Edward Jessup, one time a noted nurseryman of York, Pa. At the age of 25 he, with his brother-in-law, Isaac Jackson, established the Harmony Grove Nurseries at West Grove. This was in 1850, and twenty-two years later, 1872, he incorporated the present Dingee & Conard Co.

Coincident with the incorporation of the firm he had established, Mr. Dingee inaugurated the present widespread system of shipping young roses by mail and issued the first catalogue of mail order plants. This was the first attempt of delivery by this method made by the trade and was not looked on with favor at the time. A few years later the company began advertising extensively and in a short time had put West Grove on the map. The results were such that the Post Office Department, astonished at the amount of business done, sent a special inspector to see if everything in connection with the business was run honestly and within the law. The inspector returned to Washington with the report that all was run legitimately and above board, and that the Dingee & Conard firm enjoyed a fine reputation at home as well as in other states. Since then this system of shipping roses has become general, the Dingee & Conard Co. great and well known, and the late Mr. Dingee the recipient of many honors from the Rose Growers' Association of America.

Mr. Dingee was prominent during the stirring events of the Civil War and afterwards, and was a warm personal friend of Thaddeus Stevens, Secretary Cameron and Wayne McVeigh, attorney general in President Cleveland's cabinet. He was the last living witness of the Christiana riot which brought nearer the regrettable but inevitable conflict between the North and South. He was founder of the National Bank of West Grove and a leader in the affairs of his town. He traveled extensively during the later years of his life, both in America and abroad. Among his close personal friends also in the trade were Peter Henderson, Patrick Barry and the elder Downing.

Mr. Dingee married Elizabeth Jackson of West Grove sixty-five years ago. She died in 1881, leaving two children, Wm. J. Dingee and Mary D. Dingee. His second wife, who survives him, was Mary E. Lynch. To this union was born a daughter, Marion, now the wife of George Barnard, New Castle, Ind., where the firm has a branch. On his retirement in 1903 the business was turned over to Patrick J. Lynch and Henry Lynch. Mr. Dingee was a member of the Society of Friends.

COLDER weather will render necessary extra care in packing plant shipments.

ERNEST BENARY'S fine colored plate this year shows American perpetual carnations in fine form and variety.

WE are in receipt of an excellent bulletin on "Hardy Roses in Canada" by Prof. W. T. Macoun, of the Dominion experiment gardens, at Ottawa, Ont.

SHIPPERS of imported plants as well as nursery stock are all insisting that American buyers accept the risk of damage because of the action of local state inspectors.

Personal.

E. H. Cushman, of Sylvania, O., is making a trip to California.

J. C. Vaughan has been invited to act as juror at the next International horticultural exposition to be held at Ghent, Belgium, in April next.

White Medal Award For 1912.

The trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have awarded the George Robert White medal of honor for the year 1912 to Michael H. Walsh of Woods Hole, Mass. This is the fourth award of this medal by the Society. The medal is voted annually for eminent service in horticulture. Mr. Walsh is the originator of many new and valuable varieties of roses known and highly appreciated the world over.

Street Car Causes Serious Loss.

The ends of three greenhouses were completely demolished and many valuable Christmas and other plants and flowers destroyed December 4 when a street car left the track and crashed into the buildings of John H. Walker, of Youngstown, O. An attempt to run the car down a hill with only the hand brake working is said to have been the cause. About thirty feet of the ends of the glass structures was destroyed and the loss was a heavy one. Besides the destruction of the glass and the plants the heating system was put out of commission, a serious thing to occur at this time of year. Rare palms and other tropical plants, some of them almost impossible to replace, are said to have been included in the loss.

We sympathize with Mr. Walker in the loss which he must have sustained through the accident at this season when his stock is of the greatest value.

Study of Soils.

A recent press notice issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, on the "Study of the Soils," contains some very interesting material for the grower of both outside and indoor stock. "The old idea of soil investigation," according to a Department bulletin which the circular quotes, "was to collect samples, examine them in the laboratory and see what differences could there be determined; the newer idea is to study the characteristics and properties of soils in the field, classify them according to obvious differences, and with this information in hand, use the laboratory as a means of ascertaining the cause of such variations as can not be determined in the field.

"Since the soil varies so much as regards both its organic and inorganic constituents, marked differences in character must necessarily result from the almost indefinite number of combinations which may be found. All these differences, however, may be traced to two sets of factors: First, the character of the rock or material from which the soil has been derived; and, second, the processes or agencies by means of which this material has been changed from mere rock or rock debris into a medium suitable for the growth of plants."

The Crime of Artificial Flowers.

"How long have you been working here?" asked Elizabeth C. Watson, investigator for the Wagner Factory Commission, of a four-year-old child she found toiling in a tenement house cigarette factory.

"Ever since I was," was the reply of the tired toddler as she looked up into the face of her interrogator.

And nobody laughed when this testimony was given to the commission by Miss Watson this morning. The tragedy of child slavery, which has been brought home to New York City this week by the investigations of this commission, took all the humor out of that little one's answer. It was a pitiful line in a most pitiful tragedy.

These children are virtually slaves. Miss Watson testified. They are the victims of contractors, who take the work of rolling cigarettes, cutting out embroidery, making artificial flowers, and a hundred other industries from the manufacturers at a contract price and then hire these tiny workers in their own homes to do it for half the contract price or less. This is the horrible "padrone system" which is flourishing in New York.

For instance, one of these contractors took work from the manufacturer at 75 cents a unit, and paid the families who did the work 25 cents a unit for the work, thus making a profit of 50 cents on every dozen or gross they turned out—whatever the unit might be.—New York Globe.

The Late Francis Fillmore.

Francis Fillmore, father of F. J. Fillmore, head of the flower firm of F. J. Fillmore & Son, St. Louis, Mo., died the latter part of last week at the age of 87. Mr. Fillmore was born at Wimbledon, England, May 25, 1825, and came to American in April, 1870, locating first at Topeka, Kan. From there he went to Lawrence in the same state, where he was joined by his wife and seven children. He engaged in vegetable gardening until 1873 when he went to St. Louis and took up work in landscaping. Later he reentered the vegetable growing business, this time with his sons. On the death of the youngest he again retired from this line and for about 18 years was actively engaged at Tower Grove Park. He was hale and strong despite his advanced age until a short time ago. Mr. Fillmore leaves a son, four daughters, fifteen grandchildren and twenty-one great grandchildren. The funeral was held December 9.

Boston.PRICES SOMEWHAT LOWER.

The warm weather and the usual aftermath of a holiday has left its impression on the market. There is no glut but values have fallen somewhat. Violets are the worst sufferers. Carnations, though scarce, have come down from the high mark they were at. At present there is an indication of a somewhat shortage of roses for Christmas, many of the roses being off crop. Carnations are coming in more freely, but not enough to fill large orders. Bulbs are coming in.

NOTES.

The artificial flower business isn't dead in Boston. One firm devotes a whole window to that business, showing sprays of camellias, long-stemmed chrysanthemums, roses, and carnations, and in one department store carnations are sold two for five cents, roses 5 cents each. At a distance they look like the real thing but in getting closer they spell wax. Other stores are using them for window decorations.

Mayor Fitzgerald proposes to have a horticultural department in the Fenway. He proposes to build a large range of greenhouses, in keeping with Boston's park department, so that people can go and see and study floriculture at all seasons of the year. This is a step in the direction of helping our business if we look at it that way.

There has been no consolidation of the two markets yet. The members of the old market are to move into their new quarters about Feb. 1.

MAC.

Kansas City.THANKSGIVING VERY SATISFACTORY.

Thanksgiving week was most satisfactory in every way, although the big football game did not take place here. The demand for the big chrysanthemums cleaned the market. Flowers of all kinds have hardly been equal to the demand. A shortage in the carnation supply is quickly felt when the chrysanthemum crop is over. The mild weather seems to affect the pink Killarney. The local product is of a very pale color. San Francisco violets are being handled by the corner stands in great quantities at three bunches (150 violets) for 50 cents. The local growers find this obstacle too great to overcome and several have discontinued growing them.

NOTES.

The range of 10,000 feet recently completed by S. B. Ayres, Independence drive, will be devoted exclusively to sweet peas. Mr. Ayres is distinctly one of the younger ones but has learned that undivided attention to a specialty with liberal advertising will always succeed. His new varieties offered are the result of several years' work.

The big storage oil tanks recently installed at The Rosery furnishes fuel for 40 days at a filling. E. E. Ellsworth says that oil when properly used, even at $1.10 a barrel, is only half the price of coal at $4.25 a ton and the heat is better.

Another addition to the florists' line is R. C. Peacock, who has recently completed two houses, aggregating 5,000 feet, on the Independence road. The land is in shape for more houses another year. Bedding stock will be grown.

We regret to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. John Stevens December 1. Mr. Stevens has himself been under a physician's care and the two little children will need more than sympathy for several years to come.

A showy display can be seen in the Grand Avenue Cut Flower Co.'s establishment. Basket novelties seem to predominate. The demand for these goods is filling up the shelves and will soon empty them.

G. E. Stempel has leased the Hariman plant, consisting of 10,000 feet of glass, and will grow a general assortment of flowers for the wholesale trade.

Recent visitors were: Martin Reukauf, with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Robt. Newcomb, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago.

One veteran florist, R. S. Brown, has been quite ill.

What has become of the proposed florists' club?

K. C. M.

Rochester, N. Y.CARNATIONS STILL SCARCE.

The continued fine weather has been made use of the last two weeks. Most of the stores which carried bulbs have found their stock getting low. This has been an unusually good season for this line of goods. Business is good and all of the florists are looking forward to a very busy holiday. Christmas greens have arrived in good condition and the quality is also good. Retailers have experienced a busy week with funerals and weddings. Carnations seem just as scarce as of late while azalea blooms are used for design work very frequently. Roses are good in all kinds and grades. Violets, English and California are large and arrive full of perfume. Valley, too, is exceptionally fine and sells well. The market is not so full of chrysanthemums now, they having come to their last stage. Greens of all kinds are very plentiful.

NOTES.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Ontario County Fruit Growers' Association, held at the court house, Canandaigua, with A. B. Katkamier, president, in the chair. A discussion on small fruits was led by John Wright of East Bloomfield, who talked on currants. Wm. L. McKay of Geneva spoke on gooseberries, George Buckalew, of Bristol, on raspberries and the president on strawberries.

The store of Salter Brothers, West Main street, was robbed and the cash register cleared of $20 much like the robbery at H. E. Wilson's, the thief gaining entrance through the transom. Salter Bros' store has been repainted for the holidays.

Henry P. Neun had a fine wedding decoration at the Central Presbyterian Church on December 3. H. B. Jones of the Jones-Russell Co., Cleveland, Ohio, came to the city specially to make up 8 bouquets for the same wedding.

An extension school is to be held at East Bloomfield in March, arrangements having been made with the authorities of Cornell University.

George T. Boucher is receiving a large shipment of poinsettias, Glorie de Lorraine begonias and cyclamen.

H. E. Wilson has an attractive window for the holidays. The color scheme is red and green.

Edwin C. Armbrust is now with one of the leading florists in Springfield, Mass.

Charles H. Vick has been called to serve on the trial jury.

Albany, N. Y.CLUB MEETING.

At the December meeting of the Albany Florists' Club the following ticket was placed in nomination for the election to be held the evening of January 2, 1913: For president, Frederick Henkes; vice-president, Frank R. Bilson; treasurer, Patrick Hyde; secretary, Robert Davidson; trustees for two years, E. P. Meany, Thomas F. Tracey, and R. W. Bilson. Upon invitation of Thomas F. Tracey the club voted to accept his offer to hold its regular meetings in the store of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, 76 Maiden Lane, of which he is manager. The club had as visitors Patrick Welch of Boston, Stephen C. Green of Philadelphia; William C. Cahill of Boston, and W. B. Cook of New York. Short addresses were made by Welch, Green and Cook. Cahill entertained with a recitation which was well received. Mr. Cook said that he had been in many places and wanted to commend the Albany florists for their window decorations and the way they keep up their stores.

The Albany Cut Flower Exchange was incorporated on December 6 with a capital stock of $25,000; principal office at 76 Maiden Lane. The officers are: Edward P. Tracey, president; Thomas F. Tracey, vice-president; Patrick Welch of Boston, treasurer. The Exchange has added an attractive display of florists' supplies for Christmas.

Nashville.WEEK'S TRADE GOOD.

A good general trade has characterized the past week. The chrysanthemums are about finished with. The usual round of social gaiety, parties, weddings and other affairs have kept all reasonably busy.

NOTES.

McIntyre Bros. say they have been almost too busy to think about the holidays since their move to the new West End Store. They are more than satisfied with their trade, and their new place of business. The roses at the new place are doing well and they already have a fine output.

Geny Bros. say they have a magnificent lot of everything and their cut flower supply is very promising, while in pot flowers they have everything that is needed for a brisk demand. They will have plenty of violets and lots of carnations and poinsettias.

The Joy Floral Company has already begun to book orders and are looking forward to a great Christmas rush, for which they are splendidly prepared. Their stock is in fine shape and they expect to have a tremendous cut for the holidays.

L. H. Haury & Sons are expecting a big trade. They have opened up a fine line of Christmas baskets. They have had a very satisfactory trade in cut flowers and decorations.

The Garland Concrete Bench and Post Forms.

Complete Outfit For a Short Time Only, $40.00 Per Set. Order Your Set To-Day.

As the concrete used in these benches is mixed semi-dry and rammed into the molds, they can at once be removed, as there is no waiting for cement to set. This also makes the bench blocks more porous, so that they will absorb water and insure perfect drainage. This is one of the features which should not be overlooked. Wet molded, or one piece benches do not absorb water.

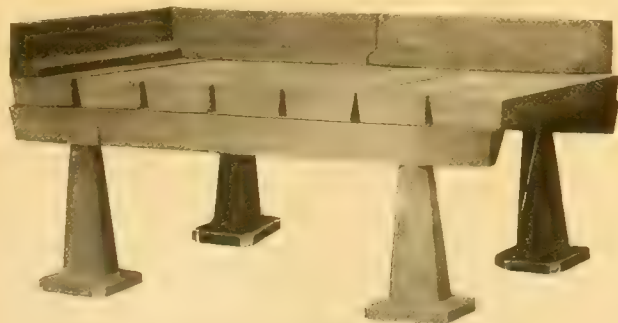

The cost of material and labor, including setting this bench up, ready for filling, is about six cents per square ft., or $30.00 per 100 lineal ft. for 5 ft. bench; as one set of molds is sufficient for a moderate size plant, the cost of apparatus is insignificant when compared with the price asked for the bench clamps and post molds necessary to construct a one piece bench.

As we are placing our complete outfit on the market at $40.00 per set, which places it within the reach of all enterprising growers; and as our bench is portable when once constructed, it is always a live asset, and does not have to be broken up at considerable expense, and relegated to the rubbish pile, but can be reconstructed when remodeling your houses, and the convenience in repairing leaking pipes and numerous other points of advantage will be appreciated. Upon sending us your order, we will mail you full instructions for the mixing of cement and operation of our molds.

The outfit for making this bench, consists of 1 Post Mold, 1 Stringer Mold, 1 Slab Mold and 1 Side Mold. With these four molds you can get from 4 to 5 hundred pieces per day, working one man for each mold. As the blocks when made semi-dry increase in strength with age, it is necessary that they be made at least 60 days before using.

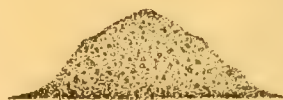

The rapidity with which this bench can be erected when it becomes necessary to tear out an old bench will be appreciated, when time is important. These bench blocks should be made during the winter months and have them on hand, so that two men can set them up as fast as two men will remove the old bench and level the old ground.

The bench can be erected in less time than is required to set up the sub-frame, or mold, for a one piece bench.

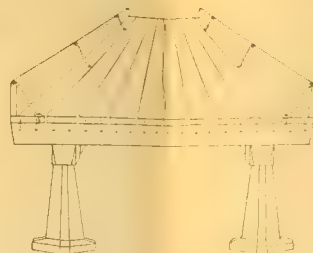

The above cut is a cross section of one of our benches, showing construction. Note perfect drainage, total height using 17 inch post 30 inch.

CONCRETE POSTS

Two men can make 125 to 150 POSTS a day.

Use the following proportions for mixing, figuring that one bag of cement contains three buckets

Cinders	13
Old Propagating Sand	8
Cement	3—equals 25 posts.

125 Posts requires 5 bags cement at $1.60 per bbl.	$2.00
125 Posts requires 2 laborers at $1.75 per day	3.50
Cinders and Propagating Sand cost nothing	0.00

Which makes your POSTS cost you 4.4 cents apiece. $5.50

They will last a life time. No post holes to dig. Post has a 10-inch base, sets on top of ground.

What are your posts costing you? We only sell the MOLDS—you do the rest.

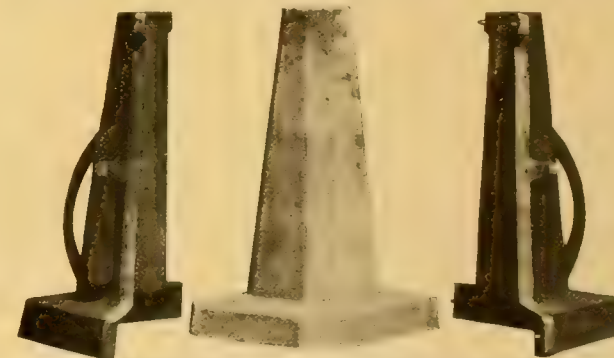

These Post Forms are made in 2 sizes, 17 inches and 25 inches; any height post can be made from the 25-inch form by placing a block in the small end.

FOR ALL KINDS OF GREENHOUSE MATERIAL WRITE TO

GARLAND PLACED THE FIRST CONCRETE BENCH ON THE MARKET and it is one of the few which have been found O. K. by the leading florists of this country. S. A. Jamieson, recently with the Universal Portland Cement Co., is now connected with our company and is ready to answer all questions pertaining to use of cement. Mr. Jamieson has given illustrated lectures on the uses of cement in greenhouses before several of the Florists' Clubs in the middle west, and his lectures show that he thoroughly understands his business. He called on the florist trade exclusively while in the cement business and was quick to see the wonderful future of the concrete bench. Concrete benches have come into general use and are giving excellent results. It is a very common occurrence to hear that stock grown on concrete benches has won first prize at some flower show, so get one of our outfits and build your own concrete benches. Remember Mr. Jamieson is always ready to give advice on the use of cement.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We have recently opened branch offices in several of the large cities and earnestly request all growers who are planning on building to write to our office in their vicinity or if possible call and see our representative and get our plans and estimates before placing your order. MEANS & THACHER, Boston, Mass., represent us in the East; C. C. SHAFER, Los Angeles, Calif., in the southwest, and S. A. JAMIESON, Minneapolis, Minn., in the northwest.

Wietor Bros.' stock is arriving in fine condition, especially the American Beauty roses which are now just coming in. N. J. Wietor says that his firm is going to have a larger supply of stock this Christmas than it did last year, especially in American Beauty, Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, My Maryland and Sunburst roses. Orders have been coming in in every mail and the outlook for a big trade at this house is very bright.

H. Van Gelder, with Percy Jones, is not on the sick list as was mentioned in one of the trade papers last week but is pretty much alive and attending to business every day as usual. The item was really amusing but the writer probably had reference to some one else and not Mr. Van Gelder. The outlook at this house for a brisk trade in both the cut flower and supply departments for the holidays never was brighter.

Peter Reinberg will have American Beauties in large supply for Christmas and will also have plenty of roses. The stock throughout the Reinberg range is in fine condition and promises a good steady cut. Tim Matchen says the Christmas orders are commencing to arrive at the store and that several large ones have already been booked.

John Kruchten disposes of his choice home grown gardenias about as fast as they arrive at the store. The flowers are now extra large and are of unsurpassed quality. A visit to Mr. Kruchten's father's place, the Nic. Kruchten range, in Bowmanville, found the carnation crops in fine condition with a good cut promised for the holidays.

Erne & Klingel are filling a large number of local and shipping orders for all kinds of stock and are still showing some fine American Beauty roses. In addition to a full line of cut flowers, this firm will have plenty of green goods for the holiday season.

Zoeck & Mann had a good call for stock all this week, especially on December 9, when the shipping trade was very brisk. This firm is making preparations for a big Christmas trade and expects to be well fixed on all kinds of stock, especially roses.

Winterson's Seed Store has taken on a holiday appearance and a crew of girls is busy preparing the Christmas greens for holiday use. The cut flower department will be on deck as in former years with a supply of seasonable cut flowers.

George M. Garland and wife left on December 10 for a three weeks' visit at San Antonio, Texas. Mrs. Garland has not been well for some time and the trip was taken mainly for the benefit of her health.

Hoerber Bros. will have a good cut of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses for the holidays, according to Harry Manheim, who visited his firm's greenhouses at Des Plaines, on December 8.

George Stollery will be a candidate for alderman in the twenty-fifth ward. It is understood that Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, will again be a candidate for the same office in his ward.

C. F. McCormick, with the A. L. Randall Co., is back from a successful trip through the northwest. W. W. Randall is also back from a trip and will help out at the store during the holiday rush.

Raymond V. Kester, with the Hill-Heller Co., Indianapolis, Ind., was in the city on business this week. He placed a large order for baskets with the Raedlein Basket Co., for his holiday trade.

M. C. Gunterberg is featuring some fine winter berries, violets and roses. She is still nursing a sore thumb which was injured a few weeks ago.

The Alpha Floral Co. is making a grand display of blooming plants and cut flowers at its store on South Wabash avenue.

O. Johnson is supplying the Batavia Greenhouse Co.'s customers with a fine grade of American Beauty roses.

Joseph Trinz, with Lubliner & Trinz, has returned from an enjoyable visit with his folks in the east.

Kyle & Foerster are having a good call for American Beauty roses right along.

H. Wittbold is kept on the jump nowadays with decorations of all kinds.

The dance given by the Cook County Florists' Association at the Bush Temple Hall on December 4, was largely attended and everyone present had a most enjoyable time. George Wienhoeber and wife led the grand march which was the feature of the evening. H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, came here purposely for the dance, returning home the following day. Allie Zech, Otto Goerish, Wm. Graff, Eddie Schultz and A. C. Kohlbrand of the sports and pastimes committee, had charge of the arrangements and presented each lady with a handsome souvenir in honor of the occasion.

Herbert E. Griffin and Miss Magdalene Bald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Bald of Sheridan Park, will be married some time next month. Mr. Griffin is well known and very popular with the local trade, especially among the wholesale men. Miss Bald took the part of Queen Isabella in the landing day at Grant Park, on October 12, and in the same celebration last year. The members of N. J. Wietor's Pikers' Club are afraid that Mr. Griffin will not find time to accompany them on their next fishing trip, which will indeed be a great disappointment.

The A. Dietsch Co. is supplying the material for 10 new houses 15x100 feet for Chamberlain Bros., of Denver, Colo. This firm is also furnishing the material for 2 new houses for the Farmers' Nursery Co., of Troy, O.

The John C. Moninger Co. shipped a carload of material this week to Bassett & Washburn for their new chrysanthemum houses at the new Greggs station range.

John Canger with Canger & Bergmann, says that everything is going along lovely at their new store and that table decorations are keeping him busy.

Dwight L. Harris, of the Pulverized Manure Co., says that trade is quiet just now but that the season on the whole has been a very satisfactory one.

The E. C. Amling Co. is showing fancy Radiance roses grown by Wendland & Keimel of Elmhurst.

Weiland & Risch are in good crop with roses and report a brisk demand for stock in general.

Sinner Bros. are cutting Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses of good quality.

The stock in J. A. Budlong's greenhouses is in fine shape and a good cut of roses in general is assured for the holidays. Richmond is in fine condition here and this firm will have a good supply of these flowers for Christmas. A good crop of short stemmed American Beauty roses is visible and Killarney and White Killarney will be in good supply. Radiance, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Melody and Killarney Queen are also grown and My Maryland has found a permanent home here. Lily of the valley is grown extensively and the cut will be large for some time. A good trade has been built up on their blue ribbon brand and a regular list of customers now use this grade. Phil. Schupp has been devoting most of his time to the greenhouses since A. H. Budlong's absence and has proved to be as good a grower as he is a store manager. Really, one would believe as he escorts you through the houses that he likes the growing end of the business best. The carnation range is also looking fine and while the carnations will not be in full crop for the holidays the cut will be quite large.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is going to give its annual excursion to its greenhouses at Joliet, next Wednesday, December 18, when the trade is cordially invited to see their new scarlet carnation. The Herald, growing. Everyone will be supplied with tickets on the train and luncheon will be served in the greenhouses.

Bassett & Washburn have a fine cut of American Beauty roses that are exceptionally fine and a good supply of all other seasonable stock. The firm's rose crops will be in fine shape for Christmas, especially Richmond and their favorite rose, Rhea Reid.

Kennicott Bros. Co. expects to have a good supply of White Bonaffon and Helen Frick chrysanthemums for Christmas. E. E. Pieser thinks that boxwood is going to be a scarce article on this market and looks for an advance in price soon.

The Raedlein Basket Co. is doing a big holiday business and the force is now working overtime to fill orders. This firm's new Christmas red is making quite a hit with the trade.

George C. Hartung, the Kensington florist, reports a brisk Thanksgiving trade in blooming plants and decorative stock. Cyclamens and begonias were sold out at good prices.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the Crystal room of the Hotel Sherman Thursday evening, December 5, President Foley in the chair. The principal business of the evening was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: G. W. French, president; Alex. Henderson, vice-president; E. F. Winterson, treasurer; Wilder S. Deamud, secretary. H. N. Bruns was elected to succeed himself as trustee, the holdover trustees being George Asmus and C. L. Washburn.

Refreshments were served and later the members, with their ladies and friends, proceeded to the Boston theatre on Clark street, where President Vincent of the Society of American Florists gave his interesting lecture on the London international flower show, supplemented with views of the Dutch bulb fields and other European scenes of horticultural interest. The visitors included E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Va., and R. V. Kester, Indianapolis, Ind.

W. J. Keimel, of Wendland & Keimel, exhibited a nice vase of Milady, the new red rose which has attracted so much attention recently, and says that, next to Richmond, it is the best red rose we have for color and is very promising as a producer.

NEGAUNEE, MICH.—The proprietors of the Negaunee Greenhouses estimate their business for the year as from 20 to 25 per cent in excess of any similar period. Something like 50 per cent of the cut flowers and plants disposed of are shipped to outside points.

CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

The market condition seems to remain practically unchanged with a scarcity in carnations which has increased the demand for roses. There has not been much bulb stock arriving at the present time but there are plenty of stevia and greens. A few sweet peas are arriving and violets are still bringing a good price. There is enough lily of the valley to fill all orders.

NOTES.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. has had a very good season and the firm is now devoting its attention to the holiday business. The Thanksgiving trade with this firm was the best in years and much better than was expected. Mr. Pollworth in speaking of the St. Paul flower show says he was surprised to see such a large number of fine chrysanthemum plants on exhibit, for there are very few grown now here.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. have a fine assortment of blooming plants for Christmas and are featuring a fine grade of cyclamen and azaleas. They are now disposing of a fine grade of araucarias and pandanus and will have a good cut of Killarney and White Killarney roses for the holidays. Their Watertown violets continue to arrive in A1 quality and are having a good sale.

At the meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club the annual election of officers took place, as follows: A. Leidiger, president; George Holton, vice-president; E. Oestrecker, secretary; J. Livingston, treasurer; C. C. Pollworth, trustee for three years.

Gust Rusch & Co. received their first shipment of boxwood and red berries, the red berries being as fine as any seen on this market for some time. This firm reports good business.

Manke Bros. have a very fine growth of carnations and all indications are that there will be a shortage on red and Enchantress for Christmas but a good cut of white.

The Heitman-Oestrecker Co. is cutting some very fine carnations which find ready sale. This firm expects a fine cut for the Christmas trade.

A. Reinhardt's greenhouses have improved considerably both in appearance and in stock. He expects a good cut for the holidays.

WHOLESALE HOUSES BUSY.

The weather is cool and clear. Greens, lycopodium, holly, boxwood, etc., are seen everywhere and the wholesale houses are doing a rushing business in ruscus and holiday goods. Chrysanthemums are about over but a few stragglers will probably hang on till Christmas. Carnations are coming in more freely but prices are stiff. Quite a number of American Beauty roses are coming in shapeless and bull-headed. Violets and sweet peas are improving daily and find good sale although the peas do not as yet show very good quality. NOTES.

Ostertag Bros. had the largest decoration in years for the coming out of Miss Marie Busch, Friday. The ball was given at Sunset Inn in the country. The decorations were superb, including 60 cases of wild smilax, 700 strings of smilax, 250 selected palms, 3,600 select Pink Killarney roses, 800 long-stemmed beauties, and a profusion of pink and white orchids and gardenias. Vases of flowers, shower bouquets and wonderful decorations were seen in the dining room. In the ball room, stairway and corridors, there were special decorations of birchwood, American Beauty roses and asparagus. The debutante bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley cost $100.

Geo. H. Angermueller has a fine supply of orchids, American Beauty roses and other flowers. His Christmas supply of novelties is unlimited and his stock in general is of the very best.

The meeting next Thursday of the St. Louis Florists' Club promises to be one of unusual interest. Sixty members are invited to the Shaw banquet in the evening.

The Wm. G. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is doing an immense trade in cut flowers of local production. This firm is also very heavily stocked in Christmas goods.

Charlie Young and Wm. C. Smith will entertain R. Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., during his visit next Thursday.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is receiving a good supply of especially fine lily of the valley and roses.

Samuel Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros., New York, is with us. He is doing a rushing business.

Edw. L. Loyet has sold out to Julius Schaeffer, formerly with the Ayres Floral Co.

Fred Alves, manager at Geo. H. Angermueller's, has been serving on jury duty all week.

BUSINESS GOOD.

Business has been good and the demand seems to increase as Christmas approaches, and although flowers are not overplentiful the day's sales are steadily climbing owing to the large quantities of Christmas supplies, such as boxwood, immortelles, etc., being sold. American Beauties are at present as good as have ever been seen on this market and the demand keeps them pretty well cleaned up. Short roses are far short of the demand. Aaron Ward roses, calandula, orchids, sweet peas, etc., can only be supplied in limited quantities at present, but Christmas promises to see these flowers in sufficient supply to meet all demands. Carnations remain the same, good stock but scarce. Asparagus plumosus and sprengeri are shortening up in supply. Adiantum is plentiful. There are a few chrysanthemums still arriving such as Jeanne Nonin and Helen Frick and bring a fair price. Easter lilies still seem scarce. Callas, although more plentiful, are short of the demand. Paper White narcissus and stevia help in the absence of short roses and carnations. Violets are good in quality and the demand is all that can be desired. Careful and conservative retailers are ordering their supply of cut flowers now so as to be protected when there is a shortage in any particular flower.

censed firemen on all boilers, both day and night. This is a hard blow for the small grower who fires his own boilers, necessitating at least one licensed fireman at union wages, unless he wants to work 24 hours a day, which he cannot do and attend to his stock. The questions asked are such as really do not belong to greenhouse firing, and all answers have to be written out, which makes it harder. The greenhouse men are all practical firemen and perhaps there are some who cannot explain and answer questions on paper who could take a boiler apart and put it together again as good as new. There are two or three growers who did not pass the examinations and unless they study up and try again will be put to quite an expense. There were also a few of the growers arrested and compelled to pay fines from $10.00 to $25.00 for not having a license to fire boilers.

The Penn Square Floral Co. and the Hough Avenue Flower Shop were the victims last week of a short change artist. His methods are original. He orders about a dollar's worth of cut flowers to be sent to a certain number of some nearby street, and requests the store man to send a boy with change for a five or ten dollar bill. Then he meets the boy on the street, takes the flowers and the five or ten dollars in change and hands the boy an envelope supposed to contain the five or ten dollar bill, and requests the boy not to open until he gets back to the store as he may lose it. On opening the envelope the store man finds a piece of worthless paper. C. F. B.

WEEK'S BUSINESS ORDINARY.

Last week's market proved as a whole to be only ordinary. The start on Monday was splendid but after that day everything eased up very rapidly. The warm, bright weather brought in an extra heavy cut of flowers. The demand was not sufficient to maintain a good price. The supply of every seasonable flower is good with the exception of carnations. At present the supply of these is just about sufficient to take care of the demand for them. The demand for Christmas decorative material is enormous and at present the wholesalers are kept very busy filling orders from both the local and the out-of-town florists.

SOCIETY BANQUET.

The banquet given by the local florists' society at the Bennet house was a very successful one. The attendance was good and every one was pleased. Richard Vincent, Jr.'s, talk on the International Flower Show, the Holland bulb fields and his own place at White Marsh, Md., was very interesting and was enjoyed by everyone. The only regret expressed was that the limited time did not allow Mr. Vincent to go as much into details as his listeners would have liked. During the evening the guests were entertained by songs by Miss McNally, Miss Weber and, with Miss Ida Peterson accompanying him on the piano, Frank Volz. President Gus Adrian of the Cincinnati Florists' Society welcomed the guests and introduced Chas. H. Hoffmeister who acted as toastmaster.

BETTER THAN LAST YEAR.

The weather for the past two months has been glorious. All the merchants take a decidedly cheerful view of the situation and feel that the good business we have been enjoying for some time past will continue. The volume of business done Thanksgiving, as near as can be ascertained, was about one-fourth larger than last year. Chrysanthemums took the lead in demand. There was an ample supply of them, but medium prices prevailed. Carnations were practically out of the market with only a few to be had. Roses brought $1 to $1.50 a dozen, double violets $2 a hundred. The call for pompons is on the wane and they went begging.

NOTES.

Fred Heinel has put on a new commercial auto for delivery. Their new place is looking fine. Part of the poinsettias are in bloom now but there will be plenty for Christmas. Edgar Webb has charge of the new place.

Chrysanthemums are almost gone. There are still a few Bonnaffons and Rosetta and Jeanne Nonin is still seen in quantity. This week will about end them up. From all accounts the chrysanthemums have paid well, there being but one bad time, the second week in November, when the weather was too warm. Everything was in full supply last week except on Saturday, when the white roses shortened up and there was some disappointment. Prices are advancing, owing partly to better quality and to the rapidly nearing holidays. Roses have improved materially the past two weeks. This is noticeable more particularly with the newer yellow sorts which as the plants get stronger are throwing fine shoots. Some Sunburst brought $25 a hundred last week and were quickly grabbed up at the price. Carnations are perhaps the scarcest thing in the market and are advancing rapidly in price. They are $2.00 higher than two weeks ago. Violets have been scarce, particularly the singles. New York doubles are kept in stock by the commission men and make a welcome addition. Easter lilies are plentiful and are largely used by the stores in funeral work as other white flowers are so scarce. Stevia is now at its best and is a great favorite with flower buyers. Cattleyas and gardenias are in full supply but a constant demand keeps the market even, and the prices are good.

NOTES.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a very large decoration at the Bellevue-Stratford the past week. The large ball room was decorated very lavishly with palms, cibotium ferns and tall vases of Killarney roses. There were many artistic and odd features including fountains of water with spotlights to show them off. The ceiling represented the sky on which the clouds were seen passing along. This was done by means of traveling light effects. Canary and parrot cages were suspended among the foliage. The occasion was a dinner dance, and the floor was carpeted with grass mats at first, these being removed later with the dinner tables and left free for the dancers. It was one of the most elaborate affairs ever given at this celebrated hotel and was a great credit to the decorators.

Adolph Farenwald's talk at the Florists' Club's December meeting of his visit to the home of the Mrs. Charles Russel rose, the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., was very entertaining and instructive. Speaking as a practical rosarian Mr. Farenwald says the variety is all right and will likely be seen in quan-ity next season. The club's publicity committee is now going to see if their work is appreciated by asking florists for money to push the work. Kind words and sympathy are all right in the planning, but it takes money to deliver the goods. The committee reported that it hoped to get out a good window card for Valentine day. James D. Cockroft of Northport, N. Y., exhibited a vase of his new carnation Northport, a fine flower, at this meeting.

American Beauties were the feature at the Leo Niessen Co. market last week. They are handled by the thousand and considering the supply, the record made in handling them is a credit to the house. Lady Campbell violets are also a feature.

the time these days. Load after load is sent away daily. His Christmas business is exceeding his expectations.

At M. Rice & Co.'s busy supply house the factory force is taxed to the utmost to get their orders out. Everything for Christmas seems likely to be sold out by the end of next week.

The Hudson River violets, Marie Louise, seen at Edward Reid's Ransstead store last week, were topnotchers. They move off rapidly.

The plantmen are now up to their eyes in business. Poinsettias are very fine this season and are selling almost better than anything else.

The H. A. Dreer Co. filled one of its windows recently with Cocos Weddelliana. It made a handsome display.

Berger Brothers are right in it with their boxwood, which they handled by the drayload the past week.

TRADE SOMEWHAT SLOWER.

Although business has been fair during the past week it has not kept the pace set at Thanksgiving. One reason that has been advanced for the falling off is that the weather has been too fine and has caused many people to absent themselves from their city homes for country life and outdoor sports. Nevertheless, there has been considerable business brought about by weddings and the presenting of fair debutantes. There can be no fault found with the stock on the market, for it is of good quality and there is enough to supply all demands; prices have somewhat sagged, but it cannot be said that anything is selling at a very low price. The chrysanthemums, which it was thought were pretty well cleaned up by the Thanksgiving demand, were quite plentiful on December 7. If there is any stock in reserve it is practically certain to appear on a Saturday and the rule held good on the day mentioned. In the early morning market of the Cut Flower Exchange, there were quite a number of chrysanthemums and doubtless a few will keep straggling in till Christmas. Any fears of a Christmas scarcity seem groundless. The weather has been so springlike that the Christmas crop must be well advanced and could now scarcely receive a sufficient check to have much effect on the final results.

Monday, December 9.—The week opened with a touch of real winter. The supply of stock was light, prices being firm with a slight upward tendency. No one can predict what conditions will be at the end of the week.

NOTES.

One of the interesting events for the wholesale district is the approaching marriage of Miss Frieda Behrend and Paul Meconi, which will be solemnized at the Church of the Dominican Fathers, December 14. Mr. Meconi is well and favorably known as a wholesaler, his establishment being on the ground floor of the Coogan Building. Miss Behrend has for some time been his bookkeeper. The good wishes of their many friends go with them.

A feature of the wholesale district, just now, is the fine window display of pansies in 8-inch pans at J. K. Allen's store. Most of us associate the pansies with spring, but Chas. Hunt, of Staten Island, who grows these, has got us somewhat mixed in the calendar by the great quantities he has been sending to Mr. Allen this fall, and these old favorites sell well.

Louis Dupuy, the well-known plantsman of Whitestone, who is noted for his fine quality of ericas as well as all other staple plants, has his usual good stock for Christmas. In recent years he has taken up the culture of gardenias with success and has a constant supply on the floor of the New York Cut Flower Co., where his son looks after the selling.

Leking & Winnifield have opened a retail store in Hackensack, N. J., and Fred. Leking will be their buyer in the New York market. The store will be managed by Henry Weissman, a designer of note, who was for seventeen years with the Laegers on Seventh avenue. The plant growing industry will be continued as formerly with Mr. Winnifield in charge.

James McManus is now well settled in his fine new store, 105 West Twenty-eighth street, where he removed during the past week from 55 West Twenty-eighth street. He is now right in the "busy mart of trade," has as fine a store as there is in the wholesale district and all who know him will wish him the abundant success which he deserves.

For Christmas.

The retail store of David Clarke's Sons was a very busy place on December 7. Being busy is not by any means unusual at this store, but on this day they may be said to have been rushed. More than one hundred bouquets for debutantes were made up and delivered, besides a large amount of other work.

There were many fine floral pieces at the funeral of Col. Archibald Gracie, which took place December 5. They were sent by survivors of the Titanic disaster. The terrible experience through which Col. Gracie passed at that time is fresh in the public mind, and was a contributing cause of his death.

One of the busy and handsome stores of upper Broadway is "Hartmann's Rosary," where John R. Hartmann and his capable and estimable wife with a force of assistants are constantly turning out fine work.

G. Myer, of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, has been confined to his home for the past week by a severe attack of grip, but is now much improved and hopes to be back to business this week.

John J. Foley, who has been a retail florist on the Bowery for 25 years, has removed from 226 to 230 Bowery, corner of Prince street. Mr. Foley is a designer of merit and his new location is favorable for window displays.

Wm. Pankok has an exceptionally fine stock of azaleas and poinsettias. There are many noteworthy features in his range, none more so than the Pandanus veitchii.

The Kervan Co. is particularly busy these days in preparation for the holidays. Christmas green is just as necessary as Christmas flowers and they will have plenty of it.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, had a great stock of plants when the season opened but they have been going fast. A feature of his range is the fine quality of lily of the valley.

New York Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club was held in the Grand Opera House building on the night of December 4. President Manda in the chair. It was election night and there was a very large attendance. The following officers were elected: William H. Siebrecht, president; John Donaldson, vice-president; William C. Richards, treasurer; John Young, secretary; trustees to serve two years: Charles Weathered, John Miesen, Walter F. Sheridan. While good feeling prevailed the election of president aroused great interest. On the first ballot no candidate received a sufficient number of votes to elect and a second ballot was ordered. At this juncture William Duckham, in a neat speech, retired from the contest. The second ballot, with William H. Siebrecht and Harry Bunyard as candidates resulted in the election of Mr. Siebrecht. In a clever speech, Mr. Bunyard moved to make the election unanimous. All the officers-elect were escorted to the platform and spoke briefly.

A record breaking number were proposed for membership as follows: A. N. Kinney, New York; Chas. Beekman, Elmhurst, N. Y.; Percy W. Richter, New York; Jas. McMullen, White-stone, N. Y.; C. Roselle, New York; Robt. T. Brown, Queens, N. Y.; Louis Paltre, Islip, N. Y.; Wm. McCollum, New York; Herbert Spavin, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.; Max Schling, New York; Chas. A. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.; John Condon, Brooklyn; A. H. Bobbink, Rutherford, N. J.; George Bergeoin, Kingston, N. Y.; Emerson C. McFadden, Short Hills, N. J.; H. C. Strobell, Newark, N. J.; John Kenny, New York City; Richard E. Logan, Gloversville, N. Y., was proposed for life membership.

John B. Nugent, Jr., reported for the committee negotiating with steamship lines for more careful handling of flowers delivered at steamers. Among the suggestions of steamship officials was one that a special receipt be given for all flowers so delivered. Chas. Weathered for the entertainment committee of the International Flower Show, reported progress. The committee on awards reported as follows on stock shown at November meeting: Cottage Gardens Co., for Carnation Matchless, 91 points; Chas. H. Totty, for rose Mrs. Geo. Shawyer, 91-1-6 points; Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., for carnation Wm. Eccles, a certificate of merit.

It was decided that the rose shown by J. J. Brozat, Bloomfield, N. J., was not identical with Mrs. E. Geo. Shawyer as had been claimed. Exhibits of the evening were a vase of the pink carnation Northport, by James D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y., which were very fine and much admired. Mr. Cockcroft also exhibited two cups awarded as sweepstake prizes by the Ohio State Horticultural Society. Traendly & Schenck exhibited the carnation Salmon Beauty, grown by T. E. Abrams, Blue Point, N. Y. A. N. Pierson, Inc., exhibited a fine vase of the rose Milady; Chas. H. Totty exhibited the rose Mrs. Geo. Shawyer; The Julius Roehrs Co. exhibited a vase of a new pink poinsettias. The house committee furnished the usual refreshments.

h. p. boiler for his heating plant.

During the storm of November 5 a small "twister" blew quite a lot of

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

CALIFORNIA contract seed growers are complaining of competition.

MACON, GA.—H. Wright, seedsman here, is critically ill of typhoid fever.

MILLET seed is reported a big crop in the west; prices are low and winter storage costs affect prices materially.

I. N. SIMON & SONS, Philadelphia, Pa., have their market gardeners' wholesale price list for 1913 in the mails.

JAPANESE and Portugese laborers are now getting $1.50 per day on the California seed ranches; drivers get $2 per day.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—J. E. Northrup and daughters left on December 4 for a winter trip to Jamaica, via New York.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. J. Fosgate, Santa Clara, Calif.; L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Palo Alto, Calif.

IT is understood that some of the large middle west canning concerns are growing seed peas under contract in Montana.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The Canadian government will make a free distribution of grain seeds and potatoes this winter and spring.

THE Holland bulb salesmen are out and about, the representative of John Van Leeuwen, Sassenheim, being in the first detachment.

NOTABLY low prices prevail at present on many forage crop seeds, millet, choice, being quoted as low as $1.65 per 100 pounds; kafir corn, 95 cents; cane seed around $1.50.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—S. G. Courteen's new seed warehouse and elevator is nearing completion. The building is fireproof and modern in every respect and is eight stories high.

SODUS, N. Y.—Geo. N. Negus has completed his seed shipments for the season, amounting to 23,000 pounds of beet seed, 1,000 pounds of carrot and 1,500 bushels of sweet corn.

A LEADING American grower of gladiolus says the 25 per cent duty on Gandavensis types should be restored; fifty cents per 1,000, the present duty, he says is much too low.

THE California seed growing district is so far without autumn rain. New lands which were broken up lumpy need the rain to slack the lumps. Land already in good tilth can be worked fairly well without the early rains.

SECRETARY WILSON, of the Department of Agriculture, is authority for the statement that "When the Panama canal is open for business our bulbs and beet seed will come from the Pacific coast." [The secretary is a great little seedsman.—Ed.]

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, December 11, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.—There will be a meeting of the local onion set dealers at the Sherman House Thursday, December 12, at 6 p. m.—The W. W. Barnard Co. are working day and night forces this week, shipping holly, bouquet green and other Christmas specialties.—J. C. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., who attended the canners' convention at Milwaukee last week, reports a good attendance and a bright outlook for the canners next season.—Vaughan's Seed Store have moved many of their sphagnum contract orders during the past 10 days.

The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co.

Lin. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., of Palo Alto, Calif., is now on his eastern trip. This company now controls a large tract of the Leland-Stanford, Jr., University land. The soil is comparatively unworked so far as the seed industry is concerned. Removal from Hollister to the above locality was made November 1, ten carloads moved by rail and ten teams and wagons overland.

Holly and Bouquet Green.

Chicago, December 11.—Holly is coming along in fairly good supply. The produce commission dealers on South Water street are offering at $3 per case, stock from North Carolina and Virginia. The seedsmen who handle fancy Tennessee and Delaware stock are asking usual prices, claiming that well packed, well berried small leaved holly can not be supplied on a commission basis.

Bouquet green remains in oversupply both in bulk and in wreathing; more seasonable winter weather would or should improve the demand for all greens.

Boxwood is scarce and in good demand.

Common and Hardy Vetches.

An interesting bulletin on vetches, with a description of the seeds of the hairy and common kinds and notes on the growing of both varieties, has been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. "The seeds of common vetch," according to the bulletin, "are somewhat flattened and grayish in most forms. Those of the hairy vetch are smaller, globular and black. Common vetch, even the winter strain, will not ordinarily withstand more cold than 15° above zero Fahrenheit, while hairy vetch is very hardy. Common vetch requires fairly good soil to succeed, while hairy vetch is less particular and grows well in poor, especially sandy, land. Common vetch will not grow in alkali soil nor is it drought resistant, while hairy vetch will stand considerable alkali and much drought."

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

Prepare for Christmas.

Be Successful This Christmas. Don't be defeated in buying elsewhere. Important.—While other firms kept shady during the summer and fall seasons, Godfrey Aschmann looked forward by keeping on advertising at the rate of $300 to $400 per month. Why? For the simple reason of clearing the path for himself for the holiday season. There are signs of a big demand for Christmas Plants. We were not slow in raising an immense stock of Christmas Novelties, Godfrey Aschmann's quality such as described below, now in prime condition for the holidays for immediate shipment:

A House Full of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Just Like Cut. Who Can Beat That?

H. F. Hall, Moorestown, N. J., President; C. West, Irondequoit, N. Y., Vice-President; E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O., Secretary; M. L. Ruetenik, Cleveland, O., Treasurer.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 9.—Mushrooms, 15 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce, eight cents to 10 cents, small cases; radishes, 12½ cents to 35 cents per dozen bunches.

New York, December 9.—Cucumbers, 75 cents to $1 per dozen and $2 to $3.50 per box; mushrooms, $1 to $1.60 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 15 cents per pound; lettuce, 25 cents to 50 cents per strap.

Christmas Notes.

The market gardener's line is not subject to fashion like other lines of trade; we can therefore anticipate the demand for our goods and prepare with a fair degree of accuracy by consulting our past records. In our market prime celery holds first place. We have noticed an ever increasing demand for "celery hearts," that is, small celery bunched together and often tied quite attractively with red tape. The reason for this is plain. This smaller celery divides into many more pieces than one big coarse plant and very often these smaller parts are more palatable.

More than one-half of our trade is for these bunches; this requires much extra labor, but we have the compensation of being able to use up much small material to good advantage. Celery should not be washed much ahead of sales, hence we commence several days before and fix them ready to wash. We use paper-lined crates and stand the stalks upright to prevent twisting for light; this will relieve us the last day.

Next to celery we place head lettuce. It should be firm and well bleached. If outer leaves are green or brown it often pays to remove some and trim the balance so as to expose the bleached part to attract the buyer. Leaf lettuce is preferred in moderate sized plants, say from ¼ to ½ pound heads. Unfortunately this year, owing to slow sales, there will be much large and overgrown stock offered.

Scarlet Globe radishes are ever popular. To look their best these should be "hosed" with clear cold water after bunching to get them absolutely clean. All root crops, cabbages and spinach, are slow sale and should be avoided; while good parsley, cauliflower and mushrooms are generally "good prospects."

MARKETMAN.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—W. H. Graham, for twenty years a local florist, has closed out his business and will move to Little Falls, where he will take charge of the business of his brother, J. O. Graham. Ill health necessitates the retirement of J. O. Graham from active work for the present.

DENVER, COLO.—D. F. Brown, 1625 Colorado boulevard, will build a greenhouse at a cost of $2,000.

KANSAS CITY.—Samuel Murray reports business as very good. He says he made quite a hit this fall with pot-grown grapes and also Scotch heather. The last week in November was a very busy one with Mr. Murray and in addition to the usual business he had the decorations for a big house wedding.

NEW SCARLET CARNATION

Two years the winner. Best 100 Red or Scarlet.

No other scarlet carnation can equal this in competition against standard and seedling varieties for two years.

Cincinnati Flower Show, 1911.

St. Paul Flower Show, 1912.

A bunch of 25 The Herald as they come into the wholesale market. Note the size compared with other carnations.

The Herald is an early, free and continuous bloomer, producing large, very full, 3½ inch flowers on long, strong stems, never weak, large calyx, positively non-bursting. The color is a grand bright scarlet that does not fade or come slate color at any time. Habit is ideal, upright growth; breaks readily from the base; produces flowers in remarkably short time. Compared with Enchantress it will produce at least one-third more and every flower will be perfect. No culls—no splits—no weak stems. Cuttings ready for immediate delivery. All stock guaranteed strong, well rooted and satisfactory in every respect.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, 204 Granite bldg., Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y.

Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June 18-20, 1913.

THE date of the next annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held in Portland, Ore., will be June 18-20, 1913, according to the decision of the executive committee.

THE importation of citrus nursery stock from Florida has been barred by all but two counties (Fresno and Tulare) in California as a result of red and yellow scale said to have been discovered in shipments of orange trees.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—The following officers were elected at the recent meeting held here by the California Association of Nurserymen: F. H. Wilson, Fresno, president; John Wallace, Oakland, W. V. Eberly, Niles, J. E. Berg-holt and Fred Howard, Los Angeles, and A. W. Wheeler, San Jose, vice-presidents; Henry Kruckenberg, secretary-treasurer. A resolution favoring state instead of county control of nursery stock was passed.

Viticulture in Roumania.

The grapevine in Roumania, in common with those through Europe generally, suffered greatly from phylloxera not many years ago, and as the disease is still present to a limited extent the Roumanian Ministry of Agriculture continues in its efforts to eradicate it. To this end large quantities of shoots of so-called American vines are furnished annually to wine growers at nominal prices. Most of these shoots come from the government nurseries, these nurseries being supplied by purchases made in Algeria.

BIG WELLS, TEX.—A charter has been granted to the Big Wells Farming and Nursery Co., capital stock $100,000. J. E. Franklin of St. Louis and M. E. Leming and William McMurray of Big Wells are incorporators.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—At a meeting held here recently plans were perfected for the convention of the Arkansas Horticultural Society to be held January 21-23.

PLANT COMBINATIONS

We take pleasure in calling the attention of the trade to our Plant Combinations for Christmas sales. These are better than any heretofore offered. This year the same idea of filling them early in order to thoroughly establish them has again been carried out, but instead of using tubs or the ordinary receptacle, we have made artistic baskets, etc. These are well made boxes, covered with birch bark and rattan. The baskets we have in three sizes, 8", 10" and 12", and a special indoor window box 18" long, 6" deep and 6" wide. In filling these the styles are varied in order to give variety and nothing but high class plants are used in the filling, such as Crotons, Pandanus, Dracaenas in variety, Ferns, etc. Last year we sent our plant combinations to all the large cities and while then in the ordinary green tub they met with the highest approval everywhere. These filled this year we cannot recommend too highly and assure you much time and thought has been spent to have them thoroughly durable and artistically correct.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

CARNATIONS!

A Word to the Grower of Carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We have 150,000 cuttings ready for December delivery, and we shall have 200,000 for January.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family. Extremely free in bloom; clean, strong grower. The earliest red to come into bloom; brings a big crop for Xmas; blooms till late, holding its color perfectly from early to late. Won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAY TRADE.

Selling the Stock.

The plants and flowers for the holiday sales have been raised or procured and upon their being properly sold and delivered depends the success of all the labor which has been expended.
Every dealer during the three days before Christmas will do as much business as is ordinarily done in a month. It is therefore necessary that this should be done in a systematic manner in order that the business may be successful. Poor business methods at this time will often result in the loss of some steady customers or prospective business on account of the dissatisfaction that will result unless the smallest details are looked after. The question of help is one of the first matters. It may be possible in some places to procure extra efficient help, but in the majority of cases the entire selling will fall upon the regular force. Where extra help is employed, every plant and other article possible should have a tag with the price plainly marked, so that the salesman can immediately tell the customers the price, or much time will be lost by running back and forth and interrupting the proprietor with questions regarding the value. The booking and filing of orders must be strictly and accurately attended to. The handling of stock should receive the most careful attention, and the manner of placing it before the customers is often the making or losing of a sale. Many salesmen will complete the sale of a plant by properly showing it to the customers. There is always a better side to a plant and the salesman who knows how will always keep this side toward the customer's view, and a plant always looks larger when placed alone, so that taking it from the bench or collection and setting by itself will show it off much more advantageously. When a plant is sold it should be immediately marked and set aside, for it is poor business to allow the customer to think that he will not get the plant he has bought or that the same plant may be sold to another. The proprietor must keep a watchful eye all the time upon the salesmen and other employes and see that every customer is properly served.

Many customers prefer to buy of the one with whom they have always dealt, and in this case extra help will sometimes become insistent to wait upon them.
This should be guarded against, for if the customer is willing to wait for the one they prefer to have serve them it is good business policy to see that their wishes are gratified.

Packing and Wrapping.

So many of the flowers and plants sold at Christmas are presents made by one person to another that it is necessary that great care should be taken in having them packed and done up safely and in a proper manner.
Nice boxes, well lined with paraffine paper, are the first necessity in all up-to-date stores. The arranging of the cut flowers in the box should be done in an artistic manner, for the first impression on opening the box is very lasting, and a well arranged box, even of poorer stock, is preferable to one containing the highest grade carelessly put up. Under no circumstances forget the card. This has caused more trouble and lost more good customers than any one small detail, for it is a piece of carelessness that cannot be explained and is not easily forgiven.
A sprig of mistletoe or a spray of holly placed on the top of the flowers is always appreciated, and a pansy or one or two violets or other small flowers tied on the card with a gold cord or baby ribbon is very attractive and made a great feature by many progressive dealers. The box should be wrapped in enough thicknesses of paper to insure its delivery safe from frost. There is nothing more unsatisfactory than to receive a box of cut flowers in a frozen condition or to hear that the present arrived in that shape. This is easily guarded against and a thing that should never occur. Above all things, do not ship any flowers that are not fresh. As a rule, the customers have paid good prices and are entitled to first-class stock, and it is nothing

Ready Reference Advt.,

Help and Situations Wanted,
Advertisements,

to take their money worthless goods. They should be wrapped neatly with paper enough to be sure that they will not be touched by frost. A little practice, with care, will soon teach one how to do this and make a neat package. Too often plants are so carelessly wrapped that they make a disgraceful package when left at the door. Six to eight thicknesses of newspaper, with a clean, plain paper outside, are none too much during the cool weather and more if the temperature is at all low. The dealer must remember that most of the plants brought into flower for the holidays are grown in a very warm temperature and chill easily. Plants with flowers that are easily bruised should be first wrapped with a sheet of cotton batting before being wrapped with paper. The delivery boys should be cautioned not to place the plants on the frozen ground or snow. Many fine plants are ruined by this thoughtless act of the men or boys delivering them. These small details are necessary and should be carefully watched during the holiday trade.

Business Systems.

During the holiday rush it is necessary that some system should be adopted that will be sure to fulfill the wants of the customer. While the business in small places may be carried on during much of the year depending a great deal on the memory of those in charge, at this time this should not be attempted, but everything written down and so placed that any one of the force can immediately find it. One of the best methods that has come to our attention is adopted by many stores, the details being changed more or less to suit the proprietor's fancy. A supply of large envelopes is secured, and when an order is received and properly written on the order blank, it is passed to one who has charge of this work, and the order copied in the order book. It is best to have a book for each day. The order is then placed in one of the envelopes, with the tag with the address written thereon, and if there is a card or a ribbon to be used with the order this is also placed in the envelope. These envelopes are then placed in a pigeon-hole or hung on a hook that is labeled for the day of delivery. Any order that is to be delivered at a special hour should have a distinguishing mark that will surely attract the attention of the one that is to put the order up or the one who has charge of the delivery. This system can be so modified as to be applied to a small or large business and will result in rectifying many mistakes that are often made during this busy season. These envelopes can be handed to those who put up the flowers or wrap the plants. The matter of delivery should also be systematized, and one should be placed in charge of this important part. Unless this is done the delivery will be very expensive. The placing together of all packages going in the same direction when wrapped will save many journeys and facilitate the work.

NEW HARTFORD, N. Y.—A new horticultural society was organized here December 6. Officers elected were: F. Wright, of this city, president; Charles W. Bushinger, vice-president; H. S. Weaver, New York Mills, secretary; B. D. Leonard, treasurer.

Suggestions for Christmas Dinners.

A dwarf araucaria covered with silver to imitate Jack Frost and surrounded with American Beauty roses will be attractive. A frosting powder should be used for this silver effect. Use holly in with the American Beauties peeping out here and there. Silver candlesticks with holly and berry shades will combine excellently. Place around these candlesticks small fancy baskets filled with growing ferns which will answer for favors. On the araucaria tiny electric lights covered with red catgut can be prettily arranged. If red is not desired yellow chrysanthemums can be used in this arrangement most effectively. A folded silk drape can be used down the middle of the table, using yellow candle shades. A fringe of holly will do for the edge of the scarf. Scatter it where necessary.

A yule log can be artistically arranged with holly and mistletoe, or made entirely of holly, using the frosted effect with a spray of mistletoe looking as if it had accidentally fallen upon it. Use ferns as a finish. Make a border of holly for the edge of the table, finishing it at ends, with red satin ribbon in which a cluster of berries has been added. Little artificial Colonial trees can be made for souvenirs, placing them in a small yule log arrangement in place of the tub or vase effect. The rough bark will be most effective. A boat of good size of the row-boat design, filled with red chrysanthemums, and with the oars of red berries, is novel and is most striking when artistically carried out. This should be resting on a beveled mirror around which a garland of mistletoe has been arranged.

As a finish for a green effect over the table use maidenhair fern. Holly will also look pretty in place of the mistletoe. Or, even the berries and if sameness is desired the red chrysanthemum as used in the center. A small silk flag which should be white could have "A Merrie Xmas" in red on it and should be placed advantageously at either end of the row boat. A bed of shaded red and green leaves raised in the center to a mound which a glistening wreath of red berries has been arranged and in the center of which has been placed a silver lamp with square rose-colored shade is effective. Chrysanthemums will also be attractive. Poinsettias will be most attractive in the center of this mound in place of the lamp.

A novelty would be an Eifel Tower made of holly and mistletoe with robins peeping through and arches of holly and mistletoe. Green leaves can be made into crescents. The small glass Siamese flower troughs used as a succession of miniature fish globes fastened together and filled with red berries is effective around this centerpiece. Of course, any of the small flower troughs can be prettily arranged, as they come in various shapes and can be secured in nearly all the large stores handling fancy glassware for the table. Use straw glasses filled with roses for favors. An odd centerpiece can be arranged with a mirror on which a block of ice is placed covered with holly. Garland around this mistletoe and frost it with silver. In connection with this use the tall black wrought iron candlestick with a spiral base and red candles but no shades. These new style candlesticks have a sort of lily shaped bowl to hold the candle and will lend a pretty contrast. Chrysanthemum and croton leaves make a happy combination for the yuletide functions.

For a fancy table suggestion Cupid holding a large berry ball crowned with mistletoe and tiny ladders made of red berries standing up against the ball and tiny Cupids arranged in a rich garland of holly is pretty. Again, a miniature Christmas tree placed on a mirror in the center and surrounded with large flakes of soft cotton in unequal lengths to imitate a snowdrift is excellent when arranged with holly and berries and frosted. The berries and holly should not be frosted, simply the cotton and miniature tree which should have tiny electric lights. Instead of the tree a glass boat can be prettily filled with berries or red roses. Or the entire floral sleigh can be made for red berries or red carnations.

The Holiday Trade.

We have only a few more days before the Christmas rush and bustle, yet in this limited time there may be some details that have been overlooked that can be straightened out in time to have everything go along without a hitch, and perhaps the following suggestions would be timely. In the first place, one should have on hand a variety of cut flower boxes of all sizes, selecting the most up-to-date and attractive goods for the holiday trade. A little good taste displayed in this respect may go a long way towards making a new customer a permanent one.

By all means see to it that all packages are wrapped safely, carefully, neatly and delivered promptly. The boxes should be prepared beforehand, lined with wax paper and the lids replaced, and placed conveniently near the cut flower counters. Attractive tags and gummed labels should be placed within reach also. In fact, everything should be handled systematically.

Don't forget the important fact that one should be courteous and painstaking in showing one's stock, also to try to fill all orders taken. In order to do this a careful count of the cut must be taken daily. That is, of what is on hand and if one goes through the rose range and makes a very careful inventory one can usually keep within a safe limit in filling the orders. It is very embarrassing to face one or several indignant customers who having placed orders in plenty of time failed to get what they ordered. Competition is close, very, very close, these days, and we must simply get right down to business, make business and hold it.

This brings us face to face with another very important matter—that of filling our orders, big or little, with good, fresh stock. Last Christmas, also at Easter, the writer saw a great amount of wasted stock thrown out. It was all stuff that had been held for a week or longer to catch a better price the day before Christmas. Much of this stock must have been exceptionally good when cut, and if we repeat the advice given in these columns many times it is only for the welfare of the business at large. Then we advise shipping daily and by all means giving the commission or store man something he can cheerfully and conscientiously deliver to a customer.

If your heavy cut should come a little before or after the holidays don't grumble. Remember we are in the clutches of the weather man more or less, and if we have a small range of glass, (as is often suggested and advocated in these columns) it is far better to avoid cropping by pinching frequently—thereby getting a rather continuous cut—than to try to pull off the whole thing for the big show. Even the "big fellows" slip up now and then on turning a crop, not necessarily from poor management but owing to advancing or retarding weather.

Another important matter is the handling of stock, taking care of the cuts. A good well ventilated cellar that can be kept dry and cool at a temperature of 45°, or an ice box, is what is needed. Also plenty of jars of various sizes. The surroundings and the jars should be kept fresh and clean with plenty of fresh water daily, and the stock should be gone over carefully every day and if the water is changed every other day at this season there will be no trouble from the water if clean jars are used.

Have your stock where it can be shown to a customer. It isn't necessary to have more than a jar of each grade, say a dozen or so to a jar, so they can be lifted out if necessary to show the length of stem, etc. We may add that the wholesale end of the job should be taken care of by having good shipping boxes, plenty of cotton sheeting and newspapers for protection, labeled plainly and tied securely. Be sure to pack everything so the contents cannot shift in the cases, for the express men are a busy lot these days and must handle an increased quantity of all kinds of merchandise, so perhaps the flowers will get a few extra thumps and bumps for good measure.

Now just one more little reminder. Are you going to do any grafting this winter? If so and you haven't ordered your manetti stocks get right after them. Last season the supply was away below the demand and at this writing there are some recent shipments and some early arrivals of good English or Irish stock, the best and only ones to handle, we think, for indoor forcing.

Get them potted off as soon as possible and place in a cool house, 45° to 50°, until root action begins. We have had excellent results from plants placed on a good firm layer of ashes under carnation benches. Syringe the tops daily, and water evenly, keeping them fairly moist but not soggy at the roots. They will be ready to work when the little white feeders or root-tips show and the eyes plump up. Remember the tops should not be allowed to start a growth as in order to get a good strike the scion should receive the first rush of top. A few more suggestions in reference to grafting will be given in our next article.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Review of the Season.

It is important at this time, while the results of the season are still fresh in our minds, that we take a review of what was accomplished with the several varieties, both from a commercial and exhibition standpoint. Referring to the results commercially, nearly everyone seems to be satisfied and some growers have expressed themselves as its being the best season they have had for several years. As regards the behavior of the varieties it can be said to have been a peculiar season. The early varieties were later to bloom than their usual season, and the late varieties considerably ahead of time.

In the middle west the demand was fully equal to the supply during October. In the early part of the month there was not enough of the right kind of stock to meet the call. The prices were lowest November 1-15, which was the only time that there was a glut on the market if it could be called such, and it looked as if the vast quantity of pompons and singles that were in at that time cut down the call for the large blooms to some extent. Also the absence of the fall shows in some of the large western cities which have been accustomed to having a show at this time without a doubt can be said to account for the reason of some of the surplus during early November.

There was a large number of the very early varieties Golden Glow and Smith's Advance grown, but they were not very good property before October 1, and it would seem that the best way to handle these varieties is to have them mature September 15 or a little later, while the asters are on the wane. Polly Rose and October Frost are still more largely grown than any other whites for early October and I suppose there was more Pacific Supreme than any other pink at this time, though a number of growers raised quite a number of Gloria, and the new variety Unaka made a number of friends and it will be more largely grown next season.

Chrysolora, among the early yellows, overshadowed every other variety and is one that has given great satisfaction and is very much sought after, and we need another of the same class, together with a white to follow it in season. The variety Ramapo has been mentioned as a fine yellow but we are not yet well enough acquainted with it to speak of its merits. Col. D. Appleton was seen as fine as ever in some instances, but it appears to be going the way of many another good old variety and is less grown each year. Vast quantities of Major Bonaffon were grown and the quantity of this old timer seems to increase with each year. White and Yellow Eaton were supreme in their season and there was the usual quantity of White and Yellow Chadwick.

Among the new varieties of 1912 we have heard considerable mention of Smith's Sensation as a commercial variety, and it will be planted in increased quantity next season. It is certainly a very striking variety. As a pure toned red or crimson Harvard is hard to beat. It is not up to the exhibition standard as to size but its color is bound to make it a winner. The first year's trials of the exhibition varieties can hardly be taken as a fair test because they are not purchased in any quantity and also are not very widely distributed. It may be said that they cannot show their full qualities until the second season. Wm. Turner seems to have been the one above all others upon which the greatest energy was bestowed and it certainly responded nobly. Harry E. Converse is another that was well to the front and is a variety that should be among the leaders for several seasons. Mrs. David Syme did also exceptionally well in some places and if grown carefully it will have commercial qualities as fancy blooms.

Now that the season is over the stock plants should receive attention. They require a light, cool, airy place and should be kept a little on the dry side. It is a mistake to expect that they will produce a liberal quantity of healthy cuttings if the plants are crowded together in boxes and set underneath benches where they get the drip from the watering of the plants above. The stools can be closed up together to some extent but they should be given plenty of light and kept cool and a sharp lookout made to keep down the aphids.

Characteristics Affecting Propagation.

Everyone who has had the opportunity of viewing a large collection of chrysanthemums, such as may be seen at many of the city parks, is impressed with the wonderful diversity in color and form. The casual observer gives little thought to as great a variation existing in their growth. In our last installment we referred to the manner in which the old plants produce cuttings, some making long, strong rhizomes, and if such are strong free growers there is hardly a limit to the number that may be propagated. Nacem Bey and Harvard are of this class. Some kinds making strong rhizomes or underground stems are inclined to be slow producers early in the season. Brutus and Mrs. J. Jones and its sports are examples. There are other varieties which produce their cuttings from the old trunk or stem of the plant and some of these make rapid growth while others are reluctant. The accompanying illustration shows the marked difference in vigor and productiveness of stock plants.

There is also wonderful contrast in the susceptibility of cuttings making roots. Some kinds, Golden Glow for instance, when in fine condition and with congenial surroundings will show roots in a week, while there are those that require from three to four weeks. There are a few that have come under our observation so difficult as to be valueless to the propagator. It costs twenty times as much to increase some sorts as others and there is no doubt some are offered at prices less than they can be produced for.

Productiveness is the factor which must be considered in establishing the price and those interested in the disposition of plants and cuttings should give this important feature careful consideration. It is quite common to see novelties offered the second year at prices much too low for a legitimate profit to the producer and often only a small portion of the orders can be executed owing to propagation difficulties, much to the exasperation of the customer and the dismay of the distributor.

ELMER D. SMITH.

It is not, however, with these easily accountable cases that we desire to deal, but with cases where normal self-fertilization may be reasonably assumed, and yet in which the progeny are of the more diversified character. The comparatively recent introduction of a new strain of Polystichum aculeatum, known as the "gracillimum" type is a case in point. We commence here with a wild plant of P. aculeatum, found in a Dorsetshire hedge as a huge specimen. Instead of the robust, ing minute tassels. So unique a form was naturally greatly prized, but despite robust growth and a marked tendency to produce lateral offsets, which enabled it in time to be widely distributed, some forty years elapsed before any spores were discovered.

In view, however of recent experience since that discovery, it appears probable that the supposed barrenness was really due to the fact that it bore no obvious spores or spore-heaps accompanied by an indusium or spore cover, but only produced sporangia or spore capsules in twos or threes on the very edges of the subdivisions, and these only here and there on very robustly-grown specimens. Hence they escaped observation, and were eventually only discovered with the aid of a lens. Since, however, the sporangia were well developed and each contained the normal number of spores, some thirty or forty each, the first batch discovered yielded considerably over a hundred plants, which it was anticipated would yield as many specimens of the parental type. As they developed, however, it was soon seen that a number of them were extremely unlike the rest, the little fronds bearing almost thread-like subdivisions, and these being separated and specially tended, eventually produced some thirty plants of the most remarkable type.

The normal sized half-inch pinnules grew in many cases to over two inches in length, very slender and lineal until near the tip, where they expanded into a fan-like arrangement of points. The most unusual feature, however, was that, while the parental pinnae were widest near the midrib of the frond and narrowed regularly, as we have seen, to a slender point, the pinnae here were narrow near the midrib, and the linear pinnules grew longer and longer as they approached the terminal, which consisted of a long serrated tongue with an expanded fan-like end. These fan-shaped tips, though tassel-like, appeared to consist of short pinnuloid extensions rather than crests proper, and were evidently extensions of the parental tendency to tip expansion. Of the very long hair-like growths, and their lengthening in the reverse direction to the normal, the Fern Spore Variation.

To those who devote their careful attention to the raising of varietal ferns from spores, phenomena are frequently presented of a very puzzling nature, and which certainly merit record, since it is only by the accumulation of such records that any laws underlying these apparently erratic phenomena can ever be discovered. That spores or seeds from variable plants, possibly of mixed origin, should give rise to diverse progeny appears natural enough, says a correspondent of London Gardeners' Magazine, hence in the case of seeds, cross-fertilization is the rule rather than the exception, and therefore the offspring are naturally the outcome of a sort of compromise between diverse parental influences, with the result that adjustment of the diverse potencies occurs in different degrees.

With the fern spore the case is rather different. From the nature of the prothallus, or small green scale, produced by the spore prior to the development of the sexual apparatus beneath the scale, self-fertilization must be the rule and crossing the exception, the homologues of the pollen grain, and the incipient ovule being so close together, and the process of fertilization of the one by the other so dependent upon the presence of a minute drop of water which forms the conveying medium, that any other mode of conveyance which can bridge the gap between one prothallus and another is almost precluded. Nevertheless, it has been abundantly demonstrated that such transference does occur, since a number of easily recognizable crosses between diverse types are well known to exist.

somewhat dense, normal form of the species, it was of much slenderer make, the secondary pinnules of the fronds being much smaller and further apart, and the primary ones or pinnae running out into very slender terminals. The fronds, much longer than the normal ones, terminated uniquely by the pinnae curving inwards, and overlapping the midrib, the tip finally extending very slenderly to match those of the subdivisions. Finally, the tips of both fronds and pinnae showed a tendency to expand fan-like, suggest-parent form did not betray the slightest sign. Although all but one of the thirty plants were singularly alike, there were marked individual differences in the ultimate development of their growth.

The exception, named "plumosum" (Green), assumed a beautiful decomposite development, since instead of the long pinnules, the pinnæ divided and sub-divided on feathery lines, the fronds were broader and more imbricate in growth, and hence quite distinct. Of the remaining seedlings a good percentage reproduced the parental form exactly, while the balance presented several grades of reversion.

some presenting the broad, stalkless pinnules of aculeatum, while several, strange to say, had unmistakably the plainly stalked pinnules of P. angulare. This naturally suggests the idea that the original wild find of P. aculeatum pulcherrimum, as the plant was named, owing to its exceptional beauty, was and is a hybrid between the two.

On sowing, however, by way of test, from one of the reversions which most nearly approached P. angulare, nothing but a batch of unmistakably *aculeatum*s resulted, though Mr. Cranfield reports that one gracillimum occurred in his sowing, showing that the sportive tendency in that direction had been inherited. No variation at all occurred in the writer's batch. A peculiar feature in this case is the sharp line drawn between the *gracillimum*s and the rest, only one plant appearing, which we named dimorphum, and which resembled the parent strongly, but in which the lengthening tendency of the sub-divisions showed itself erratically in some of the fronds, hence the name.

A second batch raised from the spores of another season, discovered in some quantity on another plant, but, of course, a division of the original, hence practically the same, yielded very similar results, but on a larger scale. In the progeny, however, which inherited the true pulcherrimum character, a number showed very little of this until planted out, when the coarser set of first fronds was followed by fronds of even improved pulcherrimum type, which, at the time of writing, promise to become very handsome indeed, seemingly as a sort of afterthought on their part, since they began very unpromisingly as apparent reversions.

We have here consequently a case in which the spores from one and the same symmetrical and constant plant are endowed with the faculty of producing several quite distinct types, and in fairly definite ratios since the proportions in which the gracillimum, pulcherrimum, and reversional types occur are about the same with both sowings, with plumosum thrown in as a fourth, though solitary, exception. None of the reversions showed the faintest trace of the characters of the rest; all the sections stood clearly apart. Even the theory of a hybrid origin of the parent, which is by no means established, affords no explanation, since P. angulare, the possible other parent, has yielded no sport on similar lines except perhaps plumosum, and in any case a wild hybrid, is little likely to be other than a normal form as would also presumably be the P. aculeatum concerned in the cross.

FORTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING.

The high place the Barry family of Rochester, N. Y., fills in the horticultural world and the personal popularity of its members were further attested at the forty-eighth annual meeting of the Western New York Horticultural Society at Rochester, December 11-13. At this meeting William C. Barry, of the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Co., was elected the society's president for the twenty-third successive time. His father, the late Patrick Barry, had served in the same capacity for a period of thirty years immediately preceding, which makes fifty-two years the presidency has been in one family. Patrick Barry became president in 1860 and held the office until his death, 1890, when his son succeeded. A year before his death the elder Mr. Barry donated the sum of $2,000 to promote the objects of the society and much of the good work accomplished has been made possible by this donation.

Among the other veterans of this organization is John Hall, also of Rochester, who has served as secretary and treasurer for twenty-three years and was again elected at the meeting. The vice-presidents will be: E. Van Alstyne, Kinderhook; C. R. White, Iona; Floyd S. Tenny, Hilton; S. J. Bush, Morton; Samuel Fraser, Geneseo; T. B. Wilson, Hall. The executive committee is composed of the following: A. L. Whitbeck,odus; M. C. Burritt, New York; Arthur Simmons, Walker; H. S. Wiley, Cayuga; R. G. Phillips, Rochester.

The meeting was one of the best in the history of the society and was well attended. In his opening address President Barry reviewed the history of the society and spoke enthusiastically of the future. "In going over our work during this long period," said Mr. Barry, "I think I can safely say that we have progressed most satisfactorily and that the results obtained will show unmistakably that our labors have not been in vain. It is true we have done things rather quietly, without fuss or splurge, with little advertising, and yet we have made real and substantial gains, as the prosperous condition of our membership indicates.

"However, I will admit that we have erred and erred seriously in failing to advertise and draw attention publicly to the superiority of our products. I am sorry to make an admission of this kind, but, realizing our mistakes, we should at once take steps to correct them."

Mr. Barry went on and detailed the necessity for an advertising bureau and then took up the question of fruit growing itself. He advocated thinning as a necessity when the crop is abundant and said that proper care of the young trees for the first few years would reduce the time of waiting for the fruiting period materially.

Other speakers on the programme considered the subject from all angles and much valuable discussion of the entire horticultural profession was engaged in. Among those on the programme were: Prof. Liberty Hyde Bailey, of Cornell; Prof. P. J. Parrott, of the New York Experimental Station; F. H. Farrand, past president of the Michigan State Horticultural Society; D. L. L. Van Slype, chemist of the New Work Experimental Station; Edward N. Loomis, president of the International Apple Shippers' Association, and others. A medal was awarded to Charles C. Hooper, Rochester, for a new currant and another to John Carlton for a grape named after its developer.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

William H. Siebrecht.

William H. Siebrecht, president-elect of the New York Florists' Club, has been a member since its organization 25 years ago. Mr. Siebrecht is a man of high character and business standing and no better selection could have been made for a year that will be memorable for the great event of the International Flower Show. Of the specialists who supply the cut flower markets of New York none is better known than Mr. Siebrecht, whose range is located at Astoria, now a part of greater New York. In lily of the valley, Lilium longiflorum and other varieties, as well as narcissi, tulips, hyacinths and minor stocks, Mr. Siebrecht has established a great reputation as a grower. His range is noted not so much for its size, there being less than 50,000 square feet of glass, as for the great amount of good cut stock which he is constantly shipping to market. He has a good supply of white lilies all the year round.

Speaking not long ago of the vicissitudes of the cut flower trade and bulb growing in general, Mr. Siebrecht said: "If growers would rely on their own experience, observations and judgment in the matter of buying bulbs, instead of allowing themselves to be influenced by the importers, it would be much better for the trade." At this range there are a number of houses devoted exclusively to lily of the valley forcing. A bench is filled with four to five inches of coarse sand and the pips are placed in rows across the bed, the rows being about three inches apart. The beds are covered with cheese cloth, stretched on light frames for convenience in handling. In addition newspapers are spread over the pips when they are first placed in the sand. There is an extensive cold storage house for pips and bulbs and Mr. Siebrecht is probably the pioneer grower of this country in the matter of erecting modern cooling appliances in connection with a greenhouse range. With every convenience at hand and by careful and painstaking methods, he is able to keep up a constant supply of good flowers.

Mr. Siebrecht was born in Germany and learned the business there. He is now within a few days of 60 years of age. He came to this country when quite young and located at Astoria. In 1876 he started in business for himself and has always made lily of the valley a leading specialty. He is a life member of the Society of American Florists and other organizations for the betterment of the craft. He is married and has four children.

John Miesem.

Trustee-Elect New York Florists' Club.

In the last few years he has practically turned over the Astoria range to his sons and has bought land, erected greenhouses and made his home at Chappaqua, N. Y., though he makes frequent visits to the Astoria range. One of his sons is a successful lawyer. Others are active in the cut flower business.

John Donaldson.

John Donaldson, vice-president elect of the New York Florists' Club, was born in Banffshire, Scotland, 57 years ago. He served his apprenticeship at Duff House, which is on the estate of the Duke of Fife, who is closely related to the royal family of England. After leaving this place he worked for a time at Vogrie House, near Edinburgh, and from there went to York-shire, England, where he worked for a time on a large private estate. Mr. Donaldson was for a time employed at the Veitch Nurseries, London. He was later in the horticultural department of the Zoological Gardens, Regent Park, London.

Mr. Donaldson left London for New York in February, 1893. On his arrival in this country he worked for a time with Wm. Wilson, then a well-known grower of Astoria, L. I. After leaving Mr. Wilson Mr. Donaldson entered the employ of T. Burroughs Hyatt, who was then starting a commercial cut flower business, and remained with him for six years. He left Mr. Hyatt 23 years ago to go into business for himself at his present location, Elmhurst, L. I. In Scotland and England his experience had been very largely along the lines of fruit growing under glass. Here he has been very successful as a grower of cut flowers, carnations and lilies being, at present, his specialties.

He was one of the organizers of the New York Cut Flower Exchange, being now its president, and was its secretary for 14 years. He was married 25 years ago to Jane Henry, also a native of Banffshire. They are the parents of two children, two others having died. Alexander is associated with his father in the business. Ethel is a comely lass of sixteen.

Mr. Donaldson has been a member of the S. A. F. since the year of its organization and a member of the New York Florists' Club since 1890. He is also a member of the Masonic order, of the B. P. O. E. and of the Order of the Scottish Clans. He is a member of the Astoria bowling team and one of its best bowlers. He was reared a Presbyterian of the old school.

Mistletoe Gatherer Breaks Neck.

Anadarko, Okla.—While gathering mistletoe from the high branches of a tree, Charles O. Boyle slipped, and a rope that he intended to use to suspend himself from the limbs became entwined about him, breaking his neck.

New York Decorations Forbidden.

Many of the familiar Christmas decorations which have been used for generations will disappear this year as the result of a decision by the New York board of fire underwriters. A letter is to be sent to every holder of a fire insurance policy in the city which forbids their use.

Palmer Secures Verdict.

Justice Marcus recently directed a jury in supreme court to find in favor of the plaintiff in the suit of William J. Palmer of Buffalo, N. Y., against the state department of agriculture. The florist asked for an appraisal of certain plants destroyed by that department because they were affected, it was alleged, with moths.

Russian Horticultural Exposition.

The International Horticultural Exposition, to be held in St. Petersburg, Russia, in April, 1913, will consist of the following sections: Flower culture; decorative horticulture; hothouse plants and outdoor plants; pomology; fresh and preserved fruits; vegetables; preservation and use of fruit and vegetables; grains; bee culture; silk worm culture; house plants; scientific section; scholastic section; tools instruments; and material for horticulture; floral art; and a commercial section.

There is to be a series of awards for each exhibit, the most important of which are to be presented by the emperor. This exposition is being arranged to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the reign of the Romanoff dynasty.

Minneapolis, Minn.

At the December meeting of The Minneapolis Florists' Club Theodore Wirth was appointed by President W. D. Desmond chairman of the executive committee for the coming convention of the S. A. F. to be held here next August. As Mr. Wirth is vice-president of the S. A. F., the selection of his committee was left to his choice, resulting in the following members being appointed:

Theodore Wirth, chairman; Hugh Will, C. N. Ruedlinger, W. D. Desmond, C. F. Rice. The first meeting was held Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. at Mr. Wirth's residence and subsidiary committees were appointed. Another meeting is called for Sunday evening, 7:30 p. m., at the same place and this meeting will find a big headway made for the caring of this coming event.

Lancaster Club's Visit.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club made its first official visit to Manheim November 30.

Those who went from Lancaster were: Rudolph Nagle, Harry Rohrer, Lemon Landis, Albert M. Herr, Abraham Rohrer, F. Spinner, D. D. Shultz, Jacob Fleer and Frank Bachler. Out-of-town members of the party included B. J. Wiggins, New York; W. R. Denlinger, Vintage; Amos Rohrer, Strasburg; H. B. Weaver, Bird in Hand; Elmer Weaver, Rancks; James Brown, Coatsville; John Toland, Sadsburyville; Henry Ginder and Benj. Wike.

The first call was made at the establishment of Munroe H. Hostetter, the second at Phares Hostetter's, and the third at E. P. Hostetter's. They all grow sweet peas, snapdragons, carnations and baby primroses for the wholesale market. The quality of the stock is high. At E. P. Hostetter's, the largest of the three places, the smallest house being 200 feet long, there were three houses of sprenger, one of plumosus and one of mignonette, the rest of the place being devoted to sweet peas, snapdragons, carnations and baby primroses. His 400-foot King Construction house was an eye opener to some of the visitors.

While here we were given a surprise in the shape of a very fine lunch given by the three Hostetters and their wives, who were assisted by Mrs. Burkholder and Miss Flory.

FLOWERS VERY SCARCE.

Cut flowers are very scarce, most of all carnations, which already have advanced to Christmas prices. Business is very good and the demand great with a small supply. This applies to cut flowers only. Plants always can be had here with the possible exception of palms. Plants for the holiday trade are fairly plentiful. Azaleas are early this year. There are some splendid cyclamen which should bring good prices. Poinsettias are not so tall but are of better quality than last year. Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias are perfect, and with all the usual line of plants looking fine there ought to be no shortage in this branch of the trade. Some of the holiday advance greens have arrived and are looking fine.

NOTES.

The Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club held its annual meeting last Monday night. There was the smallest attendance within years. G. A. Robinson, who had been judge of the Toronto exhibition, related his impressions of the show. All cut flowers were good and the best seen anywhere. It was a good show all through with a record attendance. The election of officers resulted as follows: E. J. Hayward, president; H. J. Eddy, first vice-president; W. S. Watts, second vice-president; W. H. Horobin, secretary-treasurer; Julius Luck, assistant. D. McDonald, J. Travis, W. U. Cotter, T. Gillespie, Geo. Pascoe, W. McCulloch, committeemen.

The executive committee of the Montreal Horticultural Society met to consider the nomination of a president and vice-president, both of which the society lost by death within one month. D. Lorne McGibbon and Forbes Angus were the new names suggested.

Geo. H. Cooke has been kept on the move for the last week, having the decoration for the reception given by Miss Boardman to the Red Cross society and the ball given by A. J. Larson and wife for Miss Wilmer. The ballroom decoration consisted of smilax, palms and pink chrysanthemums. The reception hall was banked with palms, ferns and large pink chrysanthemums. The dining room was decorated with Farleyense and pink snapdragons on the mantel and tables.

Elmer Maybury of the firm of Maybury & Hoover, met with a very painful accident while gunning in Maryland. In going over an embankment the earth gave way and the gun was discharged, the full charge blowing away part of his large toe.

From the reports of all the florists, they will not travel north to get their Christmas stock as there are some very fine azaleas, cyclamen and poinsettias closer home.

Gude Bros. have the decoration for Mrs. Rogers' ball. The decorations will consist mostly of American Beauties, Pink Killarneys, smilax and palms.

Geo. Evenden of Williamsport, Pa., was in town last week booking orders for Christmas. He has some very fine poinsettias in ten, eight and six-inch pans.

Schattmaier, manager for Z. D. Blackstone, is confined to his home with a very bad cold, but late reports are that he is improving.

Visitors: Wm. Craig, Robt. Schock, Joe Goudy, Sidney Bayersdorfer, all of Philadelphia, Pa.; Julius Dillhoff, New York. G. C. D.

CUT FLOWERS SHORT.

With the thermometer down to about 15 degrees and very little sunshine, this week finds us amid a very great shortage in all kinds of cut stock, carnations and lilies being among the scarcest. It keeps the wholesaler hustling to fill the demands of the retailers, who are willing to take any kind of stock offered. A few mums still are seen, but are not much good. Paper whites, fine white lilac and Romans are coming in somewhat stronger. Very good sweet peas and stevia are to be had in limited quantities. In the green goods and the decorative line, the various kinds of such goods are almost cleaned up, and have been so for some little time. The shortage of boxwood compelled the wholesalers to order much more, which is arriving rather late, making it very disappointing to the retailers, who want to get their work out as early as possible. The outlook for stock for Christmas is good in almost everything except carnations, which are almost out of sight. American Beauties and Richmonds will be very strong, as will also be special Killarneys.

NOTES.

Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, has returned from his trip to Panama, Costa Rica, Jamaica, and other southern points. He was well impressed by the scenery of these places and thinks that the Panama canal is a marvellous work, but as for a place of residence, well, he will stick to little old Pittsburg for a while yet.

E. J. McCallum has just returned from a trip to New York and Philadelphia, visiting some of the firm's eastern growers. The McCallum Co. is putting out a fine grade of red magnolias and finds them ready sellers.

L. L. Lamborn of Alliance, O., was a visitor last week. Mr. Lamborn is shipping a fine quality of Marylands to this market, also a good grade of White and Pink Killarneys.

Ed. Klader, foreman for F. H. Westhoff of Westhoffman, was in town. He reports the rose crop as being very promising for Christmas.

Mrs. J. Elikor of Homestead recently had her greenhouses destroyed by fire of unknown origin.

M. Kronis visited his partner in Chicago Wednesday.

Visitors: Chas. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Geo. W. Kay and John Walker, both of Youngstown, O.; F. J. Farney, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Martin Reukauf of H. CHRISTMAS PROSPECTS GOOD.

The prospects for the Christmas business are good. The retailers have all placed heavy orders in view of a more or less possible shortage that is imminent. The retailers' orders are, however, coming along slowly at the time of this writing. They will have everything come in at the last moment. The supply of roses will be only an ordinary one. That is, an ordinary supply for such a day. The call for red is much stronger than the market will be able to care for properly. This demand also includes American Beauties. The supply of other colors and varieties, particularly pink and white Killarney, will be good. Carnations are apparently on the short side of the market. The supply will be very short unless the growers are holding back strongly, a thing which they all disclaim. There will be the usual good supply of poinsettias and if the Christmas shipments equal those in quality that have arrived up to this time we are going to have some fine, elegant ones for the holidays. New York double violets will be in very strong supply and probably adequate for market requirements. The cut of singles is none too large. Sweet peas clean up every day and will be in only limited supply for Christmas. Good giganteum and callas are offered. Other offerings include valley, orchids, Roman hyacinths, narcissi and stevia.

NOTES.

Geo. E. Fern, the decorator, has the decorations for the debut ball in honor of the niece of C. R. Holmes and wife the latter part of the month. He will, among other things, use 75 cases of wild smilax from C. E. Critchell.

J. T. Conger of Hartwell has pretty thoroughly cleaned up a house of Glory of Cincinnati begonias. Every plant was a fine specimen of the grower's art.

J. M. McCullough's Sons Co. received a supply of fine boxwood at the very time when the visible supply in the city was beginning to run low.

C. E. Critchell received some fine chrysanthemums from Popp Bros., Covington, Ky., this week.

Visitors: Geo. Gause, Richmond, Ind.; Miss Fannie White, Lexington, Ky.; Jas. P. Keller, Lexington, Ky.; K. H. Zeevat, representing Veldhuysen Van Sachten & Zanew, Lisse, Holland; Sam Seligman with Wertheimer Bros., New York. H.

CHRISTMAS STOCK COMING IN.

The local wholesale houses are now offering all the seasonable Christmas greens and flowers. There is holly, mistletoe, laurel and ground pine wreathing, boxwood for green wreaths, immortelles and Japanese chenille for red wreaths, and also just plain moss wreaths, which, with a little fixing look as pretty as any of them. Southern smilax is not taking a back seat for decorative purposes. Fancy artificial poinsettias, hybiscus and poppies are being used freely on wreaths and store decorations. Cut flowers are increasing in quantity and the quality is superb. American Beauties promise to be better this Christmas than any previous year, in all grades from short to long stems, and present indications are that there will be enough to go around. Pink and White Killarney are going to be in full crop and the quality is better than ever. Richmond roses alone will be a little short of the demand, if advance orders are a sample of the demand to come, but there will be a good supply of first grade stock. Aaron Wards, too, will be much in demand though not over plentiful in supply. Single and double violets are showing excellent form, and of these it is well to order in advance. There will be a few novelties to offer but only in limited quantities. Carnations, from the present outlook, will not be overplentiful, though the general run of stock shows good form, large flowers and stiff stems. There will be a few sweet peas, mostly pink; also there will be a limited amount of calandulas. Paper Whites and stevia are promised in larger quantities. Poinsettias will be in good supply and local growers claim stock is better than in previous years. Lily of the valley has not been very plentiful of late, but growers have promised a good supply for Christmas. Some of the local growers are going to have a few chrysanthemums, mostly white and yellow, for the holidays. Asparagus plumosus, both in strings and bunches, can be had in unlimited quantities. Asparagus sprengeri and adiantum fern are abundant. Strong smilax of good size is also very plentiful. Easter lilies and calla lilies are short of the demand and will not be a very big factor for Christmas. Orchids, too, are going to waste as very few have been coming into the local wholesale houses of late.

NOTES.

A committee consisting of Geo. W. Smith, Adam Graham, Sr., Chas. Schmitt, Herman Hart and John Blechschmitt met at the office of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange on Thursday to formulate plans (which they intend to lay before the next meeting of the Florists' Club), for the benefit of such growers as use steam in heating their greenhouses, and who will be obliged under the new state law, to have licensed firemen. Postal cards have been mailed to all these growers to attend the next meeting of the Florists' Club when some action will be decided upon.

Among the visitors here the past week were: John Walker, Youngstown; C. E. Barton, Norwalk; Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Harry Walthers, Youngstown. Mr. Walthers has only recently gone into the flower business for himself, but has had several years' experience with first class retail stores.

CARNATIONS ADVANCE IN PRICE.

Business was fairly good the past week and stock of all kinds has been plentiful with the exception of carnations which have been very scarce. Fancy white have been bringing as high as $4 and $5 per 100 and choice red $5 and $6 and in a few instances $7 and $8 per 100. American Beauties of good quality are in good supply and roses in general have been plentiful all week. Richmond are seen in some houses in large quantities and Killarney is improving greatly in color. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Sunburst have had a good call and many orders for these popular roses are being booked for Christmas. Short roses are scarce. Orchids are none too plentiful but the demand for these flowers the past week has been extremely slow. Gardenias clean up well, violets, sweet peas, lilies, stevia, Paper White narcissus, lily of the valley and Roman hyacinths are in very good supply at many of the houses. Chrysanthemums are still arriving and good stock is obtainable. Carnations for Christmas will be very scarce as far as this market is concerned and this seems to be the case in general for letters by the hundreds are being received every day from florists in all sections of the country who want to place orders for carnations. Richmond roses will be somewhat scarce also but the supply of other roses promises to be quite large. The trade would do well to bear in mind the scarcity of carnations when ordering and buy some other flower instead, for they will be in shorter supply this Christmas than they have been for a great many years. Orders for carnations on this market are being turned away every day and many of the dealers believe that red is going to bring unusually high prices for Christmas.

MORE GROWERS NEEDED

A prosperous Chicago Wholesale Commission House, doing a large business, can use the output of several more Carnation and Rose Growers to good advantage. Honest treatment guaranteed and returns made weekly. For further particulars

NOTES.

W. J. Keimel of Wendland & Keimel, who has heretofore devoted most of his space to the growing of Killarney in its various forms and Mrs. Aaron Ward, will plant two houses of Milady next season, being much impressed with its productiveness and color. This firm now has a Northwestern railroad switching track, which delivers coal at its coal shed and manure from the stockyards right on the ground, making a great saving in hauling.

Wm. J. Smyth, in alighting from an automobile last Friday on Michigan avenue, slipped on the oily roadway and fractured his hip. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Smyth in this misfortune, bad enough at any time, but particularly trying at this busy season, especially as he had only recently recovered from his former auto accident. Mr. Smyth is at St. Luke's hospital.

S. A. Jamieson entered upon his duties with the Geo. M. Garland Co. on December 16 and will leave shortly for Minneapolis, Minn., to open up a new office.

CUT FLOWERS For Xmas and New Year's

When making out your orders, please state either length or price of Roses wanted. When neither is stated, it is left to our discretion, and what we would send might not be what is wanted. This also applies to Carnation orders. We are not responsible unless orders plainly state what is wanted.

We expect a big supply of Roses and Carnations; also a big demand. We advise placing orders early and to wire extra orders up to the last minute. We want it understood that on account of Christmas rush we will ship orders on first train possible if train ordered on is impossible.

Wietor Bros. will have all the roses they expected for the holidays and will be strong on American Beauties, Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, My Maryland and Sunburst. N. J. Wietor says that orders are arriving from all sections of the country and the Christmas trade promises to be one of the best ever. The supply of carnations will be quite large but the demand is far greater than the receipts. This firm has a new red rose that looks very promising. It is similar to the Richmond in color but has a larger flower.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. is building a new factory at Des Plaines and will soon manufacture its own woodwork. The machinery will soon be installed and it is expected that the plant will be in full operation before February 15, 1913. E. Dunlap, with Means & Thacher, Boston, Mass., eastern representatives for the Garland Co., talked over business matters with his firm here this week.

J. A. Budlong's shipments of stock are now large and contain very choice stock of all kinds. American Beauty, Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney and My Maryland roses are fine and the lily of the valley is of its usual good quality. Phil Schupp and Wm. Homberg went carefully through the greenhouse last Sunday to get a line on the supply for the holidays.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a fine grade of American Beauties and a good supply of the other roses is now arriving at the store. Business has been very good here all this week and from present indications the Christmas trade promises to be a record breaker.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. received their first shipment of mistletoe on December 14 and it proved to be of very good quality. Red berries are seen here in large quantities and the supply of stock in general is arriving in fine condition.

Fred C. Hoerber visited his firm's greenhouses at Des Plaines on December 15 and was well pleased to find that Hoerber Bros. will have a large cut of roses for Christmas. Some fine Richmond are now seen at this store.

E. J. Fancourt, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., called on the trade last week showing blooms of new roses, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Fireflame, both of which were well received.

Erne & Klingel are featuring a fine grade of roses and poinsettias and are supplied with all other seasonable stock. Trade has been brisk at this store all week and promises to continue so.

At Percy Jones' store the Christmas orders are arriving in fine shape and it seems that this firm has gained the confidence of its patrons, for they just simply send in their orders and say nothing about prices.

Mike Kronos of Pittsburg, Pa., transacted business here on December 13. Mr. Kronos and George Manos, the Union Depot Florist, are interested in several stores in the East.

Miss Elsie Winterson, daughter of E. F. Winterson, who has been threatened with pneumonia and appendicitis, is again able to be about the house.

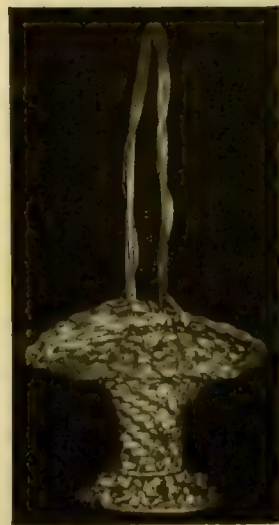

Mrs. Joseph Beaver is recovering in the Washington Park Hospital from a recent operation and expects to be home by Christmas.

John Michelsen, with the E. C. Ameling Co., has returned from a business trip to Indianapolis, Ind., and St. Louis, Mo.

Chas. C. Young, with C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo., was here on business December 16.

Robert Newcomb, with Vaughan's Seed Store, is back from a successful trip.

Tim Matchen entertained Peter Reinberg's employees at his home on December 15 and it is needless to say that Mrs. Matchen again came in for considerable praise for her cooking which L. Hoeckner, L. Loeser and S. Hansen say cannot be equaled. The party visited the Reinberg greenhouses in the afternoon and found that there will be a large cut of roses for the holidays including exceptionally fine Richmond and American Beauties.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store trade in both the cut flower and supply departments is exceedingly brisk and the plant department at Morton Grove is taxed to its utmost. This firm will have a large cut of roses for the holidays and the supply department is prepared to fill all late orders for Christmas goods.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is well supplied with stock of all kinds and is featuring a fancy grade of Killarney roses. Richmond and My Maryland of the same quality are also among the many offerings as well as cut poinsettias.

Isaac Cassidy, of Jersey City, N. J., for some time with the Foley Mfg. Co., this city, is prospecting in the western greenhouse building field on his own account.

Visitors: Eli Cross and Henry Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich.; E. Dunlap, representing Means & Thacher, Boston, Mass.; Chas. C. Young, with C. Young & Sons Co., St. Louis, Mo.; L. P. Harley, Hartford, Mich.; Gus Fredrickson, St. Joseph, Mich.; Mike Kronos, Pittsburg, Pa.

St. Louis.

BUSINESS INCREASES.

The market the past week showed an increase in demand and also in the supply. Roses also increased. Quite a number of pink of poor quality and color were in. American Beauties of good quality are selling well, but poor stock is hard to move. Chrysanthemums are about over, though a few good white are seen. Holly, ruscus, boxwood, red immortelles, cape flowers and everything red has the call. Narcissus is getting more plentiful, also Romans. Quite a stock of stevia is on hand. Lycopodium is of very good quality.

NOTES.

The Henry Shaw banquet was largely attended Friday evening. Richard Vincent, Jr., gave an illustrated lecture on the London flower show. Sixty members of the Florists' Club attended. Dr. Moore, director of the gardens, was toastmaster. Ostertag Bros., who have the largest resources in the city for putting up big "doings," will again be taxed by a very large reception and ball.

The St. Louis Florists' Club met last Thursday. Forty members were present, Charlie Young in the chair. The guest of honor was Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the Society of American Florists. Adolph Janecke, Oliver Sanders, F. X. Gorly and A. Windler were elected members.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has its counters filled with the finest violets the market produces and some very good White and Pink Killarneys and Richmonds. All are from local growers. Their supply of green wreaths and Christmas novelties is unlimited.

Julius Schaeffer has completely renovated and remodeled the store formerly occupied by Edw. L. Loyet, 918 Kings highway. He has installed a good supply of plants, cut flowers and Christmas novelties.

Fred C. Buchrucker & Sons, florists, report trade as good. Their store and greenhouse are at 3816-22 Virginia avenue where they have a fast growing trade. They make a specialty of funeral work.

The Ladies' home circle met at F. W. Bruenig's home last Wednesday. Mrs. Weber, Mrs. Otto Koenig, Mrs. Beneke were among those present.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. showed some extra good late white chrysanthemums, also a fine supply of roses and fancy carnations.

George H. Angermueller is headquarters for fine orchids, lily of the valley and Christmas novelties.

Many of the west end florists have big displays of ruscus and oak leaf wreaths.

A splendid display of poinsettias adorn the show windows of C. Young & Sons.

John Michelsen, representing the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, was a visitor.

Alex Siegel was proposed as a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

Some good mistletoe from Oklahoma is on the market.

The St. Louis Seed Co. is handling some good holly.

BIG THANKSGIVING TRADE.

Thanksgiving Day, which promised so well in floral circles, was not a disappointment. The day was beautiful, and the city thronged with visitors. The Sewanee contingent came in from all the nearby towns to "root" for their favorites and to see the great game with Vanderbilt. The display in flowers was truly magnificent and the sale was phenomenal. All say it was the best Thanksgiving ever and was equal for one day to either Christmas or Easter. Everybody sold out; not only the chrysanthemums, but also the roses and carnations went. Violets were not so plentiful, but the white chrysanthemum and purple ribbon did the "stunt" all right and they were not missed. All the violets that were in stock were sold out early.

The B. H. Stief Jewelry Company moved into a beautiful new store the first of the week and the occasion made a tremendous call for flowers. This is the leading jewelry firm of this city, and has been for fifty years. The store was a veritable bower of flowers, so that many passers-by thought it was a flower store. All of the florists here furnished flowers, and from New York, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis came other rare and costly blooms. There were many beautiful pieces from merchants in this city and also out-of-town orders. One of the largest pieces was a huge crown four feet in diameter and composed largely of yellow chrysanthemums. The firm gave to each visitor a rose, carnation or chrysanthemum.

ALL STOCK SHORT.

Trade is good, everything is short and good prices prevail. American Beauties bring $40 to $50 a hundred. Good weather now prevails. Carnations have again gone to the high-water mark and are likely to stay there for some time until the crops come in again. Violets are scarce and the price is up. Everything points just now to a scarcity for Christmas unless the weather conditions change to warmer.

NOTES.

There is already talk of building operations among a few of the growers. We wish all the readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, and a large share of good business conditions to us all.

CHRISTMAS STOCK SCARCE.

Reports show an increase in business over the previous year. Although not an oversupply of stock there was enough to go around Thanksgiving. The outlook for Christmas stock is not very promising. Everybody is wondering where he will get enough for the rush. Carnations are very scarce. The supply is not great enough to fill the demand. Roses of good quality are in fair supply, although there are never enough here. Valley also is very scarce, the orders showing an increase over last year of 200 per cent. Sweet peas are in good demand and sell for fair prices. Stevia and greens sell at all times. We have said goodbye to the chrysanthemum for this year. All have done well and none were thrown out.

NOTES.

Our new park superintendent, Chas. W. Sargent, has made good. He was appointed by Mayor Karb after a very spirited fight for the position. Mr. Sargent has had seventeen years of experience as a florist and his reputation as a grower and propagator is second to none.

A visit to the Indianola Florists found every thing in good shape. Albert Hill, the manager, takes great pride in showing visitors the various fine points of the place.

S. F. Stephens reports everything about ready for the holidays. His staff is very busy with green oak and red ruscus.

Miss Howard, of Howard & Co., says that business is good, especially in plants, but that there is a scarcity of stock.

Joe Hellenthal says business is booming at their place. Every one is busy with pot plants, of which they have a large variety.

Wm. Brust is still busy at the old stand. He has been taking many orders for pot plants.

Martin Ruehauf, Joseph Prince and Paul Halbrooks were Columbus visitors last week.

The Fulton Flower Shop has several weddings scheduled for next week.

The Livingston Seed Co. expects a bumper crop of carnations for Christmas.

The Art Floral Co. reports business very good with a fine run Thanksgiving.

TRADE IS VERY GOOD.

The flower trade for Thanksgiving was a pleasant surprise to local retailers. Business has been a trifle below normal for several months so that there were no anticipations of big things for Thanksgiving, but business turned out very good and, as there was on hand plenty of good home-grown stock, the results are more than satisfactory. Chrysanthemums of the four and six dollar grades were the greatest in demand, although Killarney and American Beauty roses enjoyed a fair degree of popularity. Paper White narcissus, antirrhinums, stevia and carnations in variety were disposed of in fairly large quantities.

There was not much demand for potted plants, neither were there many elaborate decorations, the trade seemingly running almost exclusively to cut flowers.

NOTES.

Harold Bofinger is now the manager of the Barteldes Seed Co.'s stores here, J. F. Hickey having gone to St. Louis and entered another line of business. Mr. Bofinger has been with the Barteldes headquarters at Lawrence, Kans., for over 20 years, so that it goes without saying that he is thoroughly familiar with everything pertaining to the seed industry in all its details. Since his coming here he has gained the confidence and esteem of the many employees in his charge and all indications point to an extended success for the business under his administration.

Now that the forest trees have shed their foliage we can see the crop of mistletoe which is about to be in good demand. There is plenty of it in sight, but it is certainly an arduous task to harvest the crop and it costs money to get a carload together. The Stiles Co. and the Barteldes Co. both have collectors out gathering stock, and ship a great deal to Northern markets. Furrow & Co., of Guthrie, had a splendid crop of chrysanthemums and many of them found their way to this city for the Thanksgiving trade.

The question of who will be the superintendent of parks for this city is still in abeyance.

BUSINESS UP TO EXPECTATIONS.

Business the last week has been up to expectations. There has not been much stock about and what there was sold up clean every day. The quality of almost everything is much improved, although many of the pink roses are a bit off color. White roses were in good demand as were other white flowers, there being quite a number of important funerals. The yellow kinds lead in demand, and if the call keeps up much more room will be given them next season. As the chrysanthemums are gone, the Easter lilies are finding a ready market. Valley sells up pretty close. There are plenty of gardenias. Violets have been shy. They are probably waiting to hear those Christmas bells. Snapdragon sells on sight. It is popular and will be more so later on. The price has advanced over 100 per cent the past week. Mignonette is a good seller as is bouvardia, fine flowers of which are offered from several houses. Calla lilies are coming in and move off rapidly. Quotations on Christmas stock will be about the same as a year ago. At this time it seems as if there will be a generous supply in all lines. American Beauty roses are said to be in crop with several large growers, as are also Richmond, both of which are leaders for the Christmas trade. Carnations find a ready sale now that the chrysanthemums are gone, although a few very fine Nonin were offered the past week.

NOTES.

A wonderful business is being done at the Robert Craig Co.'s establishment and they already have cleaned up in many lines. Birch bark boxes filled with combinations of foliage plants and ferns have had a wonderful sale and will undoubtedly become one of their specialties at this season.

Pink Japanese lilies were one of the novelties at the Geo. Niessen Co.'s market the past week. The master spirit here says that they will have one of the finest all-round stocks for next week ever offered in this country.

Wm. K. Harris had a house of holly trees exceptionally well berried which have met with ready sale. The aucubas this season were a failure, as they did not set fruit. They will be greatly missed.

At M. Rice & Co.'s supply house they say they never experienced such a season. Everything for Christmas (and they were well prepared) has been in great demand.

Berger Bros.' Central Market is featuring boxwood, holly and other Christmas greens and handling them in quantity. A splendid stock of roses is in sight.

Ed. Reid's auto stands him in good stead these days. He is kept busy whisking his out-of-town customers around among the plant growers. K.

121 Seventh Street,

PITTSBURGH, PA.

WHEN a man starts out to put up a new range, there are many serious things to consider. The most serious of them is perhaps just how much of your various friends' advice to take. Most of it is contradictory. Some say Iron Frame houses are the only thing to build. Others, that our Half Iron Frame houses is just as good for the money. One, that you ought to run your houses east and west. Another, that north and south is the only way. Certain ones claim that hot water with induced circulation is the most economical way of heating. Right on top of which you are told that steam has all the systems backed down and out.

What is a man to do in such a case? The answer is: Listen a lot and do nothing until you have talked the matter over carefully, point by point, with a greenhouse firm of long experience, like Hitchings & Co. A firm that not only knows greenhouse building from A to Z, but that are also expert heating engineers, backed up by a reputation of fifty years or more.

That's the way Mr. Feierabend went about it. He started right.

Hitchings and Co., Elizabeth, N. J. and 1170 Broadway, N. Y.

In 1910 we built two Half Iron Frame houses, 20x201 feet. In 1911, another house, making 26,000 square feet of glass surface.

The heat is generated by Hitchings' Cast Iron boilers.

If you are one of the Feierabend kind of men, who believe that the man who looks ahead farthest gets ahead fastest—then send for us when you are ready to build.

STOCK NOT PLENTIFUL.

The Christmas spirit is in the air and everywhere one sees preparations for the great holiday. As is usually the case at this time, business has been rather quiet for the last week. In fact, it is acknowledged by some of the oldest dealers that if business was good there would be a scarcity of stock, for stock is not over-plentiful. Gardenias are scarce and good ones are wholesaling at $5 per dozen and upward. Orchids of the Cattleya trianae variety wholesale at from $7 to $9 a dozen. While rose prices have been creeping up, they have not yet reached a very high figure, since 40 and 50 cents each is but a reasonable price for American Beauties at this season. Some fine stock of Mrs. Taft and Milady is on the market and wholesales at from $15 to $25 for Taft and $25 to $35 for Milady. Short and medium rose stock moves faster than the specials. Carnations are moving fairly well at an average of $5. There is a fair supply of lilies and lily of the valley and the prices are not high. Violets are moving fairly well, as they should, for the past week was emphatically "violet weather." That is, it was mild enough to wear them. However, violets are used up in various ways and orchids, valley, gardenias and sweet peas are supplanting them in corsage bouquets.

Monday, December 16.—There is a hopeful feeling in the wholesale district today. The supply of stock is not heavy and is cleaning up well. Weather conditions are ideal, clear and bracing. Carnations, which are not over plentiful, show an upward tendency for special and fancy stock, the fanciest touching 8 cents. Although as previously stated, there has been an upward tendency in gardenias and orchids, it does not now appear that they will go higher.

NOTES.

The committee of ladies appointed by President Manda at the last meeting of the New York Florists' Club to assist the entertainment committee in entertaining visitors to the International Flower Show is composed as follows: Mrs. John Donaldson, Mrs. C. The dealers in greens are remarkably active and most of them have taken additional storerooms for the holiday season. This is true of the Kervan Co., Geo. Cotsonas & Co. and N. Lecakes & Co. The aggregate of stock being handled by these firms is remarkable. Large forces of men are busy all day and sometimes far into the night making up wreaths and roping, but the demand will doubtless be very great.

Geo. Peters & Sons, who have an extensive carnation range at Hempstead, L. I., and are represented in the New York Cut Flower Co. by William Peters, are now sending in a good supply of carnations in variety.

Wm. Stewart Allen is now handling very fine rose stock, Milady and Mrs. Taft being especially good, from the range of A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn. Excellent lily of the valley is another feature.

Joseph Vock, of the Cut Flower Exchange, is carrying a fine line of lily of the valley and bulbous stock from the W. H. Siebrecht range, Astoria, L. I., which he represents in the Exchange.

L. A. Noe of Madison, N. J., was in the rooms of the New York Cut Flower Co. on December 14. Among the finest American Beauty roses handled by that company are the products of Mr. Noe's range.

Frank Myers, of Myers & Santman, Chestnut Hills, Pa., was in the city recently calling on M. C. Ford.

The Flower Auction Co., over which John P. Cleary presides, is stocking up for a large Christmas business.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht are now handling a fine line of gardenias and orchids in addition to a good supply of lilies, lily of the valley and other stocks.

On December 14 at P. J. Smith's there was a very fine stock of Easter lilies and L. rubrum. Lilies are among the leading specialties at this store.

H. E. Froment continues to receive fine American Beauty, Richmond and Lady Hillingdon roses from the L. B. Coddington range.

William Kessler is now well stocked with Christmas plants and his store is a busy place. A. F. F.

The annual meeting of the society was held in Greenwich, Conn., December 13, with a large attendance, President Stuart in the chair. One new member was elected and two proposals for membership received. It was decided to hold our first annual dinner in Germania Hall, New Rochelle, some time in January. Some fine plants and flowers were on exhibition, also some very fine celery, a special prize being offered for the best six heads. It was won by W. Wynne. H. Ryan was awarded a cultural certificate for a fine vase of poinsettias. Other exhibitors were Harry Wilde with solanums and bouvardias, James Foster with cypripediums and tomatoes, A. Pederson with narcissus and roses, the Geo. E. Baldwin Co., Mamaroneck, with Cypripedium Ensigne, and Scott Bros. with their peerless carnation Wm. Eccles.

The following members were elected as officers for the coming year: Robt. Williamson, Greenwich, Conn., presi-

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of this society was held at Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, on Wednesday, December 11, with a large attendance, President Johnston in the chair. The most important business transacted was the election of officers for the coming year. E. J. Brown, who has been treasurer of this society for a number of years, was unanimously elected president. James MacCarthy was elected vice president; E. Westlake, recording secretary; J. MacDonald, corresponding secretary; S. J. Trepass, treasurer; J. F. Johnston, trustee. The treasurer's report showed a nice balance to the credit of the society.

It was decided to have the annual dinner on January 23. The committee of arrangements are Messrs. Trepass, Everatt and Johnston. Mrs. H. M. Adams, Glen Cove, was elected an honorary member. Four new active members were elected and three petitions received. Prizes were offered for poinsettias, violets and carnations. The winners were D. Bjorkgreen, A. MacKenzie and V. Cleres. H. Gaut was awarded a certificate of culture for a very fine collection of vegetables and V. Cleres a certificate of culture for new seedling tomatoes. Prizes are offered for 18 carnations, 3 varieties; 25 sprays of freesias, 50 violets and 6 tomatoes at the January meeting.

Philadelphia Notes.

In the stores all is hurry and bustle, getting ready for the rush of the last days. Not much is offered in the way of novelties. Plant baskets will be leaders and promise to be very beautiful, as the many two-toned and fancy-shaped creations with tins are getting more elaborate each season. Ruscus is seen in much of the wreath work, taking the place of immortelles, which in spite of the competition are almost two prices. Holly is very well berried and fairly plentiful. The mistletoe is also fine.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have had a very busy week. The social season has set in in earnest and several large balls have been given. The opening of the new Ritz-Carlton Hotel, together with several elaborate dinners in honor of the event, called for a lavish display of choice flowers. At one dinner cattleyas were the flower and large quantities were used. K.

SHORTAGE OF CUT STOCK.

Business for this time of the year has been rather quiet. Early orders are being placed right along, however. Already there is a great shortage of cut flowers, the wholesale market being cleaned up every day. The growers say they have not been so short for a number of years. Roses are shipped in in fairly good shape and bring good prices right along. American Beauties seem to hang back somewhat. Carnations are scarce as usual and bring big prices. The outlook for these flowers for Christmas is not at all encouraging. Sweet peas, paper white narcissi, single daffodils and stevia are about the only fine flowers on the market. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

Fred C. W. Brown of Buffalo was the speaker at the Rochester Florists' Association meeting Monday night. His subject was "Art and the Decoration of Flowers." His talk was illustrated by a series of colored slides, being reproductions of his own work. The address was both profitable and interesting.

The convention of the Western New York Horticultural Society was held December 11-13 in Convention Hall. There were many able addresses and much interest was aroused.

H. E. Wilson, 88 East Main street, supplied the large shower and corsage bouquets at the Kochenpahl-Heilbrunn wedding last week.

Ralph Marsh of Brockport, N. Y., has recently put up a new greenhouse 165 feet long and it is now full of good carnations.

George B. Hart has just returned from a business trip to Boston, Mass., Philadelphia, Pa., and Providence, R. I. A. R. Jones of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, Pa., called on local florists December 14.

H. P. Neun's window this week was filled with Araucaria excelsa trimmed with red paper and ribbons.

The W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, was represented here last week by one of their salesmen.

Salter Bros. are showing a fine lot of poinsettias in their East Main street store.

J. A. Peterson of Cincinnati, O., called on trade last week. H. J. H.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

The Wernich Seed Co. was established in 1879 and is well and favorably known throughout the United States. The G. H. Hunkel Co. was established January, 1905. E. P. Hunkel is president, G. H. Chr. Olsen, Odense, Denmark.

The firm of Chr. Olsen, at Odense, Denmark, will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary December 1. The business was begun in a small way by Mr. Olsen in 1862, and has developed into one of the most prosperous and best known seed houses in Denmark. Contract growing was begun in 1890 with Danish farmers. The expert trade also has grown immensely until the firm is known throughout the world, proving its honorable treatment of its customers.

Mr. Olsen, Sr., the founder, retired from active participation in the business in 1902, since which time his two sons, Christian and Axel Olsen, have had charge. The firm now employs nearly one hundred people and more will be necessary next spring when the business will be enlarged. Chr. Olsen has taken many medals at Danish exhibitions, including that of the Scandinavian Horticultural Exhibition at Copenhagen, this year.

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 16.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce 10 cents, small cases; radishes, 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches.

New York, December 14.—Cucumbers, $1.25 per doz. and $2 to $2.50 per box; mushrooms, 75 cents to $2.10 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 10 cents to 15 cents per pound; radishes, $1 to $2 per 100 bunches.

Poultry and Market Gardening.

We often hear the remark that you cannot combine chickens and gardening. This is true in the sense that one cannot very well produce vegetables and chickens on the same space. However, as a business proposition, the two combine very well as one can be made to serve the other handsomely. The advantages are so many that we should try and overcome the disadvantages. In the first place, the gardener has the selling advantage, as the same people who buy his vegetables will buy his fowls and eggs. The common farm eggs are far from satisfactory, hence the gardener can command much higher prices than the average.

The second advantage is that much of the work falls into the winter months, also the returns. Still another benefit is the use of most every available remnant or waste to good advantage. The gardener is better able to produce eggs in winter than any one else. And last, but not least, a big poultry plant will almost solve the fertilizer question, for there is nothing superior to properly saved poultry droppings in the market garden.

By using up-to-date appliances, methods and feeds, it is comparatively easy to put this line on a good business basis. Five years ago we commenced in a small way, so as to learn as we went. We doubled each year and are now carrying about six hundred hens. We expect to double this again as we aim to have enough in time to keep one man busy always in this line. We used a part of this flock to patrol our spinach fields this fall against grasshoppers, which they did to perfection, doing us no noticeable damage. Where gardening is carried on in the country on a large scale a poultry plant, if well managed, would prove a valuable department.

Dry Weather Tomato

BEEBE'S EARLY PROLIFIC TOMATO

The earliest, most prolific bearer in existence. Does well on all kinds of soil, and on the poorest kind of soil last season, and without irrigation, yielded 620 bushels from less than one acre, when almost every other early variety was a failure; it being the driest, hottest, most unfavorable season ever known for them.

The cut is an exact photo, taken July 1, 1911, with 321 tomatoes. It is of the finest quality, medium to large for early ones, red with dark red flesh, small seed cells, a splendid keeper and shipper. Never affected with black rot.

Chestnut Bark Disease.

It is probably not new to most of our readers that a very serious bark disease threatens the chestnut trees of Eastern America. Since its discovery, eight years ago, says the American Botanist, it has caused a loss of nearly twenty-five million dollars. The disease is a fungus and is spread by spores so small that singly they are invisible to the unaided eye, but their power for harm is in no way dependent upon their size. When the disease attacks a healthy tree it is only a matter of a few months before it succumbs. Great efforts are being made to stop the spread of the disease, thus far without much success. It was first discovered in the vicinity of New York City and already has spread to half a dozen near-by states. It is estimated that if the disease finally succeeds in exterminating all our chestnut trees, it will cause a loss of more than three hundred million dollars.

Arboretum at Kenyon College.

Kenyon College is a historic institution established early in the last century on an extensive landed domain surrounding Gambier village in Knox county, almost exactly in the center of Ohio. As the nucleus of an endowment fund a township containing four thousand acres of land was secured from the government when the college was founded. Portions of the original grant have been sold from time to time, so that there now remain about the village some three hundred acres, comprising one of the most beautiful natural college sites in America. On this tract, which is quite elevated and slopes on three sides to the charming valley of the Kokosing river, are to be found a variety of soils, ranging from sandy shale through loam in various degrees of fertility to rich alluvial land along the river's edge.

For the dual purpose of renewing the splendid growth of native oaks which covers much of this area and also of increasing the number of species in the forest a small nursery was established on the college lands by the forestry department of the Ohio Experiment Station in the spring of 1909. Many kinds of deciduous and evergreen trees, both native and exotic, were planted at this time and after two years of growth the young trees were transplanted to openings in the woodlands, which had been preserved as a forest park. Each succeeding spring plantings have been made in the college nursery, which now covers at least an acre of ground.

In addition to systematic groupings of species such as should be found in a large arboretum, a number of superb landscape features have been outlined and it is believed that in time Kenyon College will be able to boast the most finished piece of landscape forestry to be found in any part of our country. Extensive colonies of birch, flowering dogwood, wild crab apple, service, sourwood, American hemlock and many other species adapted to planting for decorative and ornamental effect will be suitably located at various points in Kenyon forest. By the river will be planted willows, alders, certain kinds of birch and other species succeeding best in moist soil. Individual specimens of such trees as concolor fir, Douglas fir, Japan larch, American hemlock, rare oaks, lindens, beeches and other valuable ornamental species will be located on prominent sites in the extensive college grounds. Well developed groups and specimens of trees growing on a site of marvelous natural beauty, forever in sight of classic gothic buildings in early English collegiate architecture, should in time effect a combination of art's beauty and nature's loveliness such as can probably not be surpassed any place this side of the Atlantic.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

Give Your Plants All the Sun.

You can do so by simply using the Sunlight Double-Glass Sashes on your hot beds and cold-frames. A ¾ inch layer of dry air between the layers of glass affords ample protection. No mats or other covering ever needed.

They let in all the light and all the heat that the sun's rays carry. But they never permit the stored heat to escape or the outside cold to enter.

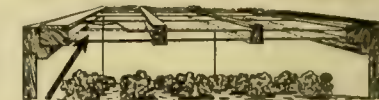

With these sash half the labor and cost are saved; and far better and earlier plants secured. They give you flowers and vegetables when they are luxuries.

THE DOMESTIC PARCELS POST.

Parcels Post General Provisions.

It is gratifying to note that at last the congress, before its final adjournment in August, passed almost unanimously an amendment (Section 8) to the Post Office Appropriation Bill (Public No. 336) providing for three kinds of parcels post, two of which are to have a weight limit of eleven pounds, and one a weight limit of four ounces, at different rates, to become operative January 1, 1913.

The present parcels weight limit of four pounds is thus extended to eleven pounds, and conforms with that of several foreign countries. Fourth-class mail matter is to embrace all other matter, including farm and factory products, not now embraced in either the first- second- or third-class, not exceeding eleven pounds nor larger in size than seventy-two inches in length and girth combined, and not likely to injure in form or kind the person of any postal employee or damage the mail equipment or other mail matter and not of a character perishable within a period reasonably required for transportation and delivery.

The postal rate of this class is to vary in amount according to the distance the parcel is to go. This, we believe, will be the most vexatious and annoying feature of the new plan, and contrary to the purpose of our general postal usage, that is, one rate regardless of the distance traversed. The country outside of the Philippine Islands is to be divided up into units of area thirty miles square, which forms a so-called "postal" center, and postal maps or plans are to be put up everywhere showing the location of these numerous centers. The immediate place where the sending party happens to live is called Zone No. 1, and within a radial distance from the center of this zone of 50 miles a package weighing one pound or a fraction of a pound can be sent for five cents and three cents for each excess pound or fraction of same.

Zone No. 2 includes a radial area of 150 miles from the center of Zone

No. 1, with a rate of six cents for the first pound or fraction of same and four cents for each additional pound.

Zone No. 3 includes a radial area of 300 miles beyond the center area of No. 1, with a rate of seven cents for the first pound or fraction of same and five cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

Zone No. 4 includes a radial area of 600 miles from the center area of Zone No. 1, with a rate of eight cents for the first pound or fraction thereof and six cents for each additional pound or fraction of the same.

Zone No. 5 includes a radial area of 1,000 miles from the center area of Zone No. 1, with a rate of nine cents a pound or fraction thereof and seven cents for each additional pound or fraction of the same.

Zone No. 6 includes a radial area of 1,400 miles from the center area of Zone No. 1, with a rate of ten cents for a pound or fraction thereof and nine cents for each additional pound or fraction of same.

Zone No. 7 includes a radial area of 1,800 miles from the center area of Zone No. 1 with a rate of eleven cents for the first pound or fraction thereof and ten cents for each additional pound or fraction of same.

Zone No. 8 includes all territory from the center of Zone No. 1 beyond the 1,800 miles of Zone No. 7 and any portion of the United States, District of Columbia, Philippine Islands, and United States Territories at a rate of twelve cents a pound or fraction of a pound and twelve cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof.

An appropriation of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars was made to defray the cost of special equipment, maps, stamps, directories, etc., and the postmaster-general is given authority to increase or decrease the rates subject to the approval and consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission after investigations to insure sufficient revenue to adequately pay the cost of the service.

The postmaster-general is also authorized to provide indemnification of

Help and Situations Wanted,
Advertisements,

shippers, for shipment injured or lost, by insurance or otherwise, and when desired for the collection on delivery of the postage and price of the article sent, and to fix the necessary charges.

There is provided also a rural free delivery and local parcel post for delivery on a route from one person to another or to the central postoffice limited to a weight of eleven pounds for a single parcel with a rate of five cents for the first pound or fraction thereof and one cent for each additional pound or fraction of same.

The third kind of parcels post is unrestricted as to territory limits, and is general in its operation, but the weight limit is four ounces, and the rate is one cent per ounce or fraction thereof. This rate is the same as the existing parcels post.

There is no doubt of the success and value of this new parcels post legislation, and it will certainly advance the interests of all merchants throughout the country. S. A.

Seedsmen and the Parcels Post.

We note that postmasters have received maps and final instructions upon the conduction of the parcels post which goes into effect January 1.

The parcels post has resolved itself into just what I have all along contended that it would under the zone system. It would have better been named "farical post."

The dividing of the country into squares as originally proposed has shown itself so complicated that the postoffice department has adopted the eight concentric circles about each postoffice.

These circles are misleading in that they are 50, 150, 300, 600, 1,000, 1,400, 1,800 and beyond miles in diameter, not in radius, so that, for illustration, taking Painesville as a center, we have circles with only 25, 75, 150, 300, 500, 700 and 900 miles radius.

The man this parcels post was intended to benefit, the farmer, is for the following reasons hit the hardest: Farm products are barred from parcels post only under certain conditions of packages and distances. Again, if John Smith, ten miles out on rural route 4 wants to mail a package to his friend Henry Jones, in Peoria, Ill., he must drive ten miles to Painesville to mail his package, because his rural carrier does not know what zone Peoria is in, and he cannot carry distinctive parcels post stamps, or the nice large 20-foot map of the department, and lastly because the rules say parcel's post packages must be mailed at the postoffice or designated depositories as it will not be collected by carriers.

I contend now, as always, that the zone system will produce exactly the opposite of what the friends of the real parcels post desire; that parcels post is not practical because it will be proved too complicated and expensive to maintain, caused by its limited use.

This is exactly the condition that will arise, for if the farmer has to drive miles to obtain the use of a service that ought to come to him, he won't use it and the great problem of reduced cost of living and the like predicted benefits will go unsolved.

It seems to me that the seed trade has reaped the greatest blessing out of this tangled mass, and that is that we still enjoy a flat rate of eight cents per pound, regardless of distance, and that we have gained the right to increase the weight of our packages from four to eleven pounds.

The value of this privilege should be apparent to every right thinking person in the trade, for the only possible saving would be made on packages going within the radius of 150 miles and we are relieved of the necessary complications of zoning.

As to stamping, the law is quite clear. The seed trade must use distinctive parcels post stamps, but only to the value of $\frac{1}{2}$ cent per ounce regardless of distance.

Taking all disadvantages into consideration, we think the wording of the clause exempting seeds, plants, bulbs, roots, etc., from the complications of the present parcel's post is most fortunate, and that we are (as a trade) to be congratulated in having been so provided for.

W. F. THERKILDSON.

Hydrangea Arborescens For Easter.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

What treatment should Hydrangea arborescens get to have in bloom for Easter, 1913? Should plants having 3-foot canes be cut back?

K. F. Co.

To get Hydrangea arborescens in bloom for Easter, 1913, will be rather difficult, especially if plants are not well prepared, that is, if potted early or pot-grown. They require the same treatment as the well-known Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. Cut back young growths to 3 or 4 eyes, give them rich soil, and start plants in a temperature of about 45 to 50 degrees and, when growth is well advanced, increase heat according to time they are required to be in flower, 70 to 75 degrees. The treatment is about the same as for other hydrangeas.

Flower Designing at University of Illinois

The display of floral work which was arranged and exhibited at the auditorium of the University of Illinois at Urbana, Ill., on April 20 by the students in floriculture, which was announced in THE AMERICAN FLORIST and illustrated in issue of May 4, page 868, was greatly admired by the twelve hundred visitors who had the opportunity to inspect it. The students were assisted by Miss Emily Dorner of Lafayette, Ind., not only in their arrangement of the flowers, but also in displaying the artistic work. There were twenty different floral arrangements shown including bridal flowers, corsages and boutonnieres, bouquets, baskets and the several funeral designs, illustrations of some of them appearing in this issue. They were all catalogued and described for the benefit of those who attended the exhibition of the students' skill and knowledge which had been acquired in the course of lectures and laboratory work which was taken at the university and completed on April 4.

The Crepe Spray.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

The retail florist who is building up a business cannot give too much attention to the furnishing of flowers for funerals. Scarcely a day passes without work of this character, and much of the time it will be found to have totaled more of the day's business than all other departments. For an occasion of this kind one of the first orders is for the crepe or door spray, which is used either in place of the undertaker's ribbon or in connection with it, and is attached to the same side of the door, at the bell pull. popular arrangement for this purpose is the spray, not the regulation bunch, but a draping or ribbon like effect, made of asparagus or strings of smilax for the foundation and on which are fastened the flowers to be used.

First, from a hook or projection about five feet from the floor suspend the strings of asparagus made up from sprays or naturally grown, or the strings of smilax. I prefer the asparagus as it affords more support for the flowers. This foundation should be about four feet in length and eight to twelve inches wide and gathered in with the wire which is to support it about eight inches from the top. When this is suspended against any convenient place, the flowers are wired on, beginning at the bottom and working up, the flowers all pointing downward. This work can also be done with the spray laid out on a table, but when suspended quite a number of flowers will be hidden, while those placed on the green as it is suspended will all show when it is finally in place. The top should be finished with a bunch of the flowers used but placed with the flowers up.

There is a very great variety of flowers suitable for these arrangements, carnations, roses, violets, pansies, asters, lilies of the valley, orchids, in fact almost any flower can be used to answer the purpose. A ribbon bow with long streamers not too wide is often used to give a finish but is not required when used in connection with that placed by the undertaker. There are many other arrangements for this purpose, chief amongst them being the wreath. Wreaths of galax with ribbon (with or without flowers), wreaths of flowers, white for young people and purple (as of violets, pansies, or purple asters for elderly persons) are frequently called for. An oval crescent form is very suitable for this work. Clusters of long stemmed roses tied with long streamers of ribbon are suitable. Sometimes for a child the draping takes the form of a number of narrow ribbon streamers to which are tied, with bows of the same ribbon, lilies of the valley or small white buds. A pair of sago palm leaves with a cluster of purple peonies tied with broad purple ribbon is appropriate for an elderly person. Being suspended in the outside air which quickly wilts many kinds of flowers the order is generally for renewal each day, although at times the spray returned is found to be remarkably well preserved. Christmas Plants in New York.

We who are old enough may with profit compare the plant productions that are today seen in the stores with those of twenty years ago. The ericas, azaleas, poinsettias, begonias, aucubas and ardisias that are now seen at Christmas would have been revelations to our fathers. Other stocks might be mentioned, but we name these as illustrations. When to the foregoing are added the many new devices, thanks to our dealers in florists' supplies, for exploiting what we have, we may be pardoned for taking some pride in the Christmas offerings of 1912.

It is true that the past autumn was particularly favorable for plant development, so much so in fact that it was sometimes feared that stock would advance too rapidly. In some instances that may have happened but the net result, as we see it, is a magnificent exhibit. The ericas (or in deference to our Scotch friends, the heathers) were never so beautiful and they are leading features in all the best stores. Furthermore, it is surprising where they all come from. It has long been known that L. Dupuy, and Pankok & Schumacher of Whitestone, L. I., A. Schulthies of College Point, L. I., and H. D. Darlington of Flushing, L. I. were growers of this stock, but this year they have broken all previous records.

There is another section to be considered. Patrick O'Mara once said that "we always want to know what they are doing over in Jersey." Therefore, we must state that good plants of all commercial varieties are on the market from the ranges of the Julius Roehrs Co. and from Bobbink & Atkins, both firms being located at Rutherford, N. J. The camellias and begonias of the Lorraine type, grown at the Roehrs range are striking features of the trade.

Thus far we have not noticed any very striking plant novelties. In the process of evolution, it cannot be said to be a novelty that stocks grow better from year to year. In fact, we expect these plant specialists to do a little better from year to year and for this year we cheerfully advance them several points. There is a pink poinsettia on the market, but we do not think much of it because it is not a good pink. Large plants of the imported holly are very fine and are noteworthy features in some of the stores. The azaleas are magnificent. We do not recall a Christmas when so many large and well flowered azaleas were seen in the stores. The poinsettias, too, are very fine, although there is yet room for improvement in the way some growers arrange them in pans for the market. The stalk of a poinsettia that has dropped all the lower leaves is rather unsightly. A few plants of asparagus or some of the small ferns worked in makes a great improvement.

A splendid feature is the ardisias and there are many of them. Their glossy green foliage and great clusters of red berries seem so appropriate that even the red ribbon with which most of them are decorated seems scarcely to be necessary. While along the same lines the aucubas are noticeable, they do not appeal to us as do the ardisias. The camellias are very fine and it is a matter for congratulation that these old favorites are again prominent. For the begonias of the Lorraine type a good word must be said, relating to beauty, but this year they seem to be rather unsatisfactory on account of their non-keeping qualities. The autumn was so warm that they came on too fast.

The crotons, the dracenas in variety, the ferns and various other foliage and flowering plants all have a part in enhancing the beauty of the retail stores. There is in some stores a certain amount of artificial plant stock, which is not ugly, but we wish it was not there. With the present great resources of natural plant stock to draw from we believe every retailer can find something better than artificial stock. If it must be sold let somebody other than a florist do it. A. F. F.

DAYTON, O.—According to newspaper reports. Geo. Bartholomew, for ten years manager of the Miami Floral Co., has severed connection with that concern and will engage in the cut flower business for himself.

Retail Stores in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Robert G. Wilson's store and conservatory at Greene avenue near Fulton street was beautiful for Christmas with the choicest productions in flowering plants, a particularly fine feature being the ericas or heather. The facilities for handling and caring for stock are excellent, Mr. Wilson having a considerable additional glass area at 341 Greene avenue. He has always a fine lot of young stock growing on and is always prepared to cover every feature of the trade. He has always been fortunate in his selection of assistants. One of the recent additions to his force is John Ross, who for six years was in charge of the floral decorations at Sherry's famous New York restaurant.

Frank McKee's store and conservatories at Fulton street and Classon avenue are the show places of that particular section of the city. One of the striking features prominent in the store is the beautiful aquarium where a great collection of gold fish disport themselves. There are many other artistic features in the furnishing of this store. The conservatories and store are well stocked with fine flowering and foliage plants and the visitor is sure of cordial and considerate treatment.

William H. Mallon has recently opened a fine store at the corner of Fulton street and Lafayette avenue. The facilities for window display on this corner are particularly good and Mr. Mallon, who has had long experience in the business, is making the most of it for the holidays.

The Lafayette Florist Co., 652 Fulton street, of which H. I. Bailey is manager, has a good store, well stocked with seasonable productions.

The store of James Mallon's Sons is one of the institutions which cluster around the Brooklyn Borough Hall and the members of the firm are striking and familiar figures. The Brooklyn citizen who can remember the time when James Mallon or his sons were not selling flowers in that borough must be classed among the fathers and elder statesmen. They have two stores, one at Borough Hall and one on Smith street. Both are now beautiful for the Christmas season and show that the proprietors have kept pace in the march of horticulture.

Another notable Brooklyn store is that of John Weir. The wholesale district of New York would miss him more than any other man that we can think of, for he is his own buyer and is a good one; but aside from the financial consideration, he is always sunny tempered and cheerful, and these qualities are very desirable, particularly on dull days. Mr. Weir does a very large business and is also one of the men who has grown up with the flower business, or it might be better to say that the flower business has grown up with him. A. F. F.

SPIRIT LAKE, IA.—Judson Klein, proprietor of the Spirit Lake Greenhouses, has let the contract for moving his buildings from his father's farm to his own property on Anna street. He has 4,000 square feet of glass and has grown cut flowers and bedding plants for the last three years. He will soon add another greenhouse, 16x18 feet, to his plant.

PEOPLE WE KNOW.

John Miesem.

John Miesem, trustee-elect of the New York Florists' Club, was born in Coblenz, Germany, near the historic Rhine, 47 years ago. He learned the cut flower business in his native land, which, it may be said in passing, has turned out quite a number of good florists.

Twenty-seven years ago he came to this country and for four years worked as a journeyman at different establishments. Twenty-three years ago he started in business for himself at his present location, Elmhurst, L. I. He has at times grown a variety of stocks, but is now a specialist in the forcing of Lilium giganteum.

Just how successful Mr. Miesem has been will be shown by the statement that he supplies four different wholesale houses of New York with a daily cut of blooms, and it looks to us as though he may be able to take on a few more in a short time. His simple but direct methods would be a revelation to some growers.

He has an estimable wife and five children, the oldest being well grown. The youngest is a jolly little toddler still much interested in Christmas toys. Mr. Miesem has been a member of both the S. A. F. and the New York Florists' Club for a number of years, and is also a member of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association. He is a Mason and is also a member of the Astoria bowling team and a good bowler. A. F. F.

George Dickson.

THE IRISH ROSARIAN HONORED.

The National Rose Society of England at its December meeting by unanimous vote awarded the Dean Hole memorial medal to George Dickson, as head of the firm which in the opinion of the members of this famous society has done most for the rose. The personal friends of Mr. Dickson and the many friends of the firm in this country will certainly be glad to learn of this signal honor.

George Dickson entered upon his eighty-first year in July, 1912, and while relieved from active work by his sons, he is still greatly interested in the annual introductions of the firm of which he has so long been head. As most American florists know, the firm of Alexander Dickson & Sons, Ltd., of Belfast and Dublin, has its nurseries at Newtownards, County Down, Ireland.

Mr. Dickson has been certainly very fortunate in having the assistance and hearty co-operation of his six sons. Of these sons Alexander Dickson and George Dickson are now the hybridizers and growers of new roses at Newtownards. Thomas Dickson is manager of the farm, while Andrew Dickson is manager of the rose gardens at Dublin. Hugh Dickson, so well known as an expert, both in sweet peas and culinary peas, is manager of the seed business. The legal end of the business is under the able control of Gordon Dickson, solicitor in Belfast, who a few years ago protected the right of the name Alexander Dickson by securing letters patent for the distinctive name "Hawlmare" as applied to roses, plants and seeds.

The accompanying photograph of George Dickson will be interesting, not only to his many personal friends in America, but also to thousands of florists who have grown Killarney, Liberty, Mrs. Jardine and Melody. The lovely "Fireflame" about to be introduced will still further advance the prestige of the premier rosarian.

Among the garden peas sent out by Alexander Dickson & Sons are Pilot, the largest podded first early smooth pea, and Royal Salute, the most popular of all large podded late peas in England. Among the sweet peas are Florence Nightingale, Irish Belle and Vermilion Brilliant, all three of which are deservedly popular in America.

Mr. Dickson has received many other marks of appreciation, including the Victoria medal of honor conferred by the Royal Horticultural Society of England in 1907 for distinguished services to horticulture. In the unusual business activity of a long life he has found time for much public spirited work, having been president of the Newtownards Horticultural Society for upwards of 50 years. He has been a member of his local board of guardians for a long period and chairman of that body for five years and he has included the duties of justice of the peace in his regular routine.

Origin of the Spencer Sweet Peas.

In addition to the sweet pea Countess Spencer, raised by Mr. Cole, a similar variety was grown about the same time by E. Viner, Frome, England, who tells the story of his production in a letter written last spring to a member of the Horticultural Club of London.

"As an artisan living close on the town," writes Mr. Viner, "my garden has always been very limited, and therefore I have to make a selection of what serves, or what I like best.

"It must have been in the spring of 1900 I procured a few seeds each of 'Prima Donna,' and 'Lovely,' with the object of choosing the one I liked best, and my choice fell on 'Prima Donna.' I quite discarded 'Lovely.' The following year I grew 'Prima Donna' from seed I saved myself, and quite late in the season I noticed a spray of two blooms (on 'Prima Donna') at the extremity of a shoot with a peculiar crimped character. I worked them and allowed them to seed (no other flowers appeared), and I obtained seven good seeds.

"The following year I planted them in due course, and all germinated, and, to my delight, five retained the wavy character. The other two were 'Prima Donna'—pure. But the wavy ones were glorious in the fine weather of early July. Now the Bath show (roses, etc.), was, and is now, held about the second week in July, and I took a bunch of the blooms and got them placed before the judges and committee, who gave me a certificate for it, and, on the spur of the moment, at the suggestion of others, it was named 'Nellie Viner.' I. House was at the show and saw the flowers, and wrote me later with the object of buying it. Later in the season I sent blooms to Mr. Eckford, to whom I eventually sold.

"Through this part of the country it is well known that I secured this variety in the way described, but the fact has apparently never reached those in high places.

"Mr. Wright, in his book, 'Beautiful Flowers and How to Grow Them,' says in his chapter on sweet peas, that the variety was raised by some amateur, but by whom or where he was unable to say.

"Of course, I know Mr. Cole's variety was put on the market first, Mr. Eckford being obliged to grow another season, as the stock was small. Mr. Eckford was also informed that the variety on the market was something like his; he therefore dropped the idea of another name and sent it out as his superior stock of 'Countess Spencer.'

"I think had it not been for me, one of the fine forms of this charming flower would never have been known.

"Therefore, while this is being discussed, if you could bring my small share in the work before the liberal minded among those who form the moving spirits, and could do ever so small a good for me, I should be exceedingly grateful."

Mr. Viner's story is rendered pathetic by the fact of recent ill health, he having been compelled to relinquish his trade of electrotyper and to live on the scanty allowance of a sick society and what his wife is able to earn. Vernon Hill, one of the vice-presidents of the National Sweet Pea Society of England called on Mr. Viner recently and found him to be in need of aid. The general committee of Mr. Hill's society voted £10 to begin a testimonial fund for Mr. Viner, and W. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, agreed to act as treasurer of a committee appointed to receive contributions.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Geo. C. Roedig, chief of the department of horticulture of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, has been authorized to make the announcement that a prize of $1,000 will be offered for a new rose to be named in honor of the exposition.

WITH THE GROWERS

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa.

When a grower is looking around for something new in the rose line, he is pretty sure to visit the Scott Nursery at Sharon Hill, Pa., look the stock over and have a talk with that sterling rose enthusiast Alexander Scott, than whom there is no better judge of what it takes to make a good commercial rose. For years new forcing roses have been a specialty with which was largely grown. He also sent out the Killarney, which did not find favor at first, its good qualities not being discovered until Benjamin Dorrance of Wilkesbarre, Pa., gave it the proper treatment and it responded with flowers that took the New York market by storm and caused an instant demand for the stock from all parts of the country. In this season's selection Mr. Scott says he feels sure he has from four to six red roses any one of which promises to be better than Richmond. The advent of the best of this lot will be watched for by all growers, for the rose that beats the Richmond must be "some" rose.

Several new ones that will go out next season and which will likely be seen in the shows this fall and go the round of the florists' club meetings appear to have all the earmarks of sterling novelties. The first is Irish Fire Flame, a rose with only five petals but before it opens it is a long pointed bud which holds its bud shape for a long time and only opens wide in a very hot room. Its color is its strong point, it being like a flame, or as near as any rose has gotten to it as yet. It is a rich copper, reddening at the tips of the petals the base being a lighter yellow. It is borne on a long, stiff, wiry stem well clothed, with foliage of a rich shade of green on top and a decided copper color underneath. The strong shoots (the plant is a very strong grower and looks as if it will be very prolific), bear a cluster of buds which if the center one is taken out will all come forward at the same time. Mr. Scott says it is not for summer forcing, but for the six months in the year when cut flowers are in demand he predicts it will cut possibly more than any other variety.

Janet is another new one that will attract the attention of all growers. It is a good, full bud on a stout stem, color, old gold turning to a rosy salmon. A vase of it is certainly very striking. All the popular new yellow toned roses, of which Mr. Scott had benches of each under cultivation, Lady Hillingdon, Melody, Mrs. Aaron Ward, were brought out and vases of each, together with the two new ones, Irish Fire Flame and Janet, gave a pleasing chromatic effect that I am sure was never presented before.

ROSE JANET, GROWN BY ROBERT SCOTT & SON, SHARON HILL, PA.

Mr. Scott. He is the agent in this country for Alexander Dickson & Sons of Newtownards, Ireland, the grower of "Hawlmarm" roses. Hawlmarm means the best.

Mr. Scott pays a visit to this famous rose growing establishment every summer when the 20,000 seedlings are in flower and spends two weeks making notes day by day, selecting finally about fifty sorts that seem to him to have the necessary qualifications or to the best of his judgment that appear promising and worth a trial under glass in this country. Choosing the right varieties from the many seedlings offered is indeed a difficult task, for many sorts that are beautiful in color, form, habit of growth and productiveness as seen in the outdoor beds there prove failures in America, not forcing well or not producing enough flowers to make them profitable, or perhaps possess too much hybrid blood and are dormant when they should be flowering.

Two years ago Mr. Scott selected forty-five sorts, but out of the lot he has found only two varieties that are likely to be worth sending out. This pursuit of novelties is a lottery and a very expensive part of the business, but when one does strike a good thing the public responds liberally, and even large stocks are not found sufficient for the demand. Mr. Scott sent out Liberty, which was a most sterling novelty and a money maker for several years, until succeeded by the Richmond. Mrs. Jardine was another

NEW IRISH ROSE FIRE FLAME.

From Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa.

Another new one is a sport of Killarney, which originated here. It is called Killarney Brilliant, and is such a decided red that it might be called scarlet. Great care is taken in selecting only plants that when flowering, come up to and hold the color of some of the plants that have been selected as standard. This is likely to be grown in quantity.

In speaking of sports, Mr. Scott said there were freak and legitimate sports. The freak is one that was a break that failed to show the characteristics of the parent plant, the foliage would be different and generally the good points of the parent were not present. Legitimate sports are like the white Killarney, the Bride and the Bridesmaid. These show their parentage without doubt and the addition of the new color makes them very valuable.

The Maryland is seen here for the last season as Mr. Scott says it only comes in paying crops from March to October and then brings very little money, so it must make way for something more profitable. A house of Mrs. Taft looked well and had done splendidly all summer. There was white Killarney, both Budlong's double and the single of Montgomerys'. He could not get stems in the Budlong variety.

The largest house in the place, and it is a large one, was filled with pink Killarney, 26,000 plants which looked very promising. A house or two of chrysanthemums, mostly Chadwicks, showed splendid growth. They were what Mr. Scott called a catch crop to fill in while another crop of roses were getting ready. Gardenias are a feature here, Mr. Scott being very successful with this flower. The plants all show remarkable vigor. They are planted out on tables and for the most part are covered with buds in all stages of growth. There are 8,000 plants in all. Strong bottom shoots were pushing out which it was said would furnish the second crop of flowers after the holidays. Mealy bug easily finds lodgment with the gardenia. At one time insecticides were tried and applied liberally even to the detriment of the plants. They find now that the best insect destroyer is water scientifically applied. A fine, well directed spray washes any insects from the plants. There was no evidence of bugs or insects of any kind, the plants being clothed with a brilliant, glossy, green foliage that is a pleasure to see. All manure used is first steamed. The purpose is mainly to get rid of the ammonia. The first vapor that rises from the steaming tanks is very heavily charged and it is almost impossible to stand in the immediate vicinity. The manure is also softened so that it becomes more soluble and is more readily taken up by the roots of the plants.

ROBERT KIET.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—C. N. Lindley of Salem was re-elected president of the Indiana State Horticultural Society at its fifty-second annual meeting recently held in this city. Vice-presidents from each congressional district (except the thirteenth, where a choice will be made later) were elected.

Chicago Growers Visit Joliet, Ill.

About 30 people, mostly growers, accepted the Chicago Carnation Co.'s invitation to be their guests on Wednesday, December 18, when an excursion was given to the company's greenhouses, so that all those interested could see the new scarlet seedling carnation, The Herald, growing. Manager A. T. Pyfer accompanied the party on the train to the range at Joliet, about 45 miles from Chicago, where luncheon was served immediately after arrival. After the inner man had been satisfied an inspection of the greenhouses began and the first thing that attracted the attention of everybody present was the general neatness of the place and the fine condition of the stock. Of course, The Herald was the main object of everyone's visit, for this new scarlet carnation has for the past two years won first prize over all reds in the 100 class wherever it has been exhibited. It was not necessary for Superintendent Olsem to point out the good features of this carnation, as it is growing in his firm's greenhouses, for it certainly did look fine and one could not help but agree with him when he said that if the dealers could all see it growing they would place their orders for cuttings immediately.

The Herald is the result of a cross between two scarlet seedlings, Nos. 50 and 49. Seedling No. 50 was a seed parent of Harlowarden which was originated by the late James Hartshorne, and was an exceptionally strong, robust grower, producing very fine flowers on short, stiff stems. It was such a fine free bloomer that instead of discarding the variety it was given to a small florist to see what it would do in a small commercial place where it did so well as a commercial carnation that Mr. Hartshorne again secured some of the plants, which were still in his possession at the time of his death. No. 49 was a bright scarlet on long stems, therefore The Herald favors its seed parent in every particular except that it has a longer stem and a brighter color. It was among the first carnations produced by Peter Olsem. The growth is somewhat on the order of Enchantress; very strong and a darker green with thinner grass; a much faster grower, producing fine large flowers on strong, stiff stems which develop much quicker than Enchantress. The plants make a good growth in the field; lift easily and establish themselves in a remarkably short time after lifting.

This firm has about 300,000 carnation cuttings in the sand, including a goodly number of The Herald, and the following varieties, which it also grows: Rosette, Wodenethe, Gloriosa, Pink Delight, Conquest, White Wonder, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Enchantress, Princess Charming, May Day, Rose Pink Enchantress, Washington, Alvina, Victory, Scarlet Glow, Bonfire and Beacon.

After a thorough inspection of the entire plant the party was escorted to the depot by Messrs. Pyfer and Olsem, who were heartily thanked for their kind hospitality. The following is a complete list of the visitors: J. C. Bruckner, A. F. Longren, Jas. Morton, J. McNulty, J. L. Derries, Hugo Luedtke, Geo. B. Dawes, Walter Ameling, Nick M. Potchen, Nick Steinmetz, Fred Stielow, Jr., E. H. Blameuser, Edw. A. Ollinger, S. A. Jamieson, H. Blewitt, Sol. Garland, Fred Hinks, F. C. Hoerber, W. H. Ameling, Wm. Wicklendahl, Walter Burhop, Wm. Fluegge, Jacob Meyers, John Wieland, James Psenicka, Jos. P. Brooks, N. J. Kruchten and John Ristow.

The Fuller's Teasel.

Without doubt, the name of fuller's teasel (Dipsacus fullonum) is much more familiar to botanists than the thing itself. Even the "common" teasel (Dipsacus sylvestris) appears to belie its name in certain regions, for the latest edition of "Gray's Manual" makes it "rather rare." Along the main lines of travel in the Northern States, however, the latter species is often encountered, but the fuller's teasel is certainly among the rarities. The American Botanist says that it may be doubted whether one botanist in fifty has ever seen it growing. In view of this fact, it may be surprising to many to learn that this plant is cultivated in some parts of the United States in quantity, and that in 1910 nearly $7,000 worth were exported to Great Britain. That country uses some $75,000 worth in the course of a year. The fuller's teasel gets its name from its use in fulling cloth, the sharp recurved and elastic bracts of the flower-head being very useful in raising a nap on woolen goods. The heads are fixed on a rapidly revolving wheel or cylinder and the cloth passed over it in such a way that the fibers are caught and shredded out. It is said that the inventive genius of man has never devised an implement for this work that could compare with this one of nature's own making. Most of the American teasels come from a small region in Onondaga county, N. Y., where the industry has been carried on for more than seventy years. Though there seems to be no immediate danger that the demand for teasels will cease, there is also little inducement for others to embark in their cultivation because of the limited use. Since the teasel is a biennial two years are required for one crop and considerable hand labor is necessary, especially in harvesting and sorting. So nicely must the heads be arranged for various classes of work, that they are often sorted into seventy different sizes. An average crop will give 100,000 heads to the acre which bring in market from fifty cents to two dollars a thousand.

NEW YEAR'S.

On account of New Year's, next week's issue will go to press Tuesday, December 31, one day earlier than usual and advertisers and correspondents will therefore favor us by mailing their copy as early as possible.

BEGIN the new year right by renewing subscriptions promptly.

THE usual supply of red carnations failed to develop this season in time for the holiday business and other stocks advanced accordingly.

OUR WISH.—In 1913 such varied sunshine as will suit all our patrons with enough rain to insure a healthy growth of stock and business.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved, as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

THE new parcels post will go into effect January 1 and the compilers of catalogues should investigate its provisions as printed elsewhere in this issue.

RAISER'S REMARKS.

All the foregoing varieties are strictly winter blooming. The foliage is more rounded, but not so strong as the late flowering Spencers, the height 6 to 10 feet under glass, 3 to 5 feet when grown outdoors.

The flowers are just the same as the late flowering Spencers with extra large wavy flowers and exposed or open keel, bearing over 50 per cent. Four flowers to each stem, and if raised under ideal conditions many will bear 5 and 6 flowers. If sowed August 15 they will begin to bloom in 65 days. If sowed in October, they will begin to bloom in 90 to 100 days, according to the weather. After they are about 4 feet high, with each foliage sprung one stem with extra strong and large flowers. They are just as productive and early as the common old winter sweet pea.

The Flower Trade in Europe.

A trip which I made to Europe last summer, in line with our flower business impressed me very strongly and may not be without interest to other florists. Things have improved there in some respects since my last trip, nine years ago. We landed in Hamburg May 26, and stayed there four days. We found several good flower stores on the main business streets, all nicely kept and clean. They contain no counters. The displays are beautiful and artistic. I bought a kentia here for 22 marks, 50 pf., which is $5.50, and one could have bought the same palm in New York, Chicago or anywhere else in the United States for $3.50. I bought a gloxinia for 3 marks, 75 cents, 6-inch pot. Roses sold for $1.20 to $2 a dozen. These roses were mostly out-of-door grown, however, of good quality, such as Paul Neyron, Capt. Christie, Malmaison, Gloire de Dijon, Killarney and White Killarney, Testout, etc. Carnations, grown specially for summer trade and with long, stiff stems, perfect in flower were $1.50 a dozen. Cattleyas brought 3 marks or 75 cents each. Garden flowers, such as dahlias, asters and centureas are cheaper than in the United States.

I found the same prices in Berlin, Mannheim, Darmstadt, Heidelberg. I passed through these places in August (the latter part), and found chrysanthemums in every store, white, pink and yellow, selling readily for 12 marks or $3 a dozen. Among the potted plants I bought are hydrangeas for 4 marks or $1, with three or four 6-inch blossoms. We sell them for the same price. Begonias were purchased for 1 mark to 2 marks each. I also visited O. Beyrodt, Marienfelds, near Berlin, the orchid grower, and he showed me 40,000 of the finest orchids I ever saw, and of which he may well be proud. They are sold all over Europe at a good steady price—not one day 25 cents each and a week after 50 or 75 cents each.

In Switzerland I visited Zurich, which has some elegant florists' stores, just as nice as in Paris. Geneva has some fine flower shops and a fine flower and vegetable market twice a week right in the principal street of the city. Wreaths and potted plants of all descriptions can be bought at very reasonable prices. I also visited Lausanne and passed the Bruner establishment, which is nicely kept and is a great attraction.

Visiting Italy, we went to Milan and saw the beautiful cemetery which one must see oneself to appreciate. It is one of the finest in the world. The flowers displayed were mostly of the garden variety, it being out of the season for stock grown under glass. From Milan we went to Florence, the fine art city of the world, and found the flower trade much the same as in Milan. However, they have one immense park here and their tropical plants show up in fine condition. From Florence we went to Rome. Rome has the most magnificent homes and gardens. Palms stand up among the houses, 40 to 50 feet high. Other tropical plants are all well kept also. The flower stores had very little to present, being out of the season. Garden flowers showed up well. Cut roses and carnations were poor. They showed nice cattleyas. The florists use very few boxes to deliver their goods. One can see a young man deliver a basket of flowers or a wreath, carrying it in his hand, with no paper to cover it. From Rome we went to Genoa and visited the beautiful cemetery. Genoa like Rome has beautiful gardens, well kept. Here I noticed the pomegranate in full bloom. It certainly is a sight. Also aloes, and cacti of rare varieties and lemons in flower and fruit. Fig trees are to be found 20 feet high, wild and full of fruit.

Later we went to Paris. Here are some fine flower stores and the florists get good prices. They have a most elaborate display of flowers, cattleyas, roses, carnations and especially fine sweet peas, lilies, giganteums and Japanese. Their flower, vegetable and fruit market is wonderful. The parks are better than ever in bedding, but not as good as Chicago shows in Lincoln or the south side parks. The roses and begonias do better in Paris out of doors. I noticed all over Europe that the hotels use cut flowers lavishly and any amount of palms and bay trees to beautify their places.

From Paris we went to Basel, Switzerland, and it happened that there was a turnfest lasting four days, 1,500 taking part from all over the world. Pittsburg, Pa., had a team among them. They showed up fine and when Old Glory passed with these proud young men behind it, it made me feel like throwing up my hat and shouting. I had spent three years in Basel when I was a young man and found some of the old florists still there. They are right up-to-date in business and made extra fine displays for the fest and thousands of dollars rolled into their pockets for the decoration of the city. It was one mass of flowers and garlands over the whole town. You find florists everywhere here with from 1,000 feet of glass to 200,000 feet. The 200,000 feet class are rare; mostly 30,000 to 50,000 feet. They have long hours, from 6 o'clock in the morning until dark. The wages run for florists from $25 to $40 a month. Persons in especially responsible positions are paid from $75 to $100 a month. There are no such firms as the Poehlmann Bros. Co., the Reinbergs, Bassett & Washburn, Wiator Bros., etc. J. J. HESS.

NEWARK, N. J.—Officers of the New Jersey Floricultural Society were elected at the annual meeting, December 13, as follows: Frank Drews, president; Geo. B. Wilson, vice-president; John Dervan, secretary; Fritz Berglund, treasurer.

Lilies For Easter.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

I have a batch of Formosa lilies buried outside. The pots are well filled with roots and some are sprouted two or three inches above ground. What is the best way to handle them to be in for Easter?

Iowa

J. A.

This class of liliun is rather difficult to have in bloom for Easter and requires a greater amount of attention and care than Harrisii or giganteum.
As soon as the stems are two inches in length they should be uncovered to prevent blanching and brought into a house with a temperature of 50° to 52°. They should remain at this temperature until the leaves begin to spread and develop. Great care is required at this stage in watering as the bulbs rot very readily if overwatered.
After a week or ten days begin gradually to raise the temperature until in the course of two weeks it reaches 60°. After that it is a matter of every day carefully inspecting the stage and condition of growth and gauging the temperature to suit. Above all keep them clean of greenflies.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

A LIVELY MARKET.

Trade at this writing is good and the Christmas business promises to be very satisfactory. Friday and Saturday, December 20-21, were both good shipping days but Sunday was the best day of all. The stores were open all day and a part of the evening and large quantities of stock were shipped out to all parts of the country. The supply of stock in general on the local market was quite large with the exception of carnations and even these were more plentiful than was at first expected. American Beauties are having a good call and are bringing good prices. Richmond are good property and roses in general are selling well. White roses are having a good call but Killarney in most cases is decidedly off color. Some magnificent Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Prince De Bulgarie are arriving and sell at fancy prices. Gardenias are short in supply and orchids are none too plentiful. The supply houses have been very busy and report an exceptionally brisk demand for ruscus, statice and immortelles. The plant men are all sold out as far as blooming stock is concerned and in nearly all cases are well pleased with the Christmas trade. The demand for boxwood has been very heavy and the same can be said of holly and mistletoe. Wild smilax moved freely and winter berries are seen displayed in nearly every window of the large loop department stores. Chrysanthemums are in good supply and sweet peas are also seen in quantity. Lilies are somewhat scarce but Paper White narcissi are quite plentiful. Tulips have made their appearance. Trade was very good Tuesday morning and the wholesalers nearly all report a fine Christmas trade.

NOTES.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has had a very successful year in all branches of its business. The plant department at Morton Grove is entirely sold out of Christmas blooming stock and the supply and cut flower departments at the store are winding up a very good season.

H. Van Gelder says that when Percy Jones started in the supply business he set a mark for sales that was considered quite large but the books now show that he did three times as much business in this department as he expected to.

Frank Oechslein had a big demand for blooming plants and was completely sold out in this line several days before Christmas.

F. J. Simon, with the A. L. Randall Co., is rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl. "Finest Christmas present ever," he says.

TO EVERYBODY IN THE TRADE:

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

For New Year's prices on all stock in season, see our advertisement in the Christmas Number of the American Florist, issue of December 14, page 1219.

A. L. VAUGHAN & CO.
161 N. Wabash Ave.

The price list referred to above is O. K. with the exception of American Beauties which should read $3.00 to $8.00 per dozen. All other roses range in price from $3.00 to $15.00 per 100 according to quality. Valley $3.00 to $4.00 per 100. Carnations, $4.00 to $8.00 per 100.

Local retail florists experienced a holly famine Monday and Tuesday. Some of the largest buyers, who often depend on the South Water street market to help them to some "below-cost" bargains, this season, for the second time, found nothing doing on the "street" and were losers of retail business more than five times the extra amount they would have paid had they made early contracts through the wholesale seedsmen.

N. J. Wietor says that the Christmas business promises to be one of the best ever at Wietor Bros.' store and that the sales on Sunday, December 22, were the largest in the history of the firm. This firm had a very large cut of roses and filled every one of their orders in full.

Kennicott Bros. Co. did a land office business in boxwood for the Christmas trade and disposed of several hundred boxes in short order. E. E. Pieser is authority that there will be no further advance in the price of ferns for he intends to keep the price down.

Peter Reinberg shipped his first Christmas orders on December 19, when a large quantity of roses left for distant Canadian towns. The holiday trade at this store is very brisk and Tim Matchen has no complaint whatever to make.

J. F. Kidwell said the Chicago Flower Growers' Association disposed of all of its stock for the Christmas trade and could easily have sold much more in certain lines. Sweet peas of fine quality are now arriving in quantity at this store.

Zech & Mann are having their share of the holiday trade and are busy as bees filling orders. Matt. Mann, as usual, was on duty at the store during the holidays.

"Hoerber Bros. are well satisfied with their Christmas business," is the report received from F. C. Hoerber at the store on December 24.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. had a very busy week and did a very satisfying Christmas business. They had a large supply of all kinds of seasonable flowers and greens and took good care of their many customers.

John Poehlmann, Jr., a student at the Culver Military Academy, Culver, Ind., is home for the holidays. John says that the Burpee boys, David and William, will graduate from that institution this year.

Bassett & Washburn are doing a big holiday business and the stock that they are supplying their customers is of the first quality. American Beauty roses are now leaders at this store.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is cutting from a fine crop of American Beauty roses. O. Johnson, the city salesman, points with pride to the large, magnificent buds.

John Kruchten could easily have disposed of more gardenias to his Christmas trade if they had been obtainable for the demand was very heavy.

The J. B. Deamud Co. disposed of two carloads of wild smilax during the holiday rush in addition to a large supply of boxwood.

Frank Johnson says that the A. L. Randall Co. had a very heavy demand for Christmas goods, especially ruscus and immortelles.

Chas. W. McKellar was so busy this week that he did not even have time to give a report on his Christmas business.

Phil Schupp says that J. A. Budlong's Christmas trade will be fully as large as he expected.

Erne & Klingel are very enthusiastic over their Christmas business which was very satisfactory.

Vaughan's Seed Store has been moving gladiolus bulbs by carloads this week.

MARKET FAIR.

Last week's market was rather fair. The receipts were somewhat limited and with a fairly good call the market was kept cleaned up in most all lines. The general trend and sentiment, however, was one of waiting and preparation rather than one of aggressiveness. Roses are coming in nicely and in good shape and every one of these is finding a good demand. The supply of American Beauties and Richmond for the Christmas business promises to be fairly large. Killarney, when relative daily numbers are considered, seems likely to be very close behind. The supply of white is good and, as a whole, of a very excellent quality. The poinsettias that have been offered up to this time were all of a very high quality. The blooms were large, foliage good and stems erect. If the holiday blooms are in the same condition we will, indeed, have excellent blooms in this flower. Double violets are also going to be a prominent factor. Arrangements have been made for an abnormally large supply. Judging from the orders on file at the time of this writing and the way they continue to come in the supply should be disposed of by the wholesalers in a big hurry. The cut of single violets locally will be more or less limited. Lily of the valley is in good supply for the holidays. All the regular growers of this flower have a heavy cut and some who grow the same only for the holidays have their crops in just at the right time. The supply of orchids is good. Paper White nareissi and Romans are coming in strong and judging from reports there will hardly be a shortage in this line. A large supply of double stevia finds a ready market. The other does not sell nearly as well.

NOTES.

J. A. Peterson cleaned up handsomely on his eight houses of Glory of Cincinnati begonias. Every single one of the plants was in just the proper condition for the date. For the past fortnight his force has been doing practically nothing but packing and shipping these and cyclamen, poinsettias and farleyense.

P. J. Olinger and Peter Weiland are each of them sending excellent valley into the market from their Newcastle, Ind., greenhouses.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market with Mexican ivy this season.

NATIVE HOLLY SCARCE.

The windows of all the florists in the city are radiant with the red and green of the season. Many have used the red immortelle wreaths with the southern smilax and ferns as a background, but they say that the sale of immortelle wreaths is rather slow this season. The holly from our own native woods is a little scarce. In former seasons the holly was cut so severely that but little is left and that must come from longer distances. The cedar tree, however seems to be inexhaustible. It grows plentifully right at the doors of our city and all one has to do, if economically inclined, is to drive a few miles out and cut one to suit. There is more general decorations than usual in this city and a more general use of potted plants for interior decorations. Poinsettias seem to be a general favorite this season and every floral store is full of the growing pans.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. have a stock that is unsurpassed and their store presents a most attractive appearance. They have lilies, roses of the very best kinds, carnations, hyacinths, violets, narcissi and even some chrysanthemums still of a very good quality. The panned poinsettias are great favorites and they have a fine supply. In pot plants they are well prepared.

Thomas Joy, of the Joy Floral Co., says that his roses are exceptional and that in the past ten days he has cut 25,000 or 30,000 of the very best quality. This firm has plenty of roses, especially American Beauties. They also have a full line of other stocks.

Haury & Sons are well prepared for the holiday trade and have already brought in a beautiful lot of potted plants and are ready to do a rushing business. Their stock is similar to that of the other florists and of a most excellent quality.

McIntyre Bros. have decorated their attractive store in a very artistic manner. One of the large front windows has the "Merry Christmas" in immortelles and the other has "Happy New Year," also in immortelles.

HOLIDAY FLOWERS SCARCE.

Like the general of some big army on the eve of battle, laying in ammunition, food and medical supplies, keeping the wires hot ordering reinforcements for this or that point—this is the kind of life the average florist is leading just now. Supplies of all kinds have been ordered in advance and received, much work has been made up in readiness for the expected Christmas rush, telegrams are sent east, south and west for more supplies, which perhaps cannot be purchased at home, then again word is received from some point of inability to fill certain orders on time, then all the worry and hurry to fill from another source or get a substitute. There must be something with which to do business, and like a general of an army who is in the battle to win, so also must the successful florist plan, hustle, worry and work to make all he can for this season and he who can look farthest ahead, who knows where he can buy or sell, and who works hardest and is most alive to every chance to win is the one who comes out ahead. Flowers for Christmas and New Year's seem to be rather scarce here. C. F. B.

GOOD TRADE EXPECTED.

The Christmas rush is on and the prospects for a good trade were never better. In all probability there will be plenty of stock, although a scarcity in red carnations and red roses is expected. Bulbous stock will be plentiful. The supply of greens will be somewhat limited.

NOTES.

Ostertag Bros. had the Campbell reception at the St. Louis club. There were 60 cases of smilax, 2,000 pink Killarneys, orchids and lilies of the valley in profusion. This was one of the biggest receptions ever given.

August Kunz, 8533 North Broadway, is doing a large cemetery trade. He has three large greenhouses with bedding stock and a variety of blooming plants.

George Hartman, Kirkwood, is bringing a fine supply of violets, sweet peas and carnations to market.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. reports heavy outside shipments and a very large home trade.

Jules Bourdet is bringing in some extra fine poinsettias and a full line of blooming plants.

Geo. H. Angermueller is very busy. His trade in supplies has been immense.

All the west end stores are beautifully decorated for the Christmas rush.

Kalisch Bros. have a very choice display of azaleas and poinsettias.

George Waldbart had the home decorations at the Campbell dinner.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. has a good stock in everything.

H. G. Berning, as usual, reports good trade.

C. A. Kuehn says business is good.

Florists and Gardeners' Club

OF HOLYOKE AND NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The first annual meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club of Holyoke and Northampton, Mass., was held on the evening of Tuesday, December 10, at the greenhouses of Reginald T. Carey, South Hadley. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting one new member was admitted, two others being nominated for membership. The election of officers came next, E. J. Canning of Smith's College being elected president. G. H. Sinclair brought along two cypripedium plants, the flowers of which were much admired, the exhibitor receiving the club's highest award of merit.

Graves of Field's greenhouses exhibited a vase of their new carnation Gloria, which received recent recognition at Boston and will be disseminated during the coming year. An interesting talk was given by Rollins of Holyoke on the Covent Garden market. Mr. Rollins was for some years an energetic salesman in this celebrated market. This society has had a most prosperous year, numbering now some 40 members, 28 being present at the last meeting. The next meeting place will be at the Smith's College Conservatories on Tuesday evening, January 14.

And All Other Seasonable Flowers at Lowest Market Prices. 30 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO

Philadelphia Notes.

A round of the commission houses on Sunday found full forces everywhere busy with shipping orders, the out of town demand being exceptionally good. At the Leo Niessen Co.'s market immense quantities of stock was coming and going all day long. Mr. Niessen pointed with pride to their stock of valley, which he said was the best they had ever had for a holiday business. It was certainly fine. American Beauties were also a feature. The prospects here were that last season's record would be broken.

The Robert Craig Co. has had a phenomenal plant business, selling entirely out of their blooming stock, which included poinsettias, cyclamens and begonias. A feature was their combination baskets and boxes of foliage plants which found great favor with their customers.

Godfrey Aschmann made a clean sweep of his Christmas specials, and at once started to spread out stock which had been waiting for the room. Within a week the houses will be as full as ever.

Berger Bros. had a great business in Christmas greens. With this out of the way, they are handling splendid Richmond and Killarney roses. Carnations are also a feature.

Ed. Reid was strong on double violets and sold a large quantity of the Hudson river stock. Killarney roses were also a specialty.

M. Rice & Co. have moved an immense stock of Christmas baskets and all other kinds of supplies, particularly the red goods. K.

MARKET CONDITIONS GOOD.

Market conditions are good with a good call for all kinds of flowers and plants. A good Christmas trade is expected. Poinsettias are especial favorites, especially those in pans. Carnations seem to be still scarce. Whether Tuesday will bring a big shipment to the markets and lower prices remains to be seen. The day before Christmas has generally been the Waterloo for some of those who hold out for big prices. The quality in general of the carnations is all that could be desired.

pect to arrive in Boston and have the flowers that they have picked up along the way delivered by 6:30 each morning. This will be a boon for those who wish to have their produce arrive early at the wholesalers and the markets. They will stop at various points along the way convenient for the shipping of flowers. They will have their regular freight stations in the various towns along the way.

There is a probability of a Co-operative Market being started by the market gardeners of this city to handle their own produce and sell direct to the public. Lettuce, for which they are quoted as getting one cent a head has been retailed at ten cents. A story of one man plowing under $500 worth of cabbage last fall because of bad market conditions, has impelled them to seek relief. The bugaboo of high prices for house grown vegetables will be smashed and fresh vegetables may come within the reach of us all and come by mail fresh from the greenhouse.

In orchids and lily of the valley, both in quantity and quality, Welch Bros. seem to hold the lead. Saturday their forces were all lined up for the Christmas rush which had begun.

In roses we noted some very fine Killarneys at Manton's stall, grown by the Exeter Rose Co., Exeter, N. H. The length of stem and head were fine.

The finest carnations we have seen are those from John Barr of South Natick.

Thomas Galvin had a very attractive window of poinsettias.

Weather crisp.

ROSES GOOD AND CHEAP.

The past week has been one of preparation. Everything possible was done to have things ready for the rush. Shipments of flowers from the growers have been light, and yet there were quantities of roses, particularly pink, to be had at the buyer's figures. The quality of the rose stock for Christmas delivery is fine in all grades and prices favor the buyer. At this writing (December 22), the commission houses report working the entire force all day on out of town orders and that prospects for a full holiday business are very good. American Beauties are in fair supply for the holiday demand at $1 a bud for the specials. Richmonds are seen in rather larger quantity than usual and of very fine quality. A grower from near Boston canvassed this city with four-foot stemmed Richmonds at a price of 75 cents which has been considered by the retailers a rather stiff figure. All the fancies, particularly Sunburst, Hillingdon and Taft, are in good demand. Carnations are scarce and prices hold firm, good red bringing $16. Gardenias are scarcer or else the demand has forced the prices up, 50 cents being asked for good stock. There is a fair supply of cattleyas with no great advance in price. A splendid supply of valley is offered, the best in quality seen this season, with little if any advance in price. Japanese lilies have been added to the market's assortment and find a good sale. Violets have not been overly plentiful, but to judge from the crops of the past ten days, the plants must be full of flowers and large shipments may be looked for. The sale of Christmas greens, trees, etc., was very large and the dealers made good profits.

NOTES.

Edward Towill, Roslyn, who raised the red rose Milady, has several promising new ones, one a pink and another a large white, more like an American Beauty, except for color, than any other variety. K.

BUSINESS VERY DULL.

Business was very dull in the wholesale district during the past week. The supply of stock was light, but in proportion the demand was lighter. During the middle of the week the weather was wet and disagreeable, which added to the gloom. On Saturday, December 21, there was necessarily more business in cut flowers, but it was not exceptionally good. There is very little change in prices. There has been some talk of a scarcity in carnations. We believe that the apparent scarcity of the past week was caused by stock being held back. We have no doubt that the market will be well supplied with carnations, as well as every other cut stock by December 24. Roses are likely to be plentiful. We hear that some wholesale orders have been booked for Christmas at $12.00 a dozen for specials, but up to December 21 the market price did not exceed $7.50 a dozen. There is likely to be an abundance of the tea roses. Cut poinsettias are arriving in considerable quantities, but as yet the demand for them seems light. There is an abundance of Paper White narcissus, and a few jonquils on the market. On December 21 some very fair lots of chrysanthemums came into the market. Cut bouvardia is just now quite a feature in some of the stores. The great supply of fine plants in the retail stores makes the Christmas outlook for cut flowers somewhat problematical. Along the lines of educating the people in the use of flowers it may be stated for a fact that most of them already know enough to buy a good plant when they feel that they are being charged an unreasonably high price for cut flowers, but we do not expect to see any excessive prices this Christmas.

NOTES.

A great Christmas tree, illuminated at night by many electric lights, will stand in Madison Square for a week, the lights to be turned on on Christmas Eve. It will have no presents on it, but is intended as an exemplar of the Christmas spirit. The plan originated with Mrs. J. B. Herreshoff of this city. Many of the older countries on the Continent have special national festivities, customs that have been in existence for hundreds of years, but America has none, and Mrs. Herreshoff and those who are helping her hope that the public Christmas tree may become a national feature, to be found in every town and village, a place where all may gather, rich or poor, on Christmas Eve, listen to the Christmas music, and feel that it is their tree, their Christmas, and that the spirit of peace and good-will encircles them, no matter how friendless they may be. At this writing, the tree is on the ground and a force of men are engaged in setting it up. It is a spruce, over 50 feet high and 14 inches in diameter at the base of the trunk.

A real estate transaction of interest to local florists has just been announced. The southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, owned by the estate of the late Thomas Byrnes, once inspector of police, has been taken on a twenty-one year lease with three renewal privileges, by Thomas S. Galvin, Inc., of Boston. The property was leased from the estate less than a year ago by Klein & Jackson. It is said that as soon as the lease on the old building expires, Klein & Jackson will tear it down and erect a six-story building from plans already prepared. The new building, it is understood, has been designed with elaborate detail as an attractive floral emporium. It is further stated that Thos.

A. Galvin, Inc., will pay a rental of nearly $40,000 per year.

Woodrow & Markatos, whose chief business is in plants, have been very busy during the past week, both receiving stock from various greenhouses and filling orders. Their stock of ericas, azaleas, poinsettias, dracenas and many other foliage plants, is excellent and some fine combination baskets are seen in their store.

On upper Broadway there are yet a few stores that were founded by men of the "old days." Of these the most notable is that of David Clarke's sons. Having large space and a large trade, their holiday stock is always immense and of fine quality. This year they seem to have surpassed their previous efforts.

Along Third avenue and vicinity there are a number of retail stores that if not as pretentious as some others in the city, are conducted by men whose long experience has well fitted them for the business. Noteworthy among these is the firm of M. Frank & Sons.

J. H. Small & Sons have a great stock of good plants. A feature at this store is its very beautiful boxwood wreaths, decorated with red winter berries and red ribbon. A unique feature for Christmas is the show windows filled with flowering quince.

Kleitches Brothers have opened a retail store at 6 East Twenty-third street, opposite Madison Square. John Kleitches of this firm for several years conducted a store in the Bartholdi Hotel, Broadway and Twenty-third street.

Max Schling, whose store is next door to the Plaza Hotel, had a great sheaf of plant orders in by December 21, and a large force was busy preparing for the rush. Here, too, many fine combinations were seen.

At Alex. McConnell's there was a splendid exhibit of fine plants. A notable feature of this store is the attention given to fine foliage effects. Tall palms grace available spaces and columns are garlanded with ivies.

At Geo. M. Stumpp's there is a great stock of fine plants with many fine combinations of ericas, camellias, poinsettias, etc. Fine combination baskets and hampers are Christmas specialties at this store.

At both the Madison avenue and Seventy-second street stores of Chas. A. Dards there was seen a great supply of fine plant stock with beautiful and tasteful window and other decorations.

The Grammarcy Florists, Third avenue and Twenty-first street, have now a branch on upper Broadway.

Several of the wholesale dealers of Twentieth-eighth street have put in stocks of plants.

E. Straub & Co. have recently opened a good retail store at 241 Third avenue.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. has a good stock of primroses.

J. K. Allen has a fine stock of poinsettias in pans.

FROM THE BRITISH PRESS.

Propagation of Resinous Plants.—In the course of one of his recent lectures on plant propagation Professor Bayley Balfour made special reference to the propagation by cuttings of resinous plants and plants with thick juices. Examples given were mostly drawn from the gymnosperms. Many of them, it was pointed out, do not callus freely—pine trees, for example, do not form stool shoots—because the healing by callus is replaced by healing by resin, and this may be cited as an argument against the suggestion that the retrogression of the gymnospermous type in the history of the world's plant covering is a consequence of the want of a protective callus. The two critical points in striking cuttings of such resinous plants are—to prevent the drain upon the plant resources through excessive outflow of resin when the cutting is made—which may be achieved by plunging in boiling water—and to provide easy exit for new roots by scraping off the protecting resin skin. Callused and rooted cuttings of pines were exhibited, special attention being directed to them because the striking of pines by cuttings is regarded by many as impossible. The cuttings were struck by Mr. Laurence Stewart, plant propagator of the Botanic Garden.

The Original China Aster.—Until a few years ago the type of the various cultivated forms of the China Aster (Callistephus hortensis) was practically unknown in our gardens, for although it had been grown many years ago, the double-flowered varieties had quite supplanted it. Upon its reintroduction it quickly found favor with horticulturists, for its elegant habit and large heads of flowers, composed of a pretty mauve ray and yellow disc florets, made a very pleasing combination. Moreover, it was found to offer excellent possibilities for landscape effect when sown with a generous hand in the wild garden, and many extensive areas have been seen covered with it in autumn at Kew and in other gardens within recent years. When first reintroduced it came quite true from seeds, but a few years' cultivation appears to have exerted some strange influence upon it, which makes the color of the flowers vary considerably, and mauve, white, purple, pink and red forms may be obtained from a packet of seeds. A large mass near the Isleworth Gate at Kew may be seen in full flower at the present time, many shades of color being represented. The effect is one which might well be copied by people who are fond of touches of color in woodland scenery at this time of the year.

Aconitum Wilsoni.—There appear to be two forms of Aconitum Wilsoni in commerce at present, and a discussion of the subject with several of the hardy plantmen confirm my own impression of the position. Gibson and Co., of Bedale, have introduced a pale-blue monkshood under the name of Aconitum ceruleum, this being a most useful variety, because of its late-blooming habit, as flowers of its shade and character are scarce in late autumn. This is understood to be from A. Wilsoni, although it has not the character of the plant as introduced by Wilson. Gibson's monkshood, however, corresponds in everything almost but color with another Aconitum from the same district as Wilson's one, but introduced by another firm, and which has larger individual blooms of a different form and shade. Both of the plants sold as A. Wilsoni are valuable, but, on the whole, I prefer the later one to Mr. Wilson's introduction. Is it not, however, advisable that the two should be compared by the Kew authorities, and, if necessary, a different name applied to each?

Horticultural Congress at Ghent.—Intending visitors to the Ghent Quinquennial Flower Show in May next, may like to know that in conjunction therewith there will be held an International Horticultural Congress, to which foreign horticulturists are cordially invited. The fee payable to enter one's name as a member is five francs. The programme of subjects to be discussed has been drawn up and circulated, and in connection with the congress, besides the practical work, there will be the usual round of festive gatherings. Forms of membership and all particulars can be obtained of the secretary, M. Ed. Rodigas, 79 Avenue Chazal, Brussels.

Tritoma Lemon Queen.—This Torch Lily has already been in bloom for over a fortnight, and is quite effective in the mixed border. Originally planted when quite a small piece, it has in the course of a few years developed into a handsome specimen. The foliage is erect, differing in this respect from that of many of the tritomas, the glaucous color making a perfect foil to the handsome spikes. The situation on which it is grown is fully exposed to the sun, and the soil is none too deep; nevertheless, the plant increases in size year by year, and evidently relishes its position.

The blue Nemesias.—In spite of the wintry August and, so far, cold September, I never had any ground plants give so much pleasure as these. They are a sea of delicate color in the rose and other beds. There is, too, a pretty variety of color, some of the flowers being darker in the blue. We never before had such precious autumnal blue flowers, the forget-me-nots and other fine blues being mainly of the spring. This is by far the most precious annual we have had for many years.

Why Gardening is Popular.—Opening the Carlisle Flower Show recently, the speaker said he thought the growth of the popularity of gardening was due to the fact that we were all richer now than we were, so far as the chancellor of the exchequer would allow us to be. "Gather rosebuds while you may," because who knew but that they might have taxes placed upon gardens as soon as it was discovered by those in authority what pleasure they gave.

WEST LIBERTY, IA.—The forty-third annual meeting of the Southeastern Iowa Horticultural Society was held here December 3-5.

FARMINGTON, MICH.—Kroeschell Bros. Co. of Chicago will furnish the heating system for the Farmington Greenhouse Co.'s new range consisting of 3 houses 20x100 feet.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The Minnesota State Horticultural Society's forty-sixth annual meeting, held here December 3-6, was one of the best in the history of the society.

HAMILTON, MONT.—G. A. Sellenthin, for eight years head gardener at the L. F. Easton Conservatories, at La Crosse, Wis., has accepted a similar position with Mrs. Marcus Daly of this place.

OUR PASTIMES.

The Hop Toad.

The department of agriculture has been studying the toad, and has issued a bulletin stating that it is in all respects harmless, while as a destroyer of insects it saves the country millions every year.

The hop-toad is no beauty,
He can not sing a note,
But yet when he's on duty
All night adown his throat
Bad bugs go in procession,
He eats them by the peck;
Oh, youth! 'Tis grave transgression
To hit him in the neck.
His breath is nothing baneful,
His touch promotes no wart;
Away with legends painful!
The toad's another sort.
He wanders in the shrubbery,
To catch the errant worm;
To scorn him is flubdubbery;
So scientists affirm.
He wouldn't bite your finger,
He has no way to sting;
Long may he live and linger,
This kindly, useful thing.
Insecticide primeval,
He guards the growing crop,
Yet gossip says he's evil;
'Tis time the scandal stop.

The Onus of Office Holding.

Judge Leander Stilwell of Erie, recently appointed first assistant commissioner of pensions in Washington, writes to a friend in Chanute:

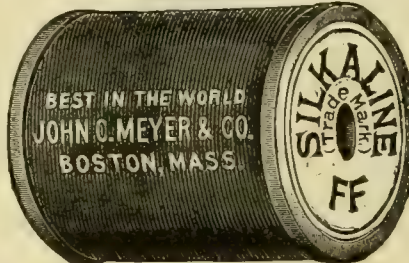

"The boys all tell me that I shall have to buy a dress suit; that the same is absolutely on a raggle in order to obtain the ongray to any important function here in Washington; that should I appear at a presidential or other reception clad in my present style my appearance would create as much consternation as if I had stalked in with nothing on but a nightie. So far, however, I have successfully stood out, and a dress suit is not included in the list of my possessions. You have been in and around Toneka considerably in recent years, and I assume that you have seen a dress suit, but I never did until I came to Washington last November. To my mind the thing makes the ordinary fellow look like a cross between a pouter pigeon and a bullfrog. It may be that I shall have to hire one sometime in order to pass the pearly gates of some of the powers that be, but I know when I put the toggery on I shall feel like seventeen different kinds of a fool, with Shiloh and Lincoln townships to hear from."

—Kansas City Star.

Easy Enough.

On his English tour the American was admiring the velvety smoothness of a certain sward, and being possessed of land and an overpowering confidence that with money all things are possible, he asked the head gardener how to produce such a lawn. And the gardener said: "It's easy enough, sir. All you need is to remove all the stones, plow up the ground, plant it with grass seed, and roll it for 300 years."—Argonaut.

BOOKS FOR FLORISTS

The following books should be in every florist's and gardener's library. A good book on any subject in which you are specially interested is worth years of experience and should be kept convenient for reference at all times.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION (C. W. Ward).—A complete treatment of all the most modern methods of cultivating this most important flower. Illustrated. $3.50.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY GROWING VIOLETS (Saltford).—This is by a practical grower who has made a success of the business. No grower of violets can afford to be without it. 25 cents.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION (Taft).—It tells the whole story about how to build and heat a greenhouse, be it large or small, and that, too, in a plain, easily understood, practical way. It has 118 illustrations. $1.50.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING (Maynard).—The development of landscape art within the past few years compels the wide awake florist to keep posted on this branch of the business. The many suggestions of this book will be found helpful every business day. It contains 338 pages, 165 illustrations. $1.50.

WINDOW GARDENING.—(Dorner.) An excellent treatise on this interesting subject telling in plain language the best methods of cultivating plants in rooms and windows. The author is a well known and practical grower. Well bound in green cloth, 153 pages and 43 illustrations, $1.25.

THE VEGETABLE GARDEN (Vilmorin-Andrieux).—The best and most complete book on vegetables ever published. There are 782 pages and hundreds of illustrations in this English edition, edited by Wm. Robinson, the noted English horticultural writer. $6.00.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

ONION SETS quiet.

CORN drying weather continues good.

THE Burpee, Livingston and Will catalogues are the first of the 1913 editions to reach us.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co.'s Christmas souvenir this year is an attractive silvery buttonhole bouquet holder.

THE imports into British Honduras from the United States in 1911 include $684 worth of plants and bulbs.

MICHIGAN bean growers complain of general moisture in the crop, making it hard to put same in shipping condition.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade December 24, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.

THE new parcels post will go into effect January 1 and the compilers of catalogues should investigate its provisions as printed elsewhere in this issue.

At Chicago "greens" all closed out very well except bulk lycopodium, which continued in oversupply, though wreathing sold fairly well at only fair prices. Boxwood was scarce at the close and sold higher.

THE United States imported lily bulbs to the value of $15,199 and $2,120 worth of cut flowers from Bermuda in 1911. The United Kingdom's imports of bulbs for the same period from this island amounted to $2,506.

It is sincerely to be hoped that all members of the American Seed Trade Association, all of whom have profited in many ways by the concerted action brought through this national organization, will in all their forthcoming catalogues and on their stationery use and continue to use the well established non-warranty disclaimer, the continued uniform use of which will legally protect the whole trade against unfair claims and unreasonable and unjust lawsuits.

Holmes' New Store.

The Holmes Seed Co. of Harrisburg, Pa., announces its intention of moving into the new quarters, mention of which was made in a recent issue of this paper, on or about January 1, 1913. The new place is known as the Holmes Building and the entire four floors will be occupied by the one firm. The structure is in every way modern and will give the firm much more room than it has had heretofore. It is located at 119 South Second street and is convenient to electric and steam lines.

On the ground floor will be the retail flower and garden seed departments and the offices. The wholesale department will occupy the second floor and the third will be given over to the storage of seeds in bulk and in packages. More seeds will be stored on the fourth floor on which will also be found the cleaning department. The basement will be used for seed potatoes, fertilizers, insecticides, etc.

Every floor is reached by elevator and practically every other convenience of the modern seed house is to be found here. The firm makes a specialty of telephone orders and invites its patrons to use this method where more convenient.

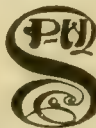

New Home of Holmes Seed Co.

Colorado Seed and Nursery Co.

The Colorado Seed & Nursery Co., with C. R. Root as the head, is Denver's latest addition to the trade. Mr. Root was for twenty-one years associated with the Barteldes Seed Co., for fourteen as manager of the Denver branch. He is one of the best and most favorably known seed men in his part of the country. He was chairman of the board of governors of the International Dry Farming Congress, and has always taken a leading part in agriculture and similar matters. He was largely instrumental in establishing the flax industry in his state. An up-to-date store with the most modern equipment has been opened at 1515 Champa street.

"Value for Value."

It should be understood that in common with other honest seedsmen, we assume responsibility only for the amount paid for the seed. If not thoroughly satisfied your money will be returned. We are not, however, in the insurance business, as neither we ourselves, our employes, nor even our customers, are infallible. Such constant care is exercised, however, that there is but little danger of a mistake being made. "Value for value is the rule that must finally obtain in all business transactions."

The last sentence of the preceding paragraph is quoted from the concluding paragraph of an article entitled "How I Made Advertising Pay," written fifteen years ago.—From Burpee's Annual for 1913.

New Lawn Mower.

L. O. Ekrem, 1628 N. Humboldt St., Chicago, has invented a mower. This invention relates to mowers for mowing lawns, and for other like purposes, and refers more particularly to the combination of a mower having means whereby it can be manually operated, with means for supporting the mower upon the person of the operator, so that both hands of the operator are left free for manipulating the operating mechanism.—Scientific American.

Burpee's "Seeds That Grow"

Are supplied each season direct to many more planters than are the seeds of any other brand. BURPEE'S SEEDS are known the world over as the best it is possible to produce, and are acknowledged the American Standard of Excellence.

In thirty-six years of successful seed selling we have introduced more Novelties that are now in general cultivation than have any three other firms. We produce Selected Stocks upon our own seed farms in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and California, while FORDHOOK FARMS are famous as the largest trial grounds in America. No government Experimental Station attempts such complete trials each season, and the information here obtained is of incalculable benefit to planters everywhere.

Each season we travel more than thirty thousand miles to personally inspect our growing crops and yet never travel a single mile to solicit an order! We ask, however, that you allow our SILENT SALESMAN to have your careful attention in the quiet of your own home.

Simply send us your address plainly written and kindly state where you saw this advertisement. Then by first mail you will receive

The Burpee-Annual for 1913

A bright new book of 180 pages, it pictures by pen and pencil all that is Best in seeds and tells the plain truth. While embellished with colored covers and plates painted from nature it is A SAFE GUIDE—entirely free from exaggeration.

Shall we send you a copy? If so write TO-DAY! A postal card will do,—and you will not be annoyed by any "follow-up" letters.

Burpee's Blue List for 1913

The most complete catalog published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye ☉ placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913 contains 148 pages with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalog we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalog, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

Burpee's Red List

Is mailed to Dealers only. To obtain this catalog it is necessary to write on business stationery or enclose a card showing that you buy seeds to sell again,—and not only in large quantities for your own planting. We always protect the Trade!

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE "Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

WATERLOO, IA.—The first greenhouse for vegetables has been erected here by Frank Shecack and Phil Mahoney. It is 30x150 feet.

THE imported cabbage worm furnishes the subject of a valuable bulletin issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. A history of its introduction in 1897 and its spread and ravages, together with its habits is contained in the bulletin. Kerosene oil and soap as well as Bordeaux mixture are among the remedies recommended.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, December 23.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce 10 cents to 12½ cents, small cases; radishes, 25 cents to 50 cents per dozen bunches; tomatoes, 17 cents to 18 cents per pound.

New York, December 21.—Cucumbers, $1.50 to $1.75 per doz. and $2.50 to $5 per box; mushrooms 60 cents to $1.80 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 6 cents to 12 cents per pound; radishes, $1 to $2 per 100 bunches; lettuce (eastern), 25 cents to 35 cents per strap. (Jersey) 40 cents to 60 cents per barrel, other 10 cents to 20 cents; mint, 50 cents per dozen bunches.

Sash Houses.

The old-fashioned hot-bed is rapidly losing ground. With all that has been said against hot beds, the fact remains that, if well managed, they certainly produce the best plants for the market gardener. So far the chief argument against hot-beds has been the excessive attention and labor required. But now comes another—scarcity of manure, for automobiles and motor trucks are so rapidly crowding the horses out of cities that in a few more years manure will be next to unobtainable, we fear. In our locality manure was not only plentiful five years ago, but could often be had delivered free of charge, as many barn owners were at a loss to know how to dispose of it. Thousands of tons were dumped into river bottoms and out-of-the-way places. This is all a thing of the past, never to come again, and with these conditions we must figure.

Where formerly we were very friendly towards the hot-bed, as it gave us a chance to compost our main manure supply besides heating the frames, we must now save all we can get of any manure for direct fertilizing. We will therefore resort to sash-houses for plant production, using our available hot-bed sash for the purpose. We will build these houses 10 feet wide, using 2x4s for rafters and manage so we can slide the sash down for ventilation any length or remove them entirely later on to harden the plants. We will use a special hotwater boiler to heat the plant house as needed.

Such an arrangement will enable us to get along without the flats advocated by some greenhouse plant men to harden their plants.

MARKETMAN.

Asparagus Rust.

Breeders and growers of asparagus are advised by the United States Department of Agriculture through Bulletin 263, Bureau of Plant Industry, to take up pedigree breeding and to use careful methods of production in order to keep rust from the plant. On the subject the bulletin says:

"Although the breeding work carried on with asparagus will eventually lead to the control of rust in commercial plantings, several years must elapse before this result will become effective. Meanwhile it is necessary to take all measures practicable to prevent the destruction of existing fields of asparagus by the rust. To this end the main factor is to keep the rust away from the fields in summer just as long as possible.

"Wild asparagus growing around the borders of the fields, along fences and ditches is one of the worst enemies of the grower. These wild plants act as infection centers and their influence can be easily traced later in the season when the cutting beds have grown up. Wild plants wherever found should be dug up and burned. New beds should be planted at only rare intervals of time and then if possible where they will be to windward of a cutting bed. Keep the seedlings out of the cutting bed, at least let none stay in at the time the bed is allowed to grow up after the cutting season. Allow no poor shoots to grow up in the cutting field. Keep down every shoot of asparagus until the middle of June and see the neighboring farmers do the same. In the fall the tops should be removed carefully from one-year-old beds that are not to be cut the next year. This will in a large measure reduce the liability of infection from this source."

Transplanting Forest Grown Evergreens.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

What is the best time to transplant balsam, pine and spruce trees? They must be shipped a long distance and taken out of our northern forest.

A. L. S.

Michigan.

This question is not easy to answer offhand. The writer has just returned from a vacation and collecting trip to the North Woods, in the northern peninsula of Michigan, and can readily understand the temptation to want to have some of the thousands of evergreens seen there. We find that transportation out of the woods is difficult, and by rail exceedingly slow afterwards if sent by freight. If the final destination is south, it would be best to dig them in the autumn; even now would do if they are not frozen down. There would then be the moderate winter months for the plants to get over the transplanting. If they are to go east, or in another cold winter climate, it is certainly too late to move them now. If again, and this is important, the same conditions cannot be given these northern born trees as to soil and especially moisture, it is waste of time and money to attempt the experiment. The writer can show anyone interested the results of a carload brought out of the North Woods over ten years ago. These are white spruce, balsam fir and white pine, with a few tamarack mixed in. The soil conditions were so very different here, that the trees almost beg one to take them back to their northern home and the rich deep moist humus in which they were born.

It would be much better to dig the trees and grow them a year in some clearing, before shipment, then have large crates on hand, pack the roots at the ends of crates with plenty of damp moss, leaving the top ends on in the middle of crate with plenty of space for air to circulate through. In this way they might be lifted at the close of hot weather, and still be set out in time to get established in their new home before winter. Spring opens so late there it would be risky sending young evergreens at that time unless they too had been once transplanted. If A. L. S. had stated the destination of trees to be shipped, one could be more specific. We have brought out the trailing arbutus, wintergreen, partridge berry, Linnaea borealis, and a lot of ferns. All these will live and grow. It is a revelation to anyone interested to visit the northern forests, and see what the prodigality of nature has scattered there, and to reproduce which, the art of man would be taxed to the limit.

Compactness was desired—the height of productiveness was required. Attractive it must be. Economical to heat and work were things the gardener insisted on. The U-Bar plan, design and construction won out because it stood the test of all the requirements. The reason—the main reason—is the U-Bar—the Bar that makes the U-Bar greenhouses the famous greenhouses they are. No other curved eave house has the U-Bar, so don't be misled by houses that look like the U-Bar. Send for catalog. It gives another view and a plan of this particular house.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Cleaning Up After Christmas.

The Christmas sales will give the plantsman an opportunity to give the houses a thorough overhauling and begin preparations for the Easter stock, and also more room for the plants that are to produce flowers during the winter. The probabilities are that the best plants have been disposed of, and the demand for the balance will slacken up considerably for the next two or three weeks. Any plants that will not be salable in the middle of the next month especially if they are not of the best quality, had better be thrown away, and not allowed to remain taking up valuable space for a month or more, only to be discarded later. The stock plants should all be selected and preparations for next season's propagation begun. The old favorite Begonia incarnata is still grown by many. The old plants never make good stock for another year, so select enough to produce all the stock wanted, and discard the balance. It will be busy times where many plants are grown, but the quicker and earlier the work is done the better will be the resultant crops. The bulb stock is now ready to be brought in and all the room should be immediately filled up with stock that can be grown into plants that will find ready sale. It sometimes takes courage to throw away plants that look as if they would bring in something, but it is far better to do this, even if a plant is thrown out that might be sold, than to carry along a lot of stock that never turns in a cent to the money drawer.

Poinsettias.

This is a Christmas plant pure and simple. It is to the midwinter holidays what the lily is to Easter and the sale of plants or flowers after the new year is very small and hardly remunerative. The plants that are left should at once be treated for stock plants. It is the custom of some growers to immediately place the pots under a bench and water them no longer. It is much better, however, to block them up closely in a warm house and gradually dry them off until the wood ripens and then store them away where they will be kept dry. When the plants are treated by the former method the green wood often dies down more than half the length, but by a slower ripening off many more and much better cuttings can be obtained. They can be laid down on their sides under a carnation bench where they will not receive any water or if the pots are needed they can be heeled-in in such a location, and here they can remain until April when they should be started for propagation, using either the old growth or starting the plants into growth and making the cuttings from the young shoots as they break from the old wood. With these it is better to make the cuttings with a heel and in a warm location they root quite easily.

Tulips and Narcissi.

The Dutch bulbs are now in condition to bring into the houses, for they should be well rooted, and will force readily, and from the first of the year on the grower should regulate the culture of these so that there will be a continuous supply. The best way to accomplish this is to have one day in the week which is bulb day, that is, on this day the succeeding lots will be brought from where they are stored and placed in the greenhouses. The demand will, of course, fluctuate to some extent, but by looking back two or three years it will be found that the call for this stock is about in the same proportion every year, and a basis on which to figure about how many pots or boxes should be brought up can be obtained. If it is found that the stock is accumulating at any time those that are not quite in bloom can be removed to a cooler house and retarded, and those that are almost in bloom, if moved into a shed where it is dark and quite cool, will last in splendid condition for a week or ten days longer. For the present it will be necessary to put the pans and pots in a shaded position in order to get the proper length of stem. Those forced early if allowed to stand in a warm house in full sunlight, will open their flowers before they have attained good height, so it is well to place them under a bench or provide a place where they can be kept rather dark for a week. In cutting the flowers endeavor to cut them from the pans or boxes that have been in the houses the longest. A thoughtless man will cut into a box that is just opening and which would be good for a week or more, when there are plenty that could be cut that will not last nearly so long. There is always a great waste in growing bulbs and everything that is possible should be done to prevent it. On bulb day when the fresh lot is put on the bench those that were brought up three or four weeks before and are in full flower will be ready to be thrown out. Any flowers that may be on these boxes, if they are well in bloom, should be cut and placed in water. They will last much longer if cut and kept cool than they will if left on the bulbs in the greenhouses.

Fuchsias.

It is a good time now to start the old stock plants of fuchsias, for there is plenty of room in the propagating bench and it is the early struck cuttings that make the fine plants for vases and boxes, and if cuttings are taken in spring they immediately produce a flower and it is difficult to get a good growth, the plant often remaining short with a stunted appearance yet bearing flowers. If the old plants have been thoroughly ripened, shake the soil off and pot in a good new loam, cut back the wood and place them in a warm house and syringe plentifully. The young growths will shortly appear and should be made into cuttings as soon as they have attained a length of an inch and a half or two inches. As soon as rooted pot in 2-inch pots and give the young stock a warm temperature. When growth commences the top can be taken off and another cutting made, and the plants shifted to 3-inch pots. Another stopping will be necessary in late winter to make nice, bushy plants that will be full of bloom in early spring. Keep them clean from mealy bug by constant spraying.

Vinca Rosea.

A plant that is often lost sight of by many for summer bedding is Vinca rosea, and it makes a most beautiful plant, being covered with flowers all through the summer until frost. The great cause of there not being much stock of these is that the seed is not sown early enough. December or early January is the time to plant the seeds of these plants to have them in fine shape for bedding out in June. Plants started early and grown in a warm house will be in flower at the time of planting and continue a mass of bloom throughout the season. The seed should be sown in flats which should be placed in a house having a temperature 65° to 70°. When the second leaf forms they should be pricked out into other flats about an inch apart and when they have five or six leaves potted in 2-inch pots, later being shifted into the 3-inch size. The soil should be of a sandy nature both in the potting and in the bed, if possible, but they will grow well outside in a heavy loam. They can be had in white, rose pink and pink with white eye, and come very true to color from seed.

Flower Girl's Basket.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

At many fashionable weddings of the present time the bride is accompanied with one or more flower girls, generally a young relative of one of the contracting parties, who carries a basket of flowers. The girl is invariably very young and the basket must, accordingly, be small. The basket which we illustrate was gilded and composed of sweet peas and fronds of Whitmanii ferns, tied with a yellow ribbon and sparkling chiffon. The ribbons were so arranged that the basket was hung from the shoulder, the bows on the shoulder being fastened by a gold safety pin. This is often necessary, the child being so young and small that to carry even the smallest basket and hold it through the ceremony would be burdensome and some neat arrangement must be made which will obviate the necessity of the child carrying it in the hand. This basket is a fitting and artistic arrangement for the purpose intended. Owing to the size of the child the basket must of necessity be of small size and the flowers used in the arrangement must consequently be of the smaller flowers of the season. A very pretty feature of the wedding ceremony sometimes carried out is to have the flower girl's basket so arranged that with flowers on the outside edge the center is filled with rose petals, and the girl walking ahead of the bride in her course to the altar and return distributes these on the floor so that the bride traverses a path of roses to and from the ceremony.

Christmas in New York Stores.

M. A. Bowe, as usual, had an excellent stock of plants, ericas being very prominent. Every feature of his store was attractive as was shown by his heavy business.

An attractive new store was opened a short time before Christmas at 2840 Broadway. It bears the name of the Cathedral Floral Co.

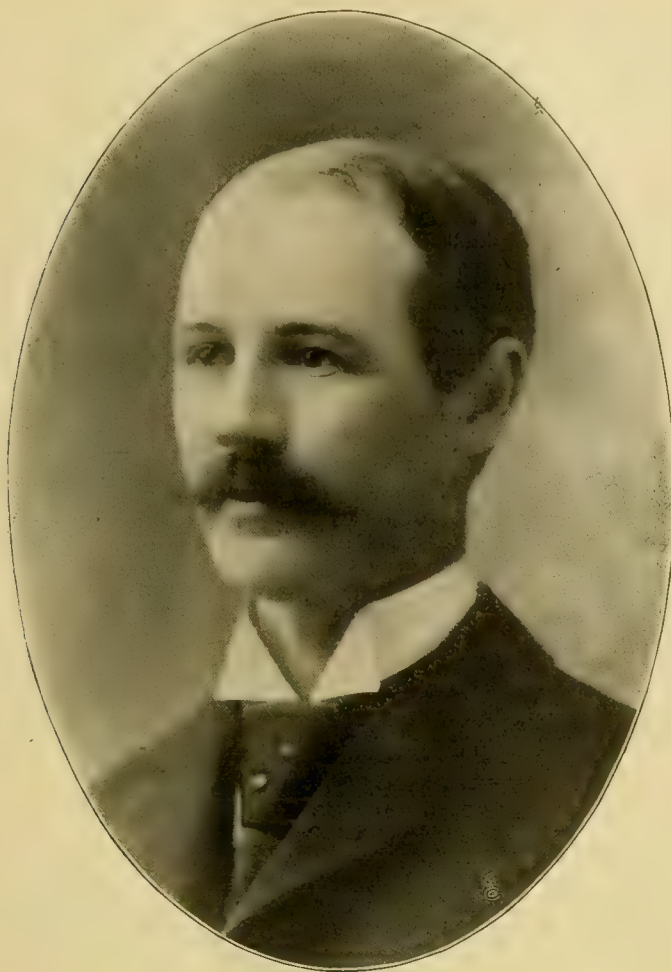

D. J. Pappas, 2751 Broadway, who has been in business for 15 years, had fine stock and did a good business.

At Hartman's Rosary the window display was exceptionally fine. The stock of plants was excellent and business was good.

The Boulevard Floral Co., 2391 Broadway, of which Peter Theopse is the moving spirit, was well stocked with plants and flowers and their big auto-delivery was kept busy.

Lappos Brothers, 2517 Broadway, have in the past established quite a reputation as retailers and their work this season was equal to their past record. They had a good stock and good business.

George Vlachos, the Astoria Florist, has a fine location directly opposite the Astor flats on Broadway. In the management of the business he is ably assisted by his wife. His store was well stocked and attractive.

One of the largest and best stock of plants seen anywhere, was at the store of John S. Nicholas, Forty-second street, near Madison avenue. As one of the pioneers in the business, Mr. Nicholas is entitled to more than passing mention. He has valuable real estate holdings in different parts of the city.

Herman Kuhn, 896 Sixth avenue, who has fine facilities for the display of stock had a particularly fine stock of ericas and a full line of all other seasonable plants. Business was good at his store for a week before Christmas and he and his staff were kept very busy.

A. Ehman, 2112 Broadway, had a very excellent stock of the best plants and reports a good trade.

Charles Brown's store, Broadway and Eighty-sixth street is always a very attractive feature of that section of the city. For this Christmas its offerings were grand and were well appreciated by the buyers.

Ralph Armstrong's new store at Madison avenue and Forty-seventh street was very attractive. Though he has but recently located there, Mr. Armstrong is fast building up a good business. He is a thoroughly experienced business man and an excellent designer and decorator.

Madison avenue is now noted for its good retail stores and among them

A. L. Bunyard's is well worthy of mention. He is a tasteful and intelligent decorator and draws a good trade.

In line with their established reputation as successful florists, the store of the Warendorfs in the Ansonia Hotel took on a more than usually attractive appearance for Christmas, and it is always attractive. Herman Warendorf is a shrewd and successful buyer and his selections always show taste and good judgment. Their Madison avenue store, "overflowed" and a nearby storeroom was secured and filled with fine plants.

Gottlieb Myer of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street was kept very busy between his main store and his concession in the Plaza Hotel, where he is constantly doing fine work. At both places Christmas business was good.

Christatos & Koster of 717 Madison avenue, in addition to their Christmas business have recently done fine work in wedding decorations. They are noted for their fine effects in wedding bouquets.

Young & Nugent, who have one store in the wholesale district of Twenty-eighth street and another on Madison avenue, had exceptionally fine stock and a very busy Christmas.

ALHAMBRA, CALIF.—This place will take part in the "tournament of roses" at Pasadena, New Year's day. Decorated automobiles will be entered.

THE ROSE.

Grafting.

By the first week of January or a week later, the grafting should be started if the best results are to be obtained. We have found that much better strikes can be had from January 1 to February 15 than after the latter date. One reason for this is that during the coldest days or the darkest days a steadier temperature can be easier maintained in the grafting case, and another reason also is that after the middle of February the sun is much stronger, and heavy shading may be required and too much air used when ventilating in order to keep the temperature right for the grafts in and out of the case.

So to take advantage of the heavy daily firing and for the reasons stated above, it would be best to get started. As we suggested in our last article in THE AMERICAN FLORIST, the manetti should be allowed to start at the roots at a temperature not exceeding 50 degrees. If by examining the roots they show the little white feeders, and by cutting off the stem of the stock an inch above the pot, there is noticed nice fresh wood and a quick flow of sap, the stocks are then in prime shape to work. The grafting case should have all the overhead light possible, but no sun should at any time strike the case. The case proper should never be shaded, that is, the glass covering the case should be clear and if any shading must be used let it be well up overhead and out of the way.

The case should be so constructed that after putting in a layer of moss an inch thick at the bottom, covered with as much screened coal ashes, and the sash filled tightly, the temperature should reach 80 degrees or 85 inside the case. The pipes should be inclosed under the case and the ashes inside soaked thoroughly and every crevice that would let any dry heat penetrate the bottom of the case should be stuffed with moss. The regular temperature of the grafting case should be 75 degrees day and night. This temperature should be kept steadily for ten or twelve days or until the graft begins to unite nicely. Then the temperature can be gradually reduced to 70 degrees. This will require a day or two and this is the minimum temperature.

After these grafts are firmly united and the scions have started a growth, one can gradually start to air them.

This will be about the fifteenth day after placing them in the case. Air them all night, using a label or a flat stick and begin by airing $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch for two or three hours and increase gradually. The sash should not be lifted more than an inch ten days after starting to air, which will give one an idea of how gradually it should be done. If the tops wilt or show the least signs of wilting, close the sash immediately, first spraying the scions with a mist-like spray. It requires about 24 days to have the grafts strong enough to stand taking out of the case. They should be carefully shaded for a few days after setting them out and sprayed frequently to prevent wilting. Keep the house closed also for a few days, and a temperature of 70 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees in the daytime.

Select good wood for the scions from flower shoots ripened wood from which a flower has been cut, or all the wood can be used if the flowers are to be sacrificed, which pays better in the long run than to use over-ripe wood or blind wood. The best wood procurable is none too good if one cares to improve their roses every year. Selection means much in any part of plant growing and whether it be seeds from some choice flowers or cuttings, or scions from a fine specimen rose, it means the same, a gradual improvement. The tools and equipment for handling the work comprises good sharp knives, flat agate ware pans for the scions after cutting. Then to shape, good raffia in 10 or 12 inch length divided into strands about $\frac{1}{4}$ inch in width, a large flower jar to place the wood in as soon as it is cut, some handy sized flats and a good roomy place to work, having everything required within easy reach.

Be sure to place each box of grafts immediately into the case as soon as it is filled and spray with a hard bulb sprinkler. The plants should be carefully and evenly watered before placing them into the case. A dry plant means a failure in the case. Graft early and select those varieties that seem to do best grafted. Richmond and the Killarneys do well grafted, or perhaps some of the new ones will. The introducers are in a better position to give this information. At the same time any free growing variety that has a tendency to throw strong canes from the roots or base of plants, like American Beauty will do finely on their own roots.

Florists' Dracenas.

Dracenas adapted for florists' use may be divided into two sections, one of which would include those of the true dracenas that are grown for decorative purposes both indoor and out, while the other section would cover those of the cordylines that are so largely grown as commercial plants, the cordylines section being much the larger of the two. Of the true dracenas one of the oldest in the trade is D. Draco, a stiff looking plant with sharp pointed dull green leaves that remind one in a measure of some of the yuccas. This species is readily propagated from seeds, and does not need high temperature to keep in good condition, and may also be used for outdoor decoration during the summer.

The next in order, and of much more importance to the florist, is Dracena fragrans and its several varieties, some green leaved, and others beautifully variegated. The original type of Dracena fragrans is still quite largely grown, and when properly cared for, is quite a satisfactory plant for decorative purposes, its broad, green leaves, graceful habit and rapid growth being points in its favor, and unless it may be where the plants have been grown too warm, and fed too much with strong fertilizers, this dracena will give good service. Two other forms of D. fragrans having green leaves, namely, D. Knerkil and D. Rothiana, are not uncommon though less widely known than the original species. Two variegated varieties of this species are also grown in quantity, both D. Massangeana and D. Lindenii being included among the decorative stock of many florists.

Dracena congesta is also a favorite with many growers, from the fact that its foliage is very enduring, and consequently it makes a good house plant. The last named species is rather more hardy than those of the fragrans group, and consequently may be grown satisfactorily in a lower temperature.

Dracena Sanderiana and D. Godseffiana are both admirable species of moderate growth, the compact habit and silvery variegation of the first making it a first class subject for table ferneries, while the dark green leaves of D. Godseffiana are so spotted with creamy yellow as to attract prompt attention. Both these species are readily rooted from cuttings, and grown in a light greenhouse; with a night temperature of 65 degrees and a moist atmosphere, they soon make useful plants.

Another species that may also be grown in quantity without any special difficulty and useful among foliage plants for basket work is Dracena gracilis, a free growing plant with narrow leaves and compact habit, its foliage being dark green with a reddish chocolate margin. This last is quite an old plant, though possibly less common than some of those already noted.

Dracena indivisa in its many varieties is one of the most useful mem-australis, is the one most widely grown, that having plain green leaves with a lighter midrib, but several of the forms with more coloring have been named, and are even more attractive than the type, among the most striking being D. indivisa Veltchii, with reddish midribs, and the variety atropurpurea, in which a purplish coloring extends for a good part of the foliage. Then there are variegated varieties also, among the most notable being D. Doucettii, the latter having foliage striped with white. All of the members of this group are hardy enough to be grown outdoors during the summer, and for the remainder of the year will get along nicely in a temperature of 50 to 55° at night.

Coming now to the cordylines of the terminalis section, we find some of the most attractive warm house foliage plants that are grown in the trade, the plant commonly known as Dracena terminalis being, the best example of the group, and handled by thousands in some establishments for the Christmas trade. Dracena terminalis is grown from cuttings secured from old canes or stems, such as are imported in quantity from the West Indies and South America each season. These canes are bedded in a mixture of moss and sand in a warm greenhouse, kept moist, and thus caused to start from the numerous

bers of this family, for this plant is so readily grown from seeds, and so easy to cultivate that everyone in the retail trade finds use for it at sometime or other, either in indoor decorations, in baskets or in porch boxes, for vases, or for the centre of a flower bed. The original form of this dracena, or as the botanists now call it, Cordylina eyes that are closely arranged along the stems. The young growths are cut off close to the cane and then rooted in sand, potted off in small pots, and shifted on at such times as are needed to keep them growing on rapidly.

Rich compost of rather open texture is best for dracena growing, good drainage being an essential, and in bright weather frequent and vigorous syringing is needed to keep the plants free from insects. Red spiders, thrips and mealy bugs are among the most likely insects to cause trouble to the Dracæna grower, and strong syringing will do much to keep these under control, and regular spraying with nicofume solution of rather weak proportions will do much to prevent any trouble of this character. Snails are also very troublesome at times, and especially during the summer, but some growers have been able to discourage these pests by spreading some common moth balls among the plants. Dracæna terminalis is sometimes troubled with a fungoid disease known as "spot," and this is a difficult thing to remove when well established, but the best preventive treatment is to give a little fire heat early in the autumn in order to keep the plants in a good growing condition, to keep the foliage dry at night, and to avoid extremes of either drouth or wetness at the root.

W. H. TAPLIN.

WITH THE GROWERS

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

One of the most profitable days I ever spent in greenhouses was at the E. G. Hill Co. establishment at Richmond, Ind., Thursday, December 19. I wrote to the firm and told them I was coming on the early train to see their wonderful carnations, of which I had heard so much, and was met at the depot by Joe Hill in his auto. In a short time we were at their mammoth plant, where we were joined by E. G. Hill himself, who seems to be delighted to show visitors over his establishment.

My attention was first called to the rose houses, which were in the pink of condition for a Christmas cut. Pink and White Killarney were especially good and a good percentage of long stems were in sight for the holidays. Sunburst and Mrs. Ward were also in good cut and of good quality. Lady Hillingdon was also grown. I asked Mr. Hill which, in his judgment, was the best of the three yellows. His answer was that it was a standoff between Sunburst and Ward and that no grower should be without at least one of these varieties. Lady Hillingdon, however, lacked substance. Antoine Rivoire is also grown but was somewhat off crop. The new rose, Mrs. Geo. Sawyer, surely looks like a winner as grown here. Its freedom of growth, handsome foliage and fine color seem to make it a desirable acquisition. A 200-foot bench of American Beauties was in full cut at the right time.

Mr. Hill is strong on seedling roses and No. 1006, a beautiful soft, flesh color shade, with salmon, stood out more conspicuous than any other variety. It is something new in color and very charming. Several new varieties from Europe are being tried out. A few are promising but many were found wanting as good winter bloomers. A few plants of double Richmond were seen, each flower having twice as many petals as the parent variety. Seventy thousand manetti stocks will be used here this year for grafting. Half of this amount was received on the day of my visit.

In this range (which is known as the west side) we saw several houses devoted to carnations for cuttings only, and a healthier lot of stock could not be found. Those grown in immense quantities are Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Wonder, Beacon, Commodore, Gloriosa, Pink Delight and Mrs. C. W. Ward. A large house of poinsettias, both cut and pot plants, reminded us that Christmas was near. While in Europe Mr. Hill picked up a fine collection of amaryllis and the few that were in bloom proved his good judgment.

The four large houses are filled with the leading varieties of carnations, making a sight I shall never forget. I have seen many good carnation ranges before but this sight without question was beyond my expectations. Such a quantity of blooms and buds one cannot realize unless one sees for one's self. White Perfection filled the farthest bed south on the east side and was indeed fine, but the 4 benches next of White Wonder were truly a

DRACÆNA MANDAIANA.

From this place I was escorted to the new range, just across the street. No doubt it was their desire that I should see the best last. The first thing here that strikes a visitor is the fine 100-foot brick smoke stack which in itself is a work of beauty. On entering the large boiler room we see two 150 h. p. boilers fed by the Swift automatic stoker. Mr. Hill is so well pleased with this stoker that he contemplates installing the same device for all his boilers next season. The steam system as installed here is the most perfect and practical that has ever come to my notice. A vacuum pump is used to suck all the air and water from the return pipes from which it is emptied into a receiver. From this receiver it is pumped into the boilers. Such a thing as cracking of pipes is never heard in this range.

This new plant contains 4 houses, each 40x400 feet, all iron frame without any post save the post to support the gutters. I doubt very much if a lighter, stronger and finer looking range can be seen in this whole country. It is both practical and ornamental. The material for this crystal palace was supplied by the Foley Manufacturing Co., Chicago, and the plans of both the houses and the steam system, I understand, were worked out by young Mr. Hill.

wonder. I remarked that Mr. Dorner did not make a mistake when he named this variety.

A number of benches of Gloriosa were seen producing stems over 2 feet long. Mr. Hill thinks well of Pink Delight and will grow more of this fine sort next year. Mrs. C. W. Ward is also thought well of here. Commodore, the finest new seedling red, is in the pink of condition. This variety is the finest color in red grown here and is a free and continuous bloomer. It is not a cropper. A small quantity of St. Nicholas is grown, the largest red on the place. The most gorgeous sight in this range to me were several benches of Beacon. Every plant was simply loaded with blooms and buds. The largest cut from this variety was in about January 1, although a very heavy cut was in for Christmas.

It would surely do Peter Fisher good to see the Pink and White Enchantress in this range. It was hard to figure which of the 3 sorts had the most buds—Beacon, Enchantress or White Enchantress. I wish every carnation grower in America could see this range. It would make us all brace up and try to come as near as possible to Mr. Hill's perfect system of flower culture.

Mr. Hill told me that all of the stock was started early. About one-half was grown on into 5-inch pots and planted the last of June. The other half was planted from the field, good, strong plants, the first week in July. I understand everything was planted by the middle of July. They paid $100 an acre for soil and hauled it 2 miles. Looks like an expensive undertaking but judging the results it surely paid. The only advantage gained from planting carnations from pots is an early crop. Many of the plants here look better from field grown than pot planted stock.

W. W. COLES.

Montgomery Rose Co., Hadley, Mass.

Along with a small party of growers on Saturday, December 14, we took a trip to the Montgomery Rose Co.'s establishment at Hadley, Mass. We were somewhat disappointed on the way up as to the nature of the country passed through. The Massachusetts Central Railroad runs through a tract that may be termed picturesque in summer, but at present it is the most wild, uninviting trip anyone could take. Rocks, woods, swamp and waste land till Amherst was reached, thence by trolley to the greenhouses. We wondered on the way up what the company's idea was in locating in such a country, but when we arrived at the greenhouses we readily found the reason. One word fits, and that is "soil," and this firm has fifty-two acres of it here.

The greenhouses are situated on a bleak plain where the wind whistles and blows in all its fury, reaching at times this year 83 miles an hour. The place at present consists of 100,000 feet of glass all devoted to rose culture. The soil is a heavy clay, not inviting to look at, but as Alex. Montgomery, Jr., says, "It holds what it gets." We believe him after looking through the place. Killarney is the principal crop, both pink and white. There is a heavy crop for Christmas. The plants were the picture of health. The stately Mrs. Russell was there in all her glory, and the new red Hadley, in the same house, covered with buds, shared the honors.

This red rose is a distinct type from the Richmond. It is a dark velvety crimson, requires no pinching, carrying the bud upright and giving good stems. The growth is quick, as can be seen where the cut is made. The thorns are red on the under part of the cut after the next growth is ready to cut. Like the Russell it does not like the heat, which readily can be seen in the growth. Where the house is cooler the plants are stronger, and the flowers of more substance. At the end of the house where it is hot the difference can be plainly seen. A house of Mrs. Taft is grown here. We had the impression it was only a summer rose, but there is a heavy crop showing for January which knocks all theories out. Lady Hillingdon of fine quality also is found here.

The heating part is the smoothest running layout we have ever seen. Alex. Montgomery, Jr., being responsible for this. Two 150 h. p. tubular boilers built for 150 pounds pressure but carrying an 80-pound load with a reducing valve set at 10 pounds; a trap at the farther end of each house lifts the water back to an automatic steam pump which passes it into the boiler. The houses being 500 feet long and having a drop of 2½ feet necessitates this. There is a bypass beside the reducing valve in case of accident and a huge Pemberthy injector in case of trouble. A new 150 h. p. boiler, same design as the other, is being installed. The boiler house has been enlarged to double the size and it is all fireproof, built of iron with four feet of glass in the sides, which makes an ideal plant. The pump room looks like a municipal water plant. A huge pump, which keeps ten men watering, and large enough for future additions, is used for manure water, and a vacuum pump for steam is to be installed next spring, so that the pressure in the spring and fall can be carried at 1½ pounds in the houses. Everything points to extension. Packing shed, ice chests and everything is up to date.

A nice home for the junior Mr. Montgomery and his wife and growing children has been built some distance from the greenhouses. The company consists of Alex. Montgomery, president; Alex. Montgomery, Jr., manager, and Robert Montgomery, treasurer. The boys, as Mr. Montgomery calls them, are making their mark. The training Alex. got at Amherst and at the Waban Conservatories fits him to handle the place in a masterly way, and Robert's training in business and chemistry places him in a position to handle the financial end. When the fertilizer man's stuff doesn't come up to the standard or the coal man's coal doesn't make the heat units warranted there is likely to be something doing. Four hundred feet of main steam pipe heats the whole place and not a kick or a sound that steam is running. This has all been put up in a little more than two years. Go and see it. You will be well repaid.

MAC.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Dwelle-Kaiser Co., dealers in glass, paints etc., has purchased the Jewett building, at 23-7-25 Elm street, and will move to its new location within 90 days. The building is a seven-story brick and the consideration was $85,000. The rapid growth of the Dwelle-Kaiser Co. made more room imperative and the new home containing 82,000 square feet of floor space will give room for further expansion.

HOLIDAY TRADE.

Business Shows Healthy Increase.

The Christmas trade of 1912 throughout the country showed a steady and healthy increase generally, over that of a year ago. From some cities the business amounted to about the same as last season, but in the most instances there was an increase of from 10 per cent to 50 per cent. The weather was generally favorable, but in some of the eastern cities, notably New York, a severe snow storm, just before Christmas, hurt trade considerably, keeping many prospective customers indoors and making delivery difficult. Stock as a rule was in sufficient supply to meet the demand and was generally of good quality. Carnations, however, were short in many places. Prices were better in some places than the year before, but generally were about the same. Flowering plants sold very well but decorative plants did not seem to be popular. Christmas greens, as was expected, sold well, according to reports.

FARGO, N. D.—The sales this year were about the same as last, says the Shotwell Floral Co. The prices were the same also with the exception of carnations, which were higher. The supply was equal to the demand. Narcissus and Romans sold pretty well. The quality of the American Beauties was not so good as last season. The other roses were good and the carnations were fair. There was a big call for pink and red roses and American Beauties. The demand for plants was greater than last year. The weather was very fine. Where possible, people were induced to send plants as early as possible before Christmas, as this helped to lessen the rush.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.—This year's business was about 10 per cent greater than last, according to the report of John Reck & Son. The retail prices were higher. There were plenty of cut flowers of all kinds. Paper White narcissi sold well. The quality of all the flowers was never better. Roses and carnations were most in demand. Flowering plants went better than ever before. The best day of the week was on Monday, as the severe storm of Tuesday kept people indoors. Fancy plant baskets and flowering plants were in good demand. The corsage bouquet trade was light but flowers for house and table decoration were very popular.

BOULDER, COLO.—A 15 per cent increase over last year is reported by C. F. Fawcett. Prices were about the same. The supply of carnations and roses was short but there were plenty of violets. The demand for bulbous flowers was light and the supply ample. The quality of stock was as good as last year if not better. There were not enough red carnations, American Beauties or Richmond roses to meet the call for these flowers. There was a greater demand for azaleas than last season, but very little call for decorative plants. December 24 was the best day and more than made up for the two preceding days, which were disappointing.

LAWRENCE, KANS.—Ten per cent is the increase of this season's trade over last year, according to A. Whitecomb & Son. Prices as a rule were about the same, though cut flowers were a little higher. The supply, with out-of-town stock included, was sufficient. There was a good demand for Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths. The quality of cut flowers was not so good as last year. Poinsettias sold better this season. Cincinnati and Lorraine begonias and cyclamen sold very well. High wholesale prices and the poor quality of shipped in stock hurt the cut flower sales and helped sell the flowering plants.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—The Christmas trade was 15 per cent greater than last year and the retail prices higher, according to Wm. Schlatter & Son. Carnations were very scarce but other flowers were plentiful. There were a few tulips and a good supply of Paper Whites and Romans. The quality was about the same as last year, being very good. There was an increased demand for red ruscus and immortelles and for baskets made up of these flowers. Azaleas were the best selling plants. The demand for artificially colored dried flowers was big, owing to the high prices of the natural product.

LINCOLN, NEB.—A twenty per cent increase in business is reported by C. H. Frey. The supply of cut stock, except in red roses, was ample, and prices were about the same as in 1911. There was a large quantity of bulbous flowers but very little call. The quality of the stock was never better. There was a greater call for roses than last year. Nearly a half more flowering plants were sold. They were all in fine condition. There was not much call for expensive plants, but everything in bloom from $1 to $3 was cleaned up easily. Mr. Frey says he sold 6,000 poinsettias.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The report of the Saltford Flower Shop states that this year's business was greater by a good margin than that of 1911. Prices were unchanged. There were plenty of roses and violets, but carnations were scarce. The sale of bulbous flowers was good. The quality of the season's stock was equal to that of any previous year. In plants, poinsettias lead, growing more popular every year. Glory of Cincinnati was the most popular begonia. Baskets of plants were also popular. This season the orders came in early and there was no special rush the last day.

RACINE, WIS.—Business this year was about the same as last, according to the Racine Floral Co. Orders of roses, carnations and violets were filled satisfactorily. There were also plenty of bulbous flowers. The carnations were not as good as last season, but the roses and other flowers were of good quality. Basket arrangements were in great demand. However, plants were sold without trouble as were Boston ferns also. Red ruscus, wild smilax and boxwood were much in demand. The ruscus took the place of immortelles in some stores.

FALL RIVER, MASS.—The report of Chatterton, Warburton shows that sales were 10 per cent greater than a year ago. Prices were about the same. The supply of cut flowers was sufficient. Bulbous flowers were in fair quantity and sold fairly well. The quality compared favorably with the stock of 1911. There was a marked increase in the call for red carnations. Plants went about as last year generally speaking. There was a falling off on the call for poinsettias, but a larger demand for azaleas. The storm of Tuesday, December 24, hurt business greatly.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—Sales were about twenty-five per cent greater than last year, report N. B. & C. E. Stover. The retail prices were practically the same. The supply of cut flowers proved sufficient and there was plenty of bulbous stock. The quality was much better than last year. Everything sold well. The call for flowering and decorative plants was about the same as for 1911. Boxwood wreaths sold much better than formerly. The weather was ideal. There was no snow but it was cold enough to be bracing.

PORTLAND, ME.—There was no marked difference in sales this year and last, says L. C. Goddard. Prices were 10 per cent higher. Roses were in fair supply but carnations were very scarce. Violets also were short. There were plenty of bulbous flowers and the demand was good. The quality of the stock in general was not as good as last year. The sales of flowering plants were greater than a year ago. There was a greater demand for Christmas greens in special arrangements owing to the shortage and high prices of cut flowers.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—A twenty-five per cent greater trade is reported this year by Tipton & Hurst. Prices were about 15 per cent higher. The supply of cut flowers was not equal to the demand. Bulbous flowers were plentiful and sold well. Flowers were all fine in quality and there was no loss. There was a heavy call for cyclamens. Flowering plants sold twenty-five per cent better, but the decorative stock sales fell off about the same amount. The demand for made-up and blooming plants and baskets is growing greater each year.

ATLANTIC, IA.—The Atlantic Greenhouses report a better trade by 35 per cent than last year with better prices prevailing. There were plenty of roses but carnations were scarce. Paper Whites sold well but Roman hyacinths were slow. The quality of the stock in general was better than last season. There was a greater call for carnations. Poinsettias and azaleas took the lead in flowering plants and more were sold than last year. Holly and Christmas trees sold out clean. The weather was more like summer than winter.

KOKOMO, IND.—The holiday trade was considerably greater than in 1911, says W. W. Coles. The prices were about the same. There were plenty of roses, but carnations were short. This shortage helped the sale of bulbous flowers. The carnations were of better quality than last season and the roses about the same. Poinsettias sold well. Azaleas also went without trouble and brought good prices. Carnations were more in demand than all other flowers, with roses next.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Business was ten per cent better than last year, according to the report of H. P. Potter. There was no change in the prices though the quantity of cut flowers was insufficient to meet the call. The supply of and demand for bulbous flowers were about equal. The quality of the flowers was better. There was an increased demand for carnations. About thirty-five per cent more flowering plants were sold. These were popular in 8-inch tubs made up with ferns, etc.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—About fifty per cent more business was done here than last season, according to Abele Bros. The retail prices were better than in 1911. The supply of cut flowers, with the exception of carnations, was equal to the demand. There was little call for bulbous flowers. The quality was quite as good as the previous season. White carnations were more in demand. There was a greater demand for flowering plants, especially poinsettias.

SAVANNAH, GA.—The estimate of A. C. Oelschig & Sons places the increase in business as from 15 to 20 per cent. Prices remained the same. Outside stock is always necessary to meet the Christmas and Easter demands here. Bulbous flowers were not plentiful. Roses were not of a very good color, owing to poor weather conditions. Plant sales were fifty per cent greater than last season.

DECATUR, ILL.—An increase of 50 per cent over the last season's business is the report of John N. Bommersbach, who says the retail prices were about the same as last year. Roses and violets were in short supply but there were plenty of bulbous and other flowers. The quality compared favorably with last year. The demand for flowering plants was greater than a year ago and decorative plants sold about the same.

MERIDEN, MISS.—"Fifty per cent more than last year," is the way Mrs. N. G. McKinney reports this season's business. Prices were higher also. Cut flowers were in sufficient quantity to meet the call. Bulbous flowers went well. The quality of the stock was much better this season. Flowering plants of all kinds were in demand. This has been the best and most satisfactory Christmas the trade has known here.

BURLINGTON, VT.—The trade was greater than last season and the retail prices were better, says Mrs. C. E. Gove. The supply of cut flowers was ample and bulbous flowers proved plentiful and sold well. The quality of stock was better than last year. More violets and narcissi were sold. In flowering plants, azaleas, cyclamen, small poinsettias and primroses sold best.

NORWALK, CONN.—Business was about the same this season as last, says R. G. Hanford. Cut flowers were in sufficient quantity and prices remained practically the same. There was only a limited demand for bulbous flowers, as usual. The stock was of better quality than last year. Red roses and Killarneys were in special demand. The call for Lorraine begonias, cyclamen and azaleas was not so great.

COLUMBUS, O.—The "best ever," says John R. Hellenthal of this year's trade. The retail prices were the same as last season. Except for a shortage of carnations, cut flowers were plentiful. The quality compared favorably with last year. There was a shortage of potted poinsettias. Both flowering and decorative plants were in good demand.

JANESVILLE, WIS.—According to the Janesville Floral Co. there was a slight increase in trade this year with prices about the same as last. There was plenty of cut stock of all kinds, but no call for bulbous flowers. The quality was good, but not as fine as last year. All flowering plants sold well. There was a special demand for well grown poinsettias.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—The increase in this year's trade over last, according to G. Van Bochove & Bro., amounted to twenty per cent. The retail prices were about the same. There were plenty of roses but carnations were short. The quality of stock was better than last year. Flowering and decorative plants sold about as they did a year ago.

GREELEY, COLO.—A trade of twenty-five per cent more than last year is reported by the Gardner Floral Co. Prices remained the same. The supply of cut flowers was insufficient but there was plenty of bulbous stock. The quality was much better than last season. There was some increase in the demand for flowering plants.

MALTA, O.—W. C. Scovel reports an increase of 53 per cent over last year's business and 22 per cent more than the best former year. His holiday trade was large and he also had considerable funeral work.

WINONA, MINN.—John Fuhlbruegge estimates the increase in trade at 40 per cent. Prices were higher than a year ago. Cut flowers were short. The stock was better than the previous season. Flowering plants sold well.

THE date of Easter next year is March 23 and it falls on April 12 in 1914.

SUBSCRIBERS should renew promptly to insure regular delivery of the paper. The yellow address label on the paper shows date of expiration.

THE plantmen of the San Diego exposition are much elated over the discovery among their cacti of some species of Stapelias, South African succulents, commonly known as Carrion plants.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

Society of American Florists.

President J. K. M. L. Farquhar has appointed August F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill., and Thos. F. Roland, Nahant, Mass., members of the board of directors to serve three years from January 1, 1913.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Calendars Received.

We have received attractive and useful calendars for 1913 from the following: Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago; A. L. Vaughan & Co., Chicago; Percy Jones, Chicago; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; John Mangel, Chicago; Geo. E. Dickinson, New York; I. N. Simon & Son, Philadelphia, Pa.; North Carolina Evergreen Co., Banners Elk, N. C.; Universal Portland Cement Co., Chicago; Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.; Lakeview Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y.; Metaire Ridge Nursery Co., Ltd., New Orleans, La.; F. O. Franzen, Chicago.

The Glass Market.

The glass market is the firmest that it has been in years and while the prices are much higher than a year ago they are not what might be considered exorbitant in any way. There is almost no question but that it will remain firm the balance of the year. There has been a recent advance in the price of greenhouse glass of 10 per cent, but the manufacturers have sold over 2,000,000 boxes of glass during the month of December, 1912, in anticipation of the advance which went into effect last week. This shows that the large buyers do not expect a lower price next season. One of the large Chicago dealers says that florists who are anticipating any building would do better to place their orders now than late in spring. The demand for greenhouse glass during October, November and December, 1912, has been unusually small, the smallest of any three months since July, 1906. This either means that there will not be much building done next year or that there will be a grand rush soon. It is surely the latter, for several of the large greenhouse manufacturers report that the inquiries during the past month have been more numerous than ever before.

Philadelphia.

SNOW HURTS TRADE.

The Christmas trade just past was a great success up to the night of December 23, when the heavy fall of snow came down like the proverbial wet blanket and knocked fully ten per cent off the profits. In this city it commenced to snow after sunset on Monday and kept it up all night and until nine a. m. Tuesday. The fall was accompanied by a cold driving wind. About eight inches of snow fell during this time. It cleared about noon and the shoppers came out to finish their purchases and there was a fairly good windup. A tour of the stores the day after showed quite a lot of plant stock on hand that would probably have moved but for the inclement weather. There was a good demand for all flowering plants, made up poinsettias in pots and pans leading. Some of these were done very well. Well flowered azaleas were also strong favorites, but much of the stock offered was anything but well flowered. It takes experience to handle the Madam Petrick azalea. It is beautiful when well done, but for some reason quite a few of the growers fell down on it this season while others sent in very well flowered stock. There were a number of cyclamens but scarcely any of the stock carried bloom enough to make them quickly salable. Heather and ardisias mostly from out of town were fine and sold well. Begonias were as usual disappointing, nothing so beautiful nor at the same time so fragile. The larger stores made a specialty of plant baskets. Pennock Bros. made them one of their leaders. The newest baskets filled with the choicest plants trimmed with ribbons were seen here and a great business was done in this line. There was an immense demand for cut flowers, prices for the most part were moderate. Special American Beauties sold out to the last bud, but $12 a dozen was high. The same may be said of the tea class, top price Killarneys bringing but $20. Richmond specials brought $36 to $40. A few Sunburst sold as high as $5 a dozen. This rose will certainly be one of the leaders next season. Carnations were scarce, ranging from $8 to $16 a hundred. Violets sold from $1.00 to $1.50 a hundred and were about equal to the demand. One had to have a pull to get orders for gardenias filled. Seventy-five cents was the price. There was plenty of lily of the valley. Cattleyas brought $65 to $75. Holly and all kinds of Christmas greens were in good demand and most of the stock was sold at fair prices.

NOTES.

Owing to the clogged condition of the streets on Tuesday the florists had a great deal of trouble in making deliveries. Horses were mostly smooth shod and had trouble to keep going. Those fortunate enough to have autos made better progress. H. H. Battles kept, besides a small army of boys, seven autos and five teams busy for two days getting out his orders. All records were broken here.

The H. A. Dreer Co. did a splendid business with their combination pots of plants and filled fern pans. These latter bid fair to become very popular. These pans of ferns with palm center and a month's growth are just the thing, can be quickly transferred to the table fernery, and will give much better service in the house than if the dish were newly filled with a variety at the time ordered.

Godfrey Aschmann reports: "We are all very tired. Business was fine, but we are busier than ever filling up the room and getting ready for Easter. It will be on us before we know it. I always like to get a good start on an early Easter and not have to force the life out of a plant at the finish."

M. Rice & Co. have forgotten about Christmas (although it broke the record for them) and are bending all efforts to get a new line of baskets for the Easter trade which will come almost too soon.

Edward Reid said his business was the best ever and displayed with pride a telegram from a large buyer which said: "Stock received in fine shape. The best Christmas stock we have ever received."

The Leo. Niessen Co. had a very large stock of American Beauties, violets and orchids, and cleaned up on these and in fact everything before the demand was over.

The January meeting of the club is to have the pleasure of hearing from Charles Henry Fox. Mr. Fox is a live wire and full of ideas.

Berger Bros. broke their record for Christmas business, their out-of-town trade being especially good. Richmond roses were a leader with them.

The commission houses all report a splendid shipping business. The stock this season was in fine condition.

Directory Revision

We are revising our Trade Directory of the Florists, Nurserymen, Seedsmen, etc., of the United States and Canada, and as there have been many changes in firm names and considerable extension of the area under glass, nursery grounds, etc., you would greatly oblige by supplying the following information with reference to your business:

New American Beauty Geranium

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 the New American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on this wonderful new Geranium for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. It originated from a novelty collection and has stood the test now nearly three years.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color—

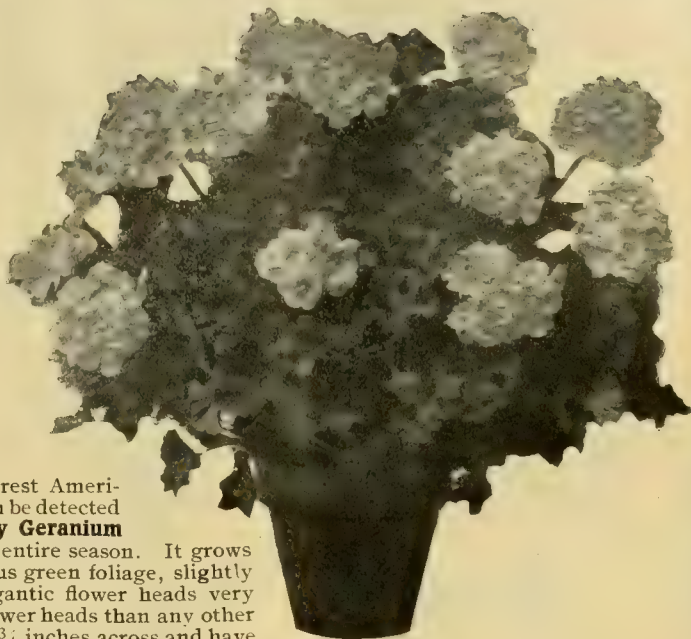

1. In brilliancy of color.
2. In size of its large blooms.
3. In earliness of bloom.
4. In constancy of bloom.
5. In vigor, strength and stocky plants.
6. In propagating quality.
7. In number of large clusters of blooms.
8. In selling quality.
9. In a wonderful ability to retain its color in cool or the hottest weather.
10. In a Geranium that has come to stay as a money maker.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is semi-double, of the purest American Beauty color. It is so distinct that no difference can be detected in the color of an American Beauty Rose. The only Geranium of its color ever introduced. It flowers freely the entire season. It grows compact, medium dwarf, of stately shape with lustrous green foliage, slightly corrugated, with a brownish circle. It produces gigantic flower heads very freely the entire season. We claim it to have larger flower heads than any other variety of its kind. The individual blooms measure $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches across and have as many as eighty fully opened, gigantic flower spikes and several half open and more in bud, in eight-inch pots.

All orders are filled in rotation, so place your order early with cash accompanying. Stock ready for shipment after January 1st, 1913. Price to the trade from $2\frac{1}{2}$ -inch pots, 50c each, \$5.00 per dozen, \$30.00 per 100, \$275.00 per 1000; from 3 inch pots, \$1.00 each, \$10.00 per dozen, \$75.00 per 100. \$760.00 per 1000. Write for colored cut.

BEST CHRISTMAS TRADE IN YEARS.

Now that the rush is over and the dealers have had time to compare their sales with those of last year the general report is that the Christmas business has been very satisfactory and the best in years. There was plenty of stock in most lines especially roses and all orders were pretty well filled in full. Red carnations were scarce and the extra fancy quality brought $10 and $12 per 100. White and pink were more plentiful than was at first expected but no surplus was visible when the stores closed at noon. Several shipments arrived late and were sold at a greatly reduced price just as they were in the boxes, because the biggest rush was really over. American Beauty roses were in good supply but sold readily at good figures. The fancy sold for $10 and $12 per dozen and the medium grade at $6.00 and $8.00 per dozen. Richmond roses were as usual in good demand and while a few of the better grades sold for as high as $30 per 100 the majority brought only $20 and $25. Rhea Reid roses had a good call and some sold at wholesale at $5.00 per dozen. Killarney and White Killarney roses were very plentiful but the first named were decidedly off color. White roses while in good supply were not so plentiful as in former years and sold for much better prices. My Maryland was in fine condition and in many cases was taken in preference to the Killarney. Sunburst, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Prince De Bulgarie were exceptionally fine and sold like wild-fire. Chrysanthemums, White and Yellow Eaton and Helen Frick were seen in large quantities at several of the stores and sold at wholesale at $1.00 to $2.00 per dozen. Sweet peas had a good call all Christmas week, violets sold well but the single sold the best. Orchids were in great demand and the fancy cattleyas easily brought $10.00 and $12.00 per dozen. Gardenias were in short supply and what little stock was offered at $5.00 and $6.00 per dozen found ready buyers. Lily of the valley moved freely at $3 and $4 per 100 and in some instances $5. Tulips were offered but had no call to speak of. Paper White narcissus sold well and stevia moved better than for some time. Boxwood was scarce and advanced a little in price because of the express charges. Mistletoe and holly were sold out completely at an early hour. Red berries were in great demand, and poinsettias sold good. The plant growers had a banner year and were sold out completely in blooming plants several days before Christmas. The weather was ideal for shipping this year and very little loss is reported. The supply houses had all the business that they could attend to and report an exceedingly heavy demand for statice, immortelles and ruscus. Trade as nearly always is the case after a holiday is very quiet and stock of all kinds is very plentiful. Carnations are beginning to arrive in large quantities and the prices have dropped steadily the past few days. Orchids are now in large supply but violets and sweet peas are none to plentiful. The New Year's trade may amount to something but business so far this week has been rather light.

THE RETAIL CHRISTMAS TRADE.

The local florists did an enormous Christmas business and in nearly all cases report a great increase in sales over those of last year. The demand for plants was heavy, especially for azaleas and poinsettias, which were sold out at an early hour. Cyclamen and begonias in some of the loop stores would not sell at all while in other establishments anything that resembled a plant sold quickly at good prices. Cut flowers of all kinds had a good call and trade was so brisk on Christmas morning in some of the larger stores that the stock purchased early that day was soon disposed of and the buyers obliged to make another trip to the market to secure sufficient stock to fill the late orders. Ruscus made up in wreaths and bunches, sold like hot cakes, red ber-

The last leaf has just been torn from the calendar and we now write down a new year—1913, and we have begun right where we have left off. There will be no step backward. We must look forward, so with the facilities for handling goods and the determination to make the coming year a record breaker, we believe this will be a good place to make your headquarters from now on. Our store is a pleasant place to trade—lots of stock at all times and prices that will always be found right. Bear in mind that "The Busiest House In Chicago" is at all times ready to serve all worthy florists. Let it begin now.

J. B. Deamud Co.
160 N. Wabash Ave. Chicago

ries and boxwood were also good sellers. Holly and mistletoe sold as well as in former years and when the rush was over there was practically no stock left.

George Perdikas sold everything he had in both plants and cut flowers at all of his stores. His place in South Wabash avenue was completely filled with stock on Christmas eve, but at noon the next day everything had disappeared. The Dearborn street establishment had a large transient trade and looked empty when the day's work was done. George Propps, Mr. Perdikas' nephew, had charge here while his employer was busy elsewhere.

George Wienhoeber says that the Fleischmann Floral Co. sold 25 per cent more of everything this year in comparison with last year and adds that his prices were much lower. His full page advertisement in the Tribune a few days before Christmas evidently brought great results for he was practically sold out by Christmas noon. Charles Hartwig was on duty as usual during the holidays and proved to be of great assistance at all times.

The George Wittbold Co. had more than its share of the Christmas business at the Buckingham establishment and the sales at the North Clark street store were also satisfactory. "Everything sold well and we had a banner year," Louis Wittbold said the day after the rush, "but the sales would have been fully 50 per cent larger if we had had enough help to serve the trade."

John Mangel did more than his usual Christmas business and has no complaint whatever to make. He handled nothing but the best stock and sold many of his choice Richmond roses for $10.00 a dozen. American Beauty roses and violets were the best sellers in cut flowers, and azaleas and poinsettias in plants. Cyclamen and begonias did not sell so well here.

The Alpha Floral Co. also sold out completely in all lines. The proprietor says that the demand for ruscus wreaths was surprisingly large and that 60 big cases of winter berries were sold. Monday and Tuesday were the big days at this store, when the trade was so brisk that it was impossible to properly take care of the army of customers.

Canger & Bergmann had a fine trade at their magnificent store in the Fine Arts building on Michigan avenue, but had to turn away some of the transient customers on account of several large decorations. Mr. Canger said that his firm sold a large number of basket arrangements of both plants and flowers and that violets would not move.

J. F. Kidwell & Brother sold out pretty well in plants at both their Wentworth avenue and Forty-third street stores. The sales were much larger than last year and poinsettias and azaleas were the best sellers in plants. Boston ferns also sold well and nearly two full benches, 100x6 feet, were disposed of.

The Bohannon Floral Co. had more business than it could attend to and when the rush was over there was scarcely a flower left in the store. There was a steady stream of customers all day long on Monday and Tuesday and even Wednesday morning.

Stollery Bros. had a big run on plants, especially azaleas, at their store on Wilson avenue. They sold out completely on cyclamen and also did a big cut flower business. Another automobile was pressed into the delivery service during the holiday rush.

Lubliner & Trinz, the East Randolph street florists, never had such a large Christmas trade although the proprietors did not have much to say regarding it. Roses and violets had the best call but everything else was pretty well disposed of.

Wm. F. Schofield, the North State street florist, was sold out entirely at noon and had to turn away orders. He had several large buffet decorations in the loop that helped considerably to make this Christmas the best ever.

The Kedzie Florist, Hans Rowaldt and E. Leslie, proprietors, report a fine Christmas trade. They say that everything is going along lovely and that the year which just passed has been a very prosperous one.

Schiller, the West Madison street florist, reports a large increase over the Christmas business of last year. Besides a large run on cut flowers and plants a large number of decorations were arranged.

H. C. Rowe reports a fine Christmas trade with a heavy demand for blooming plants. Flowers also sold well at his store and the sales show a marked increase over those of last year.

JONES

56 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO

A. Lange, the East Madison street florist, had something like 50 employees on his payroll for several days before Christmas, so one can readily see that some business must have been done at this hustling store. Herbert Stone says that the entire force was kept busy at all times and worked so late at night that nearly all the men made their headquarters at a downtown hotel instead of going home. The demand here was principally for cut flowers, with Killarney roses and violets having the best call.

NOTES.

Porch climbers entered John Poehlmann's home on Christmas eve while Mrs. Poehlmann and her daughter were at supper and stole a valuable diamond pin and other jewelry besides a considerable sum of money. When Mrs. Poehlmann and her daughter returned to the room after a lapse of about 15 minutes they missed the articles immediately and notified the proper authorities of the theft, but no hope is entertained for their recovery. Mr. Poehlmann takes the loss good naturedly and is inclined to think that Santa Claus found that he did not have enough presents to cover his entire route so instead of leaving any he took away some that he had left there in previous years. The total loss is fully $1,400.

C. H. Fisk's automobile was stolen from his garage on Christmas morning shortly after the store closed for the day. The robbers entered the garage through a window in the second story and selected his Speedwell, the best machine in the place. The robbery occurred shortly after midnight when some neighbors noticed that the garage doors were open, and suspecting that something was wrong, promptly notified the proprietor. He in turn notified the police and it was not long before the machine was located and returned to its rightful owner. Mr. Fisk says that the blue clothed man with brass buttons that brought his machine back was the most welcome Santa Claus that ever lived.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, on Thursday, January 9, when the officers elected at the last meeting will be installed. The secretary made an error in calling this meeting under the old by-laws, which would make the date January 2, but will issue another notice giving the correct date, January 9.

President Rudd, of the Horticultural Society, at a meeting of the executive committee held December 27, announced the appointment of R. J. Haight as secretary, taking the place of Chas. W. Deusner, who has left for California. Good work has been reported on the revised premium list for the spring show to be held at the Art Institute April 1-5.

Sharp, Partridge & Co. are confident that the price of greenhouse glass will not be any lower next season, for they have placed their orders with the manufacturers since the recent advance of 10 per cent and are now prepared for the rush with 2,600 boxes, all that they can store at one time.

John Page, son of W. H. Page, the well known grower of Hampton, Middlesex, England, who is employed as a carnation grower at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove, will leave for home next spring to remain permanently. Mr. Page's friends say that it will not be before the present school term expires. "Nuf said."

Peter Reinberg did a better Christmas business than last year and with the exception of carnations did not ship out an order short. This firm was particularly well fixed on roses and took care of its customers in fine shape. Tim Matchen says that he does not remember when Reinberg's Richmond was so good as this year.

Bassett & Washburn had a good call for their Rhea Reid roses all last week but it was impossible to fill all the orders for this variety. They had a good cut of fine Mrs. Aaron Ward and Sunburst roses, in fact, everything with the exception of carnation was in good supply and sold readily.

Wictor Bros. are glad that the holidays are over for the Christmas trade was by far the largest that this firm has ever had. They will not offer any more blooms of Sunburst this season for all the wood is needed for propagation as they will grow this rose very extensively next year.

August Poehlmann says that Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s Christmas business this year was the largest in the firm's history. Every department was taxed to its utmost and had all the orders that it could properly attend to. His

John Zech says that Zech & Mann's Christmas trade was the best in years and that the sales show an increase of nearly $1,000 over those of last year. This firm is now receiving some fine Asparagus plumosus nanus from Florida, and is shipping it as far north as Winnipeg.

A fire in the basement of Louis Wittbold's home Christmas morning caused a great deal of excitement for a little time on Buckingham place. Fortunately the fire department arrived promptly and extinguished the blaze before much damage was done.

P. J. Foley, of the Foley Manufacturing Co., returned on December 27 from an eastern trip and left again on business the following day for parts unknown. Mr. Foley booked several orders for greenhouse material while he was in the east.

George Manos, the Union Depot florist, supplied a great many suburbanites with ruscus for the holidays. He also shipped a large quantity of roses from this market to his store in Pittsburg, which uses an enormous quantity of stock.

Joseph Foerster says that single violets were in great demand for Christmas at Kyle & Foerster's store. The Killarney roses that this firm is now receiving from the Benthley greenhouses at New Castle, Ind., are showing fine color.

Wm. J. Smyth is still confined to the St. Luke's hospital but is progressing as favorably as can be expected. The boys at the store put their shoulders to the wheel and did a banner Christmas business during his absence.

E. E. Pieser says that Kennicott Bros. Co.'s carload of boxwood, which was due here on December 7, did not arrive until the day after Christmas. He is now disposing of this shipment for the railroad company.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is well pleased with their Christmas business which was the best ever. This firm is now featuring a fine grade of sweet peas which are now in brisk demand.

Phil Schupp says that the Christmas trade at J. A. Budlong's store was way beyond his expectations and that his firm had plenty of stock to go around with the exception of carnations.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are more than satisfied with their Christmas trade and succeeded in selling out pretty well. Mistletoe and holly were sold in large quantities at this store.

Wendland & Keimel are shipping some fine Sunburst roses to E. C. Ameling Co.'s store. Their Killarney roses are now showing fine color.

A BRISK CHRISTMAS TRADE.

Christmas, 1912, will be long remembered in St. Louis on account of the sunshiny and balmy weather. On the morning of December 23 the counters of the wholesale houses were well stocked with all kinds of flowers and prices were high, and many of the retailers refrained from buying in the home market. Many of the wholesalers were unable to promise to fill orders on account of their growers' inability to let them know as to the size of their shipments. The warm and bright weather caused a big supply of stock and the consequence was that on the morning of December 24 stock was seen everywhere and the extremely high prices of carnations caused many of the retailers to push their plants, which sales from all accounts were the largest in years. Violets were cleaned up and sweet peas sold well when of good quality. Bulbous stock was a glut, especially Paper White narcissus. Good long stemmed American Beauty roses were salable, but medium and short did not move any too freely. Orchids were sold at $12 per dozen. The supply from the Chicago market was very visible, especially among the west end florists. At the time of this writing flowers of all kinds are very plentiful.

NOTES.

Grimm & Gorly did an increased business. F. X. Gorly wishes to warn the trade against a young man who stole postoffice order blanks from the Detroit postoffice and victimized many in St. Louis, his firm suffering the loss of $40.

Geo. H. Angermueller had a good supply of everything. He received a heavy shipment December 24, which failed to bring the prices expected, and on Christmas morning the contents could be purchased at greatly reduced rates.

A. Werner & Bros.' roses were as fine as any that were seen in the St. Louis market, their White Killarney being exceptionally good. This stock is handled exclusively by the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. was well pleased with their first Christmas trade. Their stock was disposed of at fair prices, their efforts being to satisfy retailers and growers alike.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. was strictly in it. Their growers furnished them with the freshest and finest of stock. The well-filled counters were rapidly emptied.

Hugo Gross had some beautiful violets on the market. His brothers and himself, together with W. J. Pilcher, are the pioneer violet growers of this vicinity.

Miss M. S. Newman did an immense trade. She stated that plants sold the best because her customers refused to pay the high prices demanded for cut flowers.

Robert Newcomb, representing Vaughan's Seed Store, and F. L. Lemke, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., of Chicago, were with us this week.

H. G. Berning had an immense stock. His counters on the morning of December 24 were filled with the best carnations ever seen in this market.

C. Young & Sons Co. disposed of the largest quantity of azaleas, poinsettias and other blooming plants in years at their west end branch.

Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. disposed of many azaleas, poinsettias and a great quantity of orchids, which they grow extensively.

F. H. Weber stated that plants sold better than ever and that trade in general was good.

C. A. Kuehn had a fine supply of roses, carnations and Christmas novelties.

The Riessen Floral Co. did a big business during the holidays.

All the west end florists report increased sales of plants.

Mrs. O. C. Simmonds had a good holiday trade. W. F.

Milwaukee.

CHRISTMAS TRADE EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD.

The market conditions for Christmas week showed a scarcity of carnations and enough white and pink roses to fill all orders. Richmond were in great demand and were somewhat scarce. Sweet peas were of good quality and sold readily, as did violets. Lilies of the valley sold well and there was enough to supply the demand. Narcissus sold well for Christmas but upon this writing they are much in evidence in the wholesale houses. Smilax and all other greens were plentiful. Holly sold readily and the three days before Christmas found good stock exceptionally scarce and bringing good prices. Good mistletoe was very scarce.

NOTES.

Gust. Rusch & Co. report a most excellent Christmas trade but had the same complaint as all the other wholesalers, a carnation shortage, but managed to fill all orders satisfactorily. This firm handled a large assortment of blooming plants and some extra fine holly which sold readily. They are receiving some fine single violets which find ready sale.

Edlefson & Leidiger Co.'s conservatory, adjoining their store, was cleaned out of the large quantity of blooming plants which were put in a few days before Christmas. They say they never had a Christmas when so many plants were sold as this year.

Holton & Hunkel Co. sold a large quantity of blooming plants for the holidays and also had a very fine as well as a large cut of Killarney roses. They report a shortage in carnations, the result being the turning down of many good orders.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS GOOD.

Christmas business proved very good. All cut flowers sold and sold in a hurry. Even the readily available supply of Paper Whites ran out. The week, too, was a very good one for plants. As a matter of fact, it was the best Christmas season in many years for potted plants. The reason for this probably was the retailers feared the supply of cut stock would be very much shorter than usual and accordingly pushed plants harder than they did before. The rose supply was good. The cut of Richmond and American Beauties was much larger than the most sanguine had anticipated. The Killarney supply came up to expectations. The white roses came in handy for the large amount of funeral work that always manages to edge its way into holiday business. The carnation cut was, when all conditions are considered, very fair. Not very many red were forthcoming, but the offering of Enchantress and Rose Pink Enchantress was pretty fair. Poinsettias sold well. All the stock with hardly any exception was good. The blooms were larger, the stems long and erect and their foliage good and clean. On December 24 the wholesale houses completely cleaned up on narcissi and none were available on Third street until the morning after Christmas. Both giganteums and callas cleaned up. Violets sold very well, but the doubles did not quite clean up entirely. Even at that, about a hundred thousand were used by one house in the market. The choice lily of the valley sold well. The seconds and culls could hardly find a market. Orchids moved nicely. Stevia sold well. The first gladioli of the season came in Monday evening. The green goods supply was large and fully adequate for market requirements.

NOTES.

Charles Garvey, of Pete Weiland's, went to his home in Indianapolis immediately after the Christmas rush, to spend a few days with his folks.

Louis H. Kych and Miss Edith Kych have the sympathy of the trade in their bereavement over the death of their sister Stella, last week.

Pete Weiland cut the first indoor gladioli that came into the market. They realized the very top prices.

William Schumann of Newport had an elegant lot of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati in for Christmas.

C. E. Cutbell cleaned up nicely on his very large supply of New York double violets.

BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

Beginning with December 20 the wires were kept busy ordering stock for the Christmas rush which proved to be greater than usual. Carnations were scarce, every one available being booked long before time of delivery. Roses were called for more heavily. There was a heavy call for stevia, which was pretty well cleaned up. Valley, Roman and Paper Whites were in good demand at fair prices. Poinsettias were not offered in as large quantities as heretofore, but many fine specimens were shown. A heavy plant business was done with the poinsettia as the leader. There were many calls for cyclamen, azaleas, and valley in pots and pans. The outlook for a good New Year's trade is very promising and stock is selling at prices above the average.

NOTES.

The Columbus Floral Co. had a good Christmas crop of carnations, Pink, White and Rose Pink Enchantress, Victory, Bonfire, Gloriosa and White Wonder. Sweet peas and stevia were cleaned up early.

Business was brisk at The Livingston Seed Co.'s store. The amount of stock exhibited is evidence of their good trade.

The Cottage Rose Gardens had a number of orders for bouquets and floral pieces besides a nice trade in plants.

The Indianola Florists sold a large number of plants and cut flowers at wholesale besides doing a nice business.

Sam Graff is doing an immense business this season. Cut flowers of every variety and pot plants are sold. Although in business only a short time, The Ohio Floral Co., 139 S. High street, did a good business.

The J. R. Hellenthal establishment gave each of the employees a dressed duck for Christmas dinner.

The Riverside Floral Co. had a nice trade at its store besides wholesaling a lot of bulbous stock.

E. Metzmaier sold a lot of trees, two carloads being bought. Pot plants were cleaned up early.

Underwood Bros. had a fine holiday trade, the only complaint being a scarcity of stock.

Howard & Co. report a satisfactory Christmas trade. Pot plants especially, sold well.

Sherman Stephens had a big run on his ruscus and holly specials.

Graff Bros. report a fine trade, with fancy poinsettias on exhibition.

PLANT TRADE POOR.

Business here was not quite equal in volume to that of last Christmas. The cut flower end did better, however, than the plants. The falling off in the demand for these was very considerable. The storemen had made rather extensive preparations for a plant trade, and unfortunately there were many pretty things left on hand when the stores were finally closed for Christmas day. Made up baskets and boxes of medium size only were offered, and among the most attractive of these were cyclamens, hyacinths, begonias, and short grown poinsettias. Among the cut flowers, roses were in the best demand and, there was probably more of the Killarneys sold than any other one variety. Of other roses available, White Killarney, American Beauty and Richmonds were in evidence, all clean, fresh, and of the best quality, remarkable for Christmas, considering the distance between here and the northern point where they were grown. Carnations were plentiful and mostly home grown. The Stiles Co. had a splendid crop just right for the occasion. Narcissus and poinsettias were also home products. Valleys and violets came from outside. Taken all in all, the Christmas trade was far below that of a normal year but, considering the general business depression that has prevailed here for some months, the florists are well satisfied with the amount of business done.

NOTES.

The Texas Nursery Co. of Sherman, Texas, has established a selling branch on West Main street. They are showing a fairly good line of evergreens in tubs and a general collection of fruit and ornamental shade trees. They expect to be here all through the winter and spring.

Fresh California violets offered at 25 cents a bunch were a feature on the streets two days after Christmas. These were direct from San Francisco, consequently they were the simon-pure article.

The Barteldes store has the decorative work for a rather elaborate wedding which will take place on the last day of 1912.

Milstein, a florist of Kansas City, spent a few days here just previous to the holidays.

A. Washburn & Sons estimate the year's increase in Christmas business as about 7 or 8 per cent. Carnations were a little higher priced. Other flowers were about the same. The supply was ample. The demand for hyacinths and Paper White narcissi was good and the supply plentiful. The quality was fully up to the average. There was an increased call for flowering plants.

J. D. Robinson and Miss Louise Read were married at Savannah, Georgia, December 23. Mr. Robinson had been in the flower trade in this city for something like 35 years, selling out a year ago to his foreman, John R. Gee. The couple will reside in Bloomington.

It was a Merry Christmas in the flower trade. Those that had good crops were happy, and those who had crops of any kind didn't have to wait long in disposing of them. Tuesday we had a bad snowstorm but even that did not dampen the ardor of the buyers. It was something like a bargain counter rush. Pickled stock was not in evidence, and carnations were better than we ever have seen them and the price was high. It was rather a change from that of last year. Roses, although somewhat off color because of the weather conditions, were good. Poinsettias were the favorite in plants, and not enough of them could be had. Azaleas did not have the call they formerly have had, evergreen and holly were somewhat scarce, the restrictions on shipping this class of goods being felt badly. On account of the ban by the Agricultural Department, goods coming from the south could not be shipped again out of the state, for fear of the gypsy moth and other pests. This hurt the shipping trade. The wholesalers and retailers did the biggest business on record. All are happy. The individual orders were greater and new orders were much in evidence. Violets sold well but the double variety has had its day, for it is not wanted in Boston at any price. The single has the field all to itself. Calendulas were noted on the market, but there were no takers. The red chrysanthemum intensity we saw in good form with six-foot stems. Some of the boys are thus early making resolutions. It is better to make and break than never to make at all. A happy New Year. MAC.

CHRISTMAS WEEK DAY BY DAY.

December 23.—At some places in the wholesale district the supply of stock was light; at others the arrivals were heavy, one prominent wholesaler receiving 85 boxes of roses. There is talk of a scarcity of cut flowers, but we are looking forward to tomorrow. The weather is clear, cool and bracing and conditions seem favorable for good business. The buyers for the big retail stores are fighting shy; they, too, are thinking about tomorrow.

December 24.—When we reached the street this morning we jumped into about 6 inches of snow, with more falling. It was the official beginning of winter and even if a little belated it filled the bill. Deliveries of cut flowers were very slow. The Summit, N. J., express, one of the institutions of the wholesale trade, did not arrive until 5:30 p. m. It was said that the Summit express people put the cut flowers for Twenty-sixth street on an automobile and rushed them in on time, leaving our Twenty-eighth street friends waiting for their stock. Nevertheless, much stock eventually came in and there was no visible evidence of a scarcity in any line. It had been said that carnations would be scarce, but there were plenty of carnations. The ruling price for carnations was $6 to $8 per 100. A few special reds went as high as $10 to $12, but the buyers fought these prices; in fact, they fought the prices on nearly every stock. They said in effect that there was no reason for such high prices and that if cut flowers reached an unreasonable figure plants would be pushed to the disadvantage of the cut flower trade. The wholesale stores were open all night and buyers were much in evidence. There was considerable buying, but more jockeying and dickering. There was a great supply of roses and the movement was slow. There were also plenty of orchids and violets. Considerable complaint was heard that much of the orchid stock had been held back too long and was not salable. Nobody in these days, expects very much from violets but they moved better than was expected, some going at $1.00 to $1.25 a hundred, but there was considerable peddling at lower prices. Lilies and lily of the valley moved freely at reasonable prices. At the retail stores the storm made deliveries a hardship but extra teams and autos were put on and they managed to fill orders on time. The plant trade was a leading feature of the retail stores, and there was a reason. Though many cut flowers were sold, the people as a rule, balked on cut flower prices. One retailer said: "A gentleman came in here and wanted to send a present of two dozen American Beauty roses. When he learned the price he turned them down and bought a combination basket of plants."

December 25. Christmas Day.—In the wholesale district, business was slow. During the hours that the stores were open, prices kept sagging until it became practically a hardship to move stocks. The weather was fine and the retailers were thus helped out in their belated deliveries. Reports from the leading retail stores indicate that business, especially in plants, was very fine.

December 26.—This is an ideal winter day, clear sunshine and not too cold, and the heavy blanket of snow looks seasonable. As was to be expected, business is very quiet, an abundance of stock and light buying. Now that the rush and turmoil of Christmas is over there is opportunity for a calm survey of the situation, and it must be acknowledged that the results in both the wholesale and retail lines are not particularly encouraging. It is the consensus of opinion that the storm of December 24 was a great damper on not only the flower trade, but nearly every other line of business. It prevented many people from coming out and made delivery a hardship. Then in the wholesale district there was a tremendous influx of stock, notably pink roses. In the two days preceding Christmas one wholesale dealer alone received about 300 boxes of roses. That is but one instance, and adding to that the carnations, orchids, lilies, lily of the valley, violets and poinsettias, it will be seen that the wholesale district, with unfavorable weather in addition, was groaning under a heavy load.

December 27.—Pouring rain greeted the early risers this morning, and what was worse, it rained all day. Not much business was expected under favorable conditions, but the rain made conditions a little worse, as the snow had not been half removed and the streets and avenues were rivers of slush. Prices were away down. There was an attempt to keep the price of special carnations up to $8.00 a hundred but we did not see anybody paying it. $3.00 to $6.00 a hundred were more rational figures. Forty to sixty was the best for American Beauty roses and the prices on Killarney and other tea roses were low. Since noon of Christmas Day, violets have been practically "junk," which reminds us that there is altogether too much "junk" in various lines that reaches this market for the holiday trade. This is no reflection on much good stock that comes in and it is no reflection on the wholesalers who, we believe, try to make the best of what comes to them, but in some instances it is uphill work. Later advices from the retail stores indicate that, as a rule, they have done very well.

December 28.—Business is very quiet and prices in the wholesale markets have fallen. Gardenias and carnations are holding up better than other stocks, but have, of course, fallen off from the Christmas prices. It is difficult to give correct quotations on roses, for the long-stemmed Killarneys and other tea roses seem very hard to move. Reports gathered from various sources indicate that the Christmas violet trade was very poor with the retailers who laid in large supplies. We believe that the trade in holly and holly wreaths exceeded that of any previous year. Asparagus plumosus nanus and smilax are literally drugs on the market. In orchids, whereas in former years the trade was mostly confined to a few stores, now every store has them, and some of the cattleya blooms sell cheap. Stevia and Paper White narcissus are plentiful. There are a few jonquils but they are not yet factors.

Madison, N. J.

Everybody receives a hearty welcome when they call on Edw. H. Behere, who is enthusiastic over his houses of My Maryland and White Killarney and well may be proud of the showing they are making. He has several promising new roses, which will be heard from later. Across the way the establishment of A. P. Smith shows the same high grade of My Maryland and Killarneys. Mr. Behere superintends the work. The output of these places is handled by Moore, Hentz & Nash, New York.

At the L. A. Noe establishment at Madison, one can see American Beauties grown to perfection and a very promising crop is now in sight. Well do they deserve the title of "Beauty King." Under the able management of J. Rusicka, Bridesmaids, Killarneys and Richmond fare well and are of first-class quality. Their output is sold through the New York Cut Flower Co.

The rose growers and florists in the Madison, N. J. section were visited Sunday, December 24 by one of the worst hail storms ever experienced here. Luckily no damage was done in Madison, but at Morristown, where the storm was most severe, quite a little damage was done to the commercial and private greenhouses.

F. D. Brant of Brant, Hentz & Co., cannot speak too highly of his white rose, Madison, which certainly shows up well and bears out Mr. Brant's statements as to its growth and productiveness. American Beauties are also a feature here and Mr. Brant has a knack of getting them in bloom at just the right time.

At the Shannon greenhouses our old veteran, David Shannon, is still producing his high grade Brides and Maids of which he is very fond, but the writer noticed a few benches of Killarney and believes they will take the place of his Maids next season.

At the H. Hentz, Jr., greenhouses, Mr. Milton takes pride in showing visitors an up-to-date establishment, especially his cold storage plant, lately installed and his houses of Killarneys, My Maryland and American Beauties, which do very well in the concrete benches.

Righter & Barton's range of glass is in full operation. American Beauties, Bridesmaids and Killarneys are grown exclusively and are of excellent quality.

James Murphy has discarded roses and devotes his whole place to smilax, asparagus plumosus and sprengerii.

BRISK CHRISTMAS PLANT TRADE.

Weather conditions for two weeks preceding Christmas were considered favorable to the growers of plants that form a good part of the Christmas trade now. In roses, American Beauty, Killarney, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Milady, Lady Hillingdon, and the always needed Bon Silence, were plentiful, prices ranging from $1.50 to $15 per dozen for American Beauties. Orchids, gardenias, lily of the valley and violets were plentiful, selling well in original arrangements for corsages and Christmas baskets. Carnations, the flower that is most sought for by moderate buyers, was off crop to some extent, consequently prices went soaring, and $10, $12 and $15 per 100 were asked for good carnations, which hurt the sale of them very much, narcissus, stevia and hyacinths being used for the cheaper boxes of flowers. On Wednesday carnations could be bought very reasonably but it was too late, as orders had been filled with other things. Snapdragon, bouvardias, mignonette and pansies were of very good quality and sold well. Poinsettias were never finer or larger than those on sale this year. Begonia Cincinnati, although pink, has come to stay as a Christmas plant, so you had better grow it. Azaleas were good. Cyclamen, extra fine grown, and good primrose plants gave the stores a good assortment of plants, and arranged as they were in baskets with ferns and prettily trimmed, or with a pot cover or mat, made a pretty gift from $1 upward, and do not jump up because there is an increased demand for them as cut flowers. It was very noticeable last Easter, the exorbitant price asked, and again at this time, and attention is again called to it. "Growers" remember that plants can be grown under glass as well as roses and carnations, and a good salesman or saleswoman can sell them very easily. When put beside a dozen carnations which will you take for $1, the flowers, the poinsettias, the begonia or the primrose, either plant prettily trimmed, and they keep? Think it over. Another good seller up to about December 23 was baskets or vases of ruscus, statice and boxwood, which is a bright attractive arrangement and one that will keep in a modern hot apartment. These also sold from $1 upward. Holly, mistletoe, laurel, pine and boxwood, in all their different arrangements, had their usual sale in all the stores and on street corners. Holiday trade as a whole was better than last year, with ideal weather to facilitate all deliveries. The week preceding Christmas and every day and evening until after New Year's has several affairs of some kind, the debutante, a ball, a reception or a wedding, and will give the florists a busy time, which all appreciate.

NOTES.

The writer, who still thinks he is going, had the distinction of an order for a duplication of a bride's bouquet taken by him 25 years ago, and made the same for the silver wedding. When the daughter of this same lady was a debutante two years ago and married last year, the bouquet orders were taken by yours truly. Pretty good record to hold the customers from the time you were a would-be florist until the present day.

W. J. Palmer & Son, S. A. Anderson, the Wm. Scott Co. and Grace F. Newlands, upon whom the public depends the most for plants, more especially the last three, had good stock. Anderson's poinsettias were never better and a third larger than any ever sold in Buffalo before. Scott, Newlands, Palmer and Anderson are all in good shape so far with their lilies for Easter, which will be here before we realize it.

BEST YEAR YET.

The Christmas trade was the greatest ever, that is the expression of all, wholesaler, retailer and grower. The plant trade was larger by far than that of cut flowers. Poinsettias were cleared early and as usual were the favorites. There was a splendid lot of azaleas, Mme. Petrick being the best of all the different varieties. Some large specimens of Simon Mardner sold as high as $15.00. Less matting and ribbon was used in connection with plants than in former years. Glorie de Lorraine begonias sold well in the medium sizes. Anything over five dollars did not go so quickly. Cyclamen sold out even up to ten-dollar specimens with a hundred blooms to the plant. There were also a fine lot of tulips in pots and pans which went at profitable prices, but the best prices were obtained for made-up baskets. This line of goods seems to come more in favor every year, and the men filling them have developed a rare taste in arrangement and effect, also in the blending and harmony of colors. A large trade was done in greens of the better grade. Artificial flowers were in evidence and were sold mostly in small made-up baskets of the dollar size, but this apparently did not interfere with the plant trade, as people very often found what they wanted sold out and only then took recourse to artificial flowers. Cut flowers, in spite of being advertised as very scarce, seemed to be fairly plentiful, especially roses, of which there was a large variety. There were Richmonds with stems as long as American Beauties, Killarneys of all colors, and many more. Carnations were scarce. Enchantress and its sports made up the bulk. There were enough reds to fill early orders. In bulbous flowers there were Paper

Whites, the yellow tulips and a few daffodils. Lily of the valley was a great favorite. A lot of stevia helped to fill many a box. Orchids sold moderately. The weather was fairly cold and an occasional plant was frozen in spite of heavy wrapping, but the roads were in splendid shape for sleighing, a rare thing for this city this time of the year. The estimated increase over last year's business is 15 per cent.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

Roses, carnations and violets were in greater demand for Christmas than last year and the supply was decidedly short, according to E. E. Brown. Prices were higher. The demand for bulbous flowers was good and the quantity rather short. The quality of stock compared favorably with last season. The demand for orchids, especially with violets and valley in corsage work, was greater than formerly. Azaleas, begonias, primulas and other plants cleaned up at good prices.

NOTES.

E. E. Brown, proprietor of the Brownhurst greenhouses, had a loss of several hundred dollars a month or two ago owing to an inefficient night fireman. Instead of following out instructions to paint the steam pipes with sulphur to destroy the mildew on the roses, he poured the sulphur on red hot coals he had distributed in the paths. Roses, and begonias, the latter of the Cincinnati and Lorraine variety, were destroyed.

The West Asheville greenhouses owned by D. A., have been leased to Grover Mires, formerly with the Woolsey Greenhouses.

Raleigh, N. C.

Business this year, according to J. L. Quinn & Co., was probably 5 per cent better than last, for the Christmas trade. Prices were a little higher. There were barely enough violets and carnations to meet the demand. In bulbous flowers narcissi sold the best. The carnation stock was better than ever before and the other flowers were of good quality also. Plants sold very readily. Immortelles, ruscus, etc., went well. The weather was ideal.

Local florists are glad the parcels post is to be a reality. One express company controls the situation here now, and it will give us a chance to cut loose from it.

This year in general has been as good as any of those in the past and in some respects better.

J. L. O'Quinn & Co., will open a downtown store soon. This is something new for this city. J. L. O.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

NEW YORK.—C. W. Scott and wife are spending the holidays in Bermuda.

LYCOPodium of the variety used for Christmas greens is reported to be shipped to Europe by Japanese dealers.

LILY OF THE VALLEY for ice storage is in very short supply in this country and difficult to obtain from German sources.

SCARLET IMMORTELLES of new crop were well cleaned up by the wholesale florists. Small lots at the last brought 35 cents per bunch.

A. H. GOODWIN and wife, of Chicago, who spent Christmas in Paris, write that they will motor in early January to the Riviera where they are to meet friends.

A WESTERN seedsmen is authority for the statement that the ever increasing state seed laws are making the seed business more difficult and will surely advance prices.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade December 31, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4.25 per 100.—Onion sets, reds and yellows, for January and February delivery, are quoted at 95 cents to $1 per bushel.—The mild weather has proven very favorable for seedsmen in handling spring bulbs and for nurserymen for southern and western shipments.—Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is serving on the jury this week.

Seed Corn Outlook Favorable

Reports from middle western experiment stations show the percentage of moisture in this season's crop of seed corn to be much less than last year and the keeping qualities much higher. Prices are expected to be correspondingly lower.

The University of Illinois station says: "We have not yet begun our work in determining the moisture content in the samples set aside for that purpose, but the indications are that our corn this year is in better condition than common. We think we will find that the moisture content is low this year, since corn has had a good chance to mature."

The University of Nebraska: "The percentage of moisture in our corn at the experiment station on November 15 was about 10 per cent lower than a year ago. Last year was a very abnormal year, however, and the 1912 crop represents about the normal condition."

Iowa State College: "We would consider the present fall as almost ideal for preserving seed corn in good condition. We believe that the seed corn next spring should give a rather satisfactory germination."

Purdue University: "The corn in this part of the country is in better condition at the present time than it has been for a number of years past. The fall weather has been favorable to drying and the corn has come from the field in good condition."

University of Wisconsin: "The moisture in the seed corn on account of our exceedingly fine fall is much less this year than last. This undoubtedly will be beneficial and the seed corn will be of a much higher grade than it has been for two or three years in the past. We think the price will hold about $3 to $4 a bushel of 70 pounds."

Non-Warranty in England.

The English Mark Lane Express mentions a curious milk case. An English dairyman decided to protect himself about as American seedsmen do when they handle seeds. He drew up the following form, which customers were obliged to sign before the milk would be delivered:

"I, ..., give no warranty, express or implied, as to the nature, substance, or quality of any milk I supply to my customers. Every endeavor is made by me to supply milk of the best quality and direct from the cow, but I cannot warrant that my milk will at this or any future time be up to the standard laid down by the Board of Agriculture.

"I am prepared to continue to supply you with milk only on the above mentioned terms, though you can always rely upon receiving from me milk as it comes from my cows.

"Please sign and return to me the enclosed acknowledgment of this notice if you wish me to continue supplying you."

The acknowledgment reads:

"I acknowledge to have received from you notice dated the day of July, 1912, and request you to supply me with milk on the terms of such notice."

One of the drivers, a boy of 14, was stopped by a milk inspector who tried to buy a pint of milk for testing. The boy followed instructions and refused to sell unless the inspector signed the printed form. The result was that the boy and his employer were arrested for refusing to sell milk to an inspector. For the defense it was claimed that there was no absolute refusal to sell the milk, since the inspector could have bought on the same terms that every one else did, and under the English law the question of notice of condition of sale had been settled. The court finally discharged the boy and fined the dairyman $5 and costs in order to carry the point up higher as a test case.—Rural New-Yorker.

Barteldes Co's New Grain.

Otto Bofinger, manager of the Barteldes Seed Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., showed the writer some ears of the new grain, Feterita, this week. This grain is from present indications, destined to supplant the ordinary Kafir corn. Extensive tests during this last season to have convinced those who have grown it that it matures four weeks earlier than Kafir corn, and that it is immune from the ravages of the chinch bug. Add to this the fact that the individual grains are fully twice as large as the other, and that the yield per acre runs anywhere from 50 to 80 bushels, it seems quite plausible to believe that Kafir corn will no longer be planted when once the merits of Feterita are known universally.

The greenhouses formerly run by Fred Ullman at Strawberry Point, have been purchased by G. A. Heyne of this city and shipped here. They will probably be added to the Linwood Nurseries, at this spring. The park board intends to make an elaborate floral display in the public parks of which Mr. Heyne is superintendent, this season. It is the intention of the park board to erect some greenhouses of their own in the near future. Until then, the Linwood Nurseries are leased for the purpose of growing the plant supply for the city parks.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

A New Tomato.

The accompanying picture illustrates a new cross of the tomato that shows promise of developing into a valuable variety. J. A. Smith, an agricultural college graduate, has developed this new plant, which is the result of crosses of the Earliana, Ponderosa and

A New Tomato.

Stone, which are all standard varieties containing many desirable characteristics and whose offspring shows promise of combining the good qualities of each of them, namely, the earliness and hardness of the Earliana, the productiveness of the Ponderosa, and the regularity and quality of the Stone. Mr. Smith has been working at this for some time and now believes he has a strain worth growing. He states "the seed of the tomatoes shown in the picture was planted indoors in early spring and transferred to pots as soon as the second leaves appeared. On April 17 they were transplanted to the open ground and kept covered until all danger of frost was past. They were given no more than ordinary care and not forced in any way.

"The plants matured and ripened their first fruit July 6 in fine condition for immediate table use. With an earlier spring they would have produced ripe fruit by July 1 if not before. This single cluster, thirteen on one main stem, was taken from a plant that contains many like it. The cluster originally contained seventeen tomatoes but four were removed while small to give room for the others to develop. The weight of the cluster is 6½ pounds. The other plants of the lot are equally productive."

It will be interesting to note whether the characteristics of these plants are maintained in the offspring or whether this vigor and productiveness is simply caused by the stimulation of cross-fertilization. C. P. HALLIGAN.

COMMERCIAL ORGANIZATIONS of Stockton, Calif., have taken steps to ship several carloads of onions to eastern cities to be distributed free of charge among the poor because truck gardeners were throwing them into the river as the result of a glutted market.

LANCASTER, O.—M. M. Miesse has completed six greenhouses in the last year and is planning another. Five of the new buildings were 29 feet 6 inches by 235 feet and one 40x200 feet. Concrete walks were laid throughout. Mr. Miesse will make lettuce and tomatoes a specialty. He says lettuce has been very low in price this season, while coal has been high. His Christmas trade was fair.

A Little History of Our New Scarlet Carnation "The Herald"

PETER OLSEM, Supt. of Greenhouses.

The Herald is the result of a cross between two scarlet seedlings, Nos. 50 and 49. Seedling No. 50 was a seed parent of Harlowarden which was originated by the late James Hartshorne, and was an exceptionally strong, robust grower, producing very fine flowers on short, stiff stems. It was such a fine free bloomer that instead of discarding the variety it was given to a small florist to see what it would do in a small commercial place where it did so well as a commercial carnation that Mr. Hartshorne again secured some of the plants, which were still in his possession at the time of his death. No. 49 was a bright scarlet on long stems, therefore The Herald favors its seed parent in every particular except that it has a longer stem and a brighter color. It was among the first carnations produced by Peter Olsem. The growth is somewhat on the order of Enchantress; very strong and a darker green with thinner grass; a much faster grower, producing fine large flowers on strong, stiff stems which develop much quicker than Enchantress. The plants make a good growth in the field; lift easily and establish themselves in a remarkably short time after lifting.

The Herald is winner over all scarlets the past two years at Cincinnati Flower Show, 1911; St. Paul Flower Show, 1912; Cleveland Flower Show, 1912. Scored 87 points St. Louis, 1912; scored 89 Chicago Florists' Club, 1912.

The Herald is an early, free and continuous bloomer; the most perfect carnation in every way: Long strong stem, strong absolutely non-bursting calyx, large full and well-built flowers, bright clear scarlet. Cuttings strong, well rooted. Guaranteed satisfactory in every respect. $12.00 per 100; $100 per 1000.

HOLIDAY TRADE SATISFACTORY.

Business for the week of Dec. 15-21 and over the holiday was very satisfactory. Very little stock was left on hands. An especially good selection of plants was exhibited and sold quickly. Poinsettias were probably the best ever raised here. Cut flowers were scarce, until about December 23, then they came in in fine shape and made good prices. Red carnations were the scarcest and only a few could be obtained, even at high prices. American Beauties were not overly good, even those offered at high figures. Killarneys, Lady Hillingdon, My Maryland, etc., sold at $3 a dozen, while Richmonds brought anywhere from $3 to $7 a dozen.

NOTES.

Harry Merritt of Irondequoit is growing some very choice Delight and White Wonder carnations. Some of the stems measure from 40 to 45 inches long and they are good strong stems too.

A surprise dinner was given by the employees at James Vick's Sons' establishment to William H. Dildine, secretary of the company, on December 24.

Christmas day was marked by the heavy amount of funeral work.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The mid-winter meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society will be held here January 16-17.

PLATTEVILLE, WIS.—W. A. Schaeffer, of the Platteville Floral Co., reports a fine Christmas trade, having sold out all his blooming plants and a large supply of cut flowers.

We wish to call your attention to the following:

The well-shaped Box Trees in Pyramids, Balls, Bush Form and all other clipped forms are not from Boskoop, but from Aalsmeer.

The very strong and healthy Ivies are not from Boskoop, but from Aalsmeer.

The Lilac, well-budded with very long stalks is not from Boskoop, but from Aalsmeer.

Let us know your requirements and we shall be pleased to quote you.

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

Dallas, Texas.

The Texas Seed & Floral Co. reports an increase of 75 per cent in the Christmas trade. Prices were practically the same. The supply of cut stock was inadequate. Both the supply and demand in bulbous flowers were large. The quality of stock was much better than last season. There was a marked increase in the call for American Beauties and poinsettias. Azaleas and cyclamen sold in increased quantities also. Trade conditions in Texas helped boom the Christmas sales. The Texas Seed & Floral Co.'s two stores, one a strictly cut flower shop, made this firm's business greater than last year when it had but one. Their cut flowers were all sold before they were received.

About That Z-Bar Eave Plate

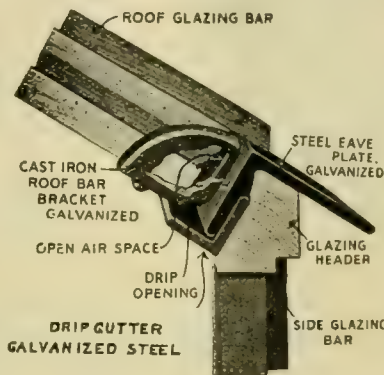

THIS Z-Bar Plate is our Angle Iron Eave Plate combined with an angle drip gutter.

The drip gutter is riveted to the eave plate, and the whole thing galvanized.

This Z-Bar Plate can be erected just as easily and quickly as if there were no drip gutter attached.

Forming a direct part of the eave, the way it does, there is no erection bother such as is the case with separate drip gutters hung below the plate.

Another important thing is its freedom from water pockets, which result in spill-overs.

The drip lead-off pipes really do lead off the drip.

We patented this Plate several years ago, but the growers did not begin adopting it extensively until within the last two years.

Now, we seldom sell a house without it.

You will find it fully illustrated and described in both our Supply Book and Commercial Greenhouse Catalog. We want you to have them both. Send for them.

We have an entirely new Iron Frame Construction that we are going to tell you about in the coming issues of the florist papers.

Only half the present number of rafters will be used, and half the number of columns.

20-inch glass will be used.

Double Glass Sash

Have Tomatoes on the market weeks ahead

Never mind the weather!

Your plants in hot-beds or cold-frames under Sunlight Double Glass Sash will not mind it

Between the two layers of glass in the Sunlight Double Glass Sash is an air space of $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch in thickness

Above the glass is winter weather—zero perhaps. Below the glass is warm earth and plants growing like May

The secret of it all, is that the air space between the two layers of glass being a non-conductor will not let the cold in or the heat out. It makes the Sunlight Double Glass Sash complete in itself. It needs no mats or boards. The only cover is the air sealed between the layers of glass.

You can have hot-beds and cold-frames with Sunlight Double Glass Sash far cheaper in the long run than your single layer sash with heavy, dark covers of mats or boards. You can save more than half the labor and worry and you can control your beds better and get earlier, stronger and far more profitable plants.

The Sunlight Double Glass Sash method comes right home to every gardener and florist in the country. It is good business to learn all about it.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Lilies.

The lilies for Easter should be brought into warm temperature right after the first of the year. A house of 60° at night should bring them into perfect condition for Easter when it occurs early as it does this year. Those that are in 4-inch pots should be potted in 6-inch, and we have found the best way to do this was to first place a crock in the bottom of the pot and cover with about an inch of soil, then place the 4-inch plant on this, filling in around the stem above the old ball. The lily always throws out roots at the base of the stem when the buds form, and if potted in this manner these roots will be in soil and materially aid the plant in perfecting the bloom. With these roots covered with soil the plant also makes a much better appearance. The soil in which they are potted should be a rich compost of about the same composition as is used in rose culture, and the plant should be firmly potted and well watered and placed in good light location where the plants will not get drawn. A plant 18 to 24 inches high when in bloom with the foliage thickly studded along the stem is the one most desired at Easter. Keep the aphids down all the time by constant fumigation. These little insects are the worst plague to the lily grower, for if they once get established on lilies they are very difficult to dislodge, so it is much better to give the plants a fumigation every week and thus guard against them than to wait until their presence is manifest and try to kill them. This is one of the most pronounced cases where "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Geraniums.

After the holiday trade there will be room enough to space out the geraniums and other bedding stock. The cuttings that were placed in flats, and the young stock in 2-inch pots, should be shifted to the 3-inch size and spaced on the benches so that a good growth is encouraged. As soon as well established in these pots the top can be cut off and another cutting obtained. All the young stock possible should be taken from the plants selected in the fall for propagating purposes, for all the cuttings from which it is expected to produce good sized plants should be in the propagating bench by February 1. Any rooted after March 1 will make small plants for bedding purposes. The best stock for late May and early June planting should be in 4-inch pots by April, that they may be well enough established by the middle of May to begin to flower, and should have at that time three or four good branches so that a succession of bloom is assured.

Rambler Roses.

Of all the exhibits made at the flower show in Boston a year ago last spring the Rambler roses attracted the most attention. The varieties of these beautiful plants have increased rapidly and they can now be had in all the shades of red and pink and also white. The single varieties have also been greatly improved and many of these make most beautiful plants. Every grower should have a few of these for Easter, and even if they do not sell they can be grown on for next year when a finer and larger plant will be had and the wood grown this year can be propagated and if planted outside will make nice plants. Plants grown in the field and lifted this fall will have to be started the first of the year to have them in bloom for Easter; pot-grown plants can be started two weeks later. They should be firmly potted in good rose soil, and placed in a cool house, one not running higher than 45° at night, and syringed often to soften the wood. Before the eyes start into growth the plants should be tied out into the shape they are to be grown. These plants can by a little ingenuity and care be trained into any shape desired. Many fancy as well as grotesque forms are now seen every year. To the inexperienced the round spreading plant should be the first attempted. Five or six stakes at the edge of the pot with the stems wound around and

Index to Advertisers,
Page 1472

Ready Reference Advs.,
Page 1473

Help and Situations Wanted,
Advertisements,

two or three arching over the center is the simplest form. Experienced growers have them in the shape of umbrellas, large balls, ships, and any form they desire. When the growths have got well started the plants should be moved into a temperature of 55° at night, and the syringing on bright days should be kept up to prevent insects from getting a foothold. By the middle of March the flowers should begin to show color and if they do not a little warmer temperature will be required to have them well in bloom for the first week in April. A regular rose temperature of 60° at night will be necessary, but the flowers are not of as good color nor do they last as well if they are unduly forced. A fine assortment of these include Crimson Rambler, Philadelphia Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Hiawatha and American Pillar, and in the Baby Ramblers, Crimson Baby, Jessie, Phyllis and Orleans.

PAINESVILLE, O.—Storrs & Harrison's gas well has given out and they are installing electricity as power and for lighting purposes. They have some fine rododendrons, boxwood and large palms in stock. Their greenhouse stock looks fine.

DAYTON, O.—Henry Zimmerman, for the last ten years with Chas. A. Bower, has purchased two acres of ground near Shiloh Springs of Thomas Belt. Mr. Zimmerman has been in possession since July and has remodeled the establishment which contains 4,000 square feet of glass. He will make a specialty of bedding plants. Mr. Zimmerman began with Mr. Bower when but ten years old. He is already thoroughly experienced in his line.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

L. Bomb Floral Co., Detroit.

That the L. Bomb Floral Co. of Detroit, Mich., has a store of which any florist might well be proud is amply attested by the accompanying illustrations. The pictures were taken on a Sunday afternoon by the architect's photographer and without the knowledge of Albert Pochelon, manager, who had not tidied up beforehand as is usually done before a picture is taken. The illustrations are all the more valuable therefore, because they show the store in its everyday condition.

The store is 32x60 feet and a stairway leads up to conservatory of the same dimensions, a unique arrangement. In the rear of the store is the shipping room and garage, 32x40 feet. Under this room is located the heating and cooling machinery, together with the carpenter shop. Under the store there is a basement with reserve ice boxes and work tables. The basement runs all the way under a glass-block sidewalk, giving plenty of light.

The conservatory above the store is of the famous Pierson-U-Bar construction. In the rear of this is the office and a show room for fancy dishes. Two more floors of the same dimensions, 32x40 feet, are just above. They are devoted to artificial goods, fancy supplies, etc.

The entire structure is steel-framed, with concrete floors and the roof is absolutely fireproof. It is provided with an electric push-button elevator service. Mr. Pochelon says: "You may turn the hose on at the top floor and wash down to the basement and the water will drain off everywhere." The store floor is in different shades of brown tile. Each tile is 6x9 inches with small inserts of rose leaves and flower designs. The ice boxes on the main floor are 5 feet deep and 32 feet long and are divided into three sections.

A Recent Debutante Ball.

A very costly debutante ball was given recently in one of our southern cities, and for originality, splendor and artistic beauty it was the wonder of all present. It far surpassed some of the elaborate private functions in the east in the matter of expense. A sum approximating three thousand dollars was expended on the decorations alone.

The keynote of the decoration was an Italian garden. Miniature arbors of grapes were used as wall coverings, the lattice arrangement being most generously covered with grapes, to which the guests helped themselves. This lattice and grape effect was most deftly handled. An immense fountain was guarded by a marble lion of St. Mark's, and real birds sang or chirped from hidden cages among the green bowers and trees. Orange trees were also used in goodly number and they were some of the choicest obtainable.

To complete the Italian garden effect pure white marble garden seats were arranged so the guests could see the play of the gold fish in the fountain. The tout ensemble was like a fairy tale made real. The consensus of opinion was that it was a wonderful product of the decorator's art as well as one of the most costly balls given.

THE CARNATION.

Feeding.

Feeding, or in other words the application of fertilizer, is an important factor that is before us in the care of the plants for the rest of the season. Up to the present time the fertilizer put into compost at planting time has been enough to sustain them and if they are working along satisfactorily, producing a steady crop of high grade flowers, then I would advise withholding any feeding for three or four weeks yet, which will carry us over the dark days of January, a period when plant growth is at a low ebb. The carnation is a plant that will give great results from a liberal treatment, but the character of the plant and its flower is of such a nature that they are easily abused and quickly show the effect of any treatment that is given them.

We can take, for instance, the flowers after they are cut and note how quickly they are affected by the condition in which they are placed—how very soon they respond to the coloring when it is put in the water for that purpose, also how quickly their fragrance is overcome by the smell of tobacco when the flowers are placed in a room where the “weed” is used. Consequently we can be governed to some extent by these circumstances in our work of applying fertilizers. Anything that has a tendency to promote a soft, rapid growth should be used with caution so as to guard against sleepy flowers. Fresh manure that is still throwing off fumes should not be used in any circumstances, because there is nothing that will cause the flowers to go to sleep quicker than to have the atmosphere of the house in which they are growing heavily charged with the fumes from fresh manure.

Another drawback to the use of fresh manure is that when it is put on the soil and given a watering it is very likely to form a crust which clogs up the surface and prevents the soil from drying out properly. We are coming to the time when the fertilizers used on our greenhouse crops will be either pulverized or in the concentrated form, thus doing away with the material in its raw state entirely. One great thing in favor of using manure in the pulverized form is that it is easy to apply, so that a light sprinkling can be put on the beds at different intervals as the plants show their need of it.

The use of concentrated and chemical fertilizers must be governed according to the conditions and the nature of the soil each grower has to deal with, which can only be arrived at by a close study of these principles that he has at hand. One form of chemical that may be very beneficial with a certain soil is very likely to be the adverse with another and instead of benefiting the growth of the plant is liable to harden its tissues and cause the growth to become too woody for continued active flower production.

The use of lime has been advised from time to time by a number of carnation growers, but this is also an ingredient that should be experimented with on the soil at hand before using it to a very large extent, because whereas some soils may be greatly enriched by its use just the opposite will be the case with others and instead of benefiting it will cause it to cake. The nature of the water that is being used will also have to be taken into consideration, owing to the fact that there may be an element there which is not favorable to the use of lime.

To sum up the whole problem of feeding the carnation we should therefore take these few facts into consideration: If the plants are in perfect health, bearing a continuous crop of high grade blooms of good color and texture, and you feel that the fertilizer put into the soil at planting time is not exhausted yet, then let well enough alone for a while. Also, if the plants are not well up in flowering shoots but have attained a grassy growth, the best thing is to go slow with the feed, because to enrich the soil for plants in this condition will be detrimental instead of beneficial. But if the flowers on plants that are in vigorous growth, are showing a tendency to run a little small, then it is a sign that the soil is becoming worked out and a little fertilizer will be beneficial.

At this season I am very much in favor of using the pulverized forms of the cattle manures applied in the form of a surface dressing, using just a light scattering at one time, following it up with another in about three weeks. This gives the surface roots of the plants a chance to work along steadily as well as keeps the soil open and sweet.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Dreer's Diamond Anniversary.

The seventy-five years from 1838 to 1913 have witnessed a phenomenal development in the industrial life of the United States, and a commercial concern that has passed through this period and yet retained the vigor of its youth must have been deeply endowed with the qualities that make for success. We are reminded by receipt of their "Garden Book" for 1913, that the firm of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., has reached its seventy-fifth anniversary. The Dreer company has passed through virtually the entire industrial development of the United States and it has kept pace with the rest of the country. This the firm justly attributes to its policy of dealing only in the best products grown and in giving each customer just what his money calls for.

The founder of the firm was the late Henry A. Dreer, a native Philadelphian. When twenty years old he began business with Henry Hirst. The latter did not remain long with the firm, however, and Mr. Dreer continued the business himself, his industry and intelligence early making him a power in the trade.

Ten years after its founding, or in 1848, the store was removed to larger quarters. In 1858 it was again moved and in 1863 another change was made, this time to its present location at 714 Chestnut street. In 1873, after building up his business from a modest concern to one of the most successful in the country, Henry A. Dreer died, leaving to his son, William F. Dreer, the task of further developing the house he had established. That the present head of the firm has held by the old traditions of square dealing and still kept in touch with the most advanced ideas of the day is evidenced by the company's continued prosperity and uninterrupted growth.

The mammoth warehouse is filled with stock used in the business and with onion sets and potatoes in cold storage. The first floor is devoted to the retail department, the sample rooms and the shipping department. The offices are in the front and the rear is used for the storage of flower and vegetable seeds. A large corps of girls are kept busy filling seed bags on the third floor. The firm's own printing press is located here and in the rear is the cleaning machinery, run by the same power. A seed-testing greenhouse is located on the roof.

The firm points with pride to its staff of specialists throughout the world who test its seeds especially to find which are best adapted to certain climates. Flower seeds and bulbs of the Dreer company have always been found of the best quality and of all varieties. Grass seeds are also a specialty. Many awards for seeds have been made to this house during its long life.

In 1873 the nursery and trial grounds were removed to Riverton, N. J., to escape the steady encroachments of the city, and here the principal greenhouses have since been located. Many thousands of square feet have been added to the glass area since the nursery was first located at this place and the trial grounds and all make this one of the most complete and up-to-date establishments of its kind in the world. Bedding plants, palms, ferns, roses, azaleas, aquatics, etc., are some of the products that have made Dreer's famous. Besides the Riverton place, other grounds are located at Riverview and Locust, N. J., the last named being the location of the new plant established not long ago.

The Late Henry A. Dreer.
Founder of the Firm Bearing His Name.

Flowers for Garden and Lawn.

Paper read before the Society of Iowa Florists, at the annual meeting at Des Moines, by the late J. T. Temple.

While convalescing from a serious surgical operation last year I made occasional trips to the villages and small towns nearby. One of the sights that attracted my attention was the similarity of the gardens. Red geraniums planted around the foundations of the residences or along the walks leading to the front doors and in some places a large round bed of red geraniums or a few shrubs misplaced in the center of the lawn was the usual order. The one who does the first planting in spring sets out red geraniums and immediately the town has scarlet fever. The neighbors imitate the leader, planting red salvias, red cannas or red geraniums. A noted critic and artist remarked, as a known fact, that the first thing that a young child notices is something red. An Indian savage wants a red blanket, but as they become educated and civilized they take to the lighter shades, white, pink, blue, etc.

To people of high strung nerves red has a psychological effect. A business man has some irritation in his business affairs, he goes home at noon, thermometer 95 to 100 degrees in the shade; as he passes along the walk to the house the scarlet flower beds make the weather seem hotter and the irritation becomes stronger, having the same effect on him as a red parasol on a bovine. The consequence is that if the meal is not ready on the table, a hasty word and probably others sometimes lead to something serious. Red looks good in masses not too large and when viewed from a distance. As red is the initial color, and always will be called for, I would advise the florists in the small towns to supply the demand, give the customer what is called for, but at the same time try to educate your patrons to a variety of color, the same as milliners do.

Just imagine how it would look if all the ladies wore red hats and the buildings were all painted red. The florist should be an educator, not an imitator. Some do not think so, but I think our vocation is empirical or experimental, so that we cannot have any set rules for growing and planting in our gardens and lawns. We need to observe conditions, environments, adaptability, etc., more in our out-door planting and cultivation. Variety is the spice of life. I would not recommend the florist to make his place a botanical garden but to get some of the new plants, test them for at least two seasons, and keep the best. Test the new cannas, heliotropes, lantanas, carnations, roses, hydrangeas. The Godfrey calla is a good thing. The double Marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, if planted out on bench or in a solid bed in the greenhouse, will bloom both summer and winter. Plant lots of them; it will save you sending for cut flowers to the commission men when short of carnations. They are also suitable for porch boxes and it makes a good blooming plant for the garden.

One of the best plants for the florist is the buddleia, commonly called fall lilac. This is not a new plant, as it has been known and cultivated for a long time, being introduced from China nearly a century ago. There are a number of species, but buddleia variabilis and its hybrids seem to be more common in cultivation. They have a somewhat straggling habit of growth but can be pruned to any shape. We have them growing in all manner of styles. They are pretty, trained in fan shape or grown on a trellis; they can be planted in porch boxes and vases and are also good as a bush on the lawn. They are very effective in any style of growth. We had them in bloom last March in the greenhouse from plants propagated in August from green cuttings, showing that they can be forced for Easter. They root easily from old wood cuttings, but the quickest way is to take the new growth, which will root as quickly as salvia splendens and cuttings can be taken any time you can get the new wood. Given plenty of water they will commence blooming soon after being set out in the ground, but are most profusely in bloom from August until frost, hence the common name, fall lilacs.

The individual flowers are small on a flattish spike, sometimes a foot long, and are somewhat of a drooping habit. They are highly scented and some of them are the color of the lilac, while others are a rosy violet of a pleasing shade. At the 1910 session of the Society of American Florists in Rochester, N. Y., in Highland Park, which Mr. Dunbar has made the Mecca of the progressive florist, and all who love choice and rare plants and shrubs, was a bed of Buddleia variabilis magnifica, and Buddleia veitchii magnifica, which was a magnet to quite a number of the visiting florists. The shrub is not reliably hardy, though for five years it lived with me with only a slight covering of soil around the roots, the tops dying to the ground, which does not make any difference as it blooms more freely on the young soft growth, particularly if given rich soil and plenty of water. Cut off the flowers as they become old and you will have lots of bloom all the season.

Another good plant is the snapdragon or antirrhinum. The pink variety is the favorite one and is more called for than those with white or yellow flowers. They make fine bedding plants if kept from going to seed, blooming from June until frost. Artemisia frigida with white foliage, a large solid bed of which planted on the lawn, with either a few red cannas or red geraniums or salvias, interspersed or bordered with dwarf scarlet salvias is a beautiful sight. It is also exquisite when bordered with plumbago lapantia and a center of plumbago capensis. A large bed of Rudbeckia Newmanni is a fine thing for the lawn, as it is hardy and will make a permanent bed, blooming from August until frost. Cassia falcata (variety Mrs. Temple) with yellow blossoms is good planted around a bed of red flowered cannas and also bronzed leaved cannas. I also wish to call your attention to Celosia plumosa as a bedding plant. Do not start your seed before the tenth of May; plant out about the first week in June and you will have a grand bed all summer. If plants are started too early and should once be neglected, some of them will become stunted and you will have an uneven bed. It is better to start them late and keep them growing. One of the surprises of this season is the new fancy pelargonium (Easter offering). Six plants set out the middle of May have been full of bloom ever since and at this date, August 28, one of them has over 20 large trusses of bloom. It has something of the markings of Pelargonium Victor. It will be planted and tested more thoroughly next year.

Vinca rosea or Madagascar periwinkle is also a good bedding plant, more used down east than in Iowa. There are also some good bedding annuals as the scarlet zinnia, salpiglossis, celosia or cockscombs, globe amaranthus, French marigolds, etc., and we should not forget to plant (in masses) the many hardy herbaceous plants, such as the perennial phlox, delphiniums, monardias, anemones, rudbeckias, pyrethrums and others too numerous to mention. Educate your patrons that there are many good plants for their gardens besides the ones most commonly grown and you will not have any surplus plants left at the end of the bedding season.

And now a few suggestions for ourselves. Are we, as Iowa florists, progressive? Do we study cause and effect in our planting? With the material we have, do we get the best effect in color and adaptability to location? Our customers often ask advice about planting, etc. Can we as leaders and teachers give it to them from experience or observation? I hope these suggestions will furnish food for thought and mutual improvement so that we will all have pleasure and profit in our vocation.

HAMILTON, O.—A bull stampeded in the street here recently, made for the flower store of Charles Gray, smashed in the doors and did considerable damage to the potted plants before being driven away.

HOLIDAY TRADE.

Good Increase Shown.

Further reports from cities throughout the country corroborate our review of the Christmas trade as published in our last week's issue. There are a few isolated instances where complaint is made, but taken all in all there was an increase of from about 10 to 50 per cent over the business done during the same season of 1911. This shows not only that the country is enjoying prosperity and a healthy growth but that people are beginning to have a finer appreciation of the florists' goods. Trade was hurt somewhat in the east by the heavy storm, but in other parts of the country the weather was ideal. Too warm for the popular conception of Christmas, but just right to make deliveries easy and there were no reports of freezing, although much stock was delivered unwrapped. The trade in general showed a marked increase in the call for plants, due partly, perhaps, to the rather high prices for cut stock in some places. However, plants seem to be growing more popular, anyway. Bulbous flowers were as a rule rather unpopular, but the usual cut stock went well as a rule. Especially was this true of red flowers. Carnations were short and high priced in many cities, but other stock was generally in ample supply.

orably with last year's. Artificial flowers are increasing in favor. There was an increased demand for flowering plants and decorative stock also sold well. Holly wreaths are as popular as ever, many thousands being used. Made-up baskets of plants sold well. The weather was mild.

GALESTON, TEX.—This was the largest Christmas business ever done here and, according to Mrs. M. A. Hansen, the increase over last season amounted to 35 per cent. Prices, especially for plants, were better than a year ago. The cut flower supply was ample except for red roses, which were very scarce. Both the supply of and demand for bulbous stock was light. The quality of stock this season was better than ever before and very little was lost. There was an increased call for Killarneys and Rhea Reids. Plants were greatly in demand, large azaleas especially selling well. Business was good generally. The weather was fine. All flowers were received in excellent condition, a fact never noted before.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Fifteen per cent is estimated as the increase in trade this season by Clarke Bros. Prices were slightly lower than in 1911. Growing plants were especially reduced in price, as the market was overloaded. The cut flower supply was ample, except possibly in red roses. Valley was in good supply and sold well. There were few Roman hyacinths or Paper White narcissi. Violets were in great demand and large quantities of California importations were disposed of.

RICHARD VINCENT, JR. AND FAMILY.

Richard Vincent Jr., with Mrs. Vincent, Their Three Sons and Daughter and Sixteen Grandchildren.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—This season's Christmas trade was greater by from fifteen to twenty per cent than last year's, in the opinion of the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. Prices were about the same, but were firmer. Large quantities of roses were shipped in to supply the demand. Carnations and violets were to be had locally. The supply of bulbous flowers was plentiful, as their popularity is decreasing. The quality of all stock compares favorably Flowering plants had first call, although some Lorraine begonias and cyclamen remained unsold Christmas night. Otaheite oranges made their appearance for the first time and readily found buyers.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—Total sales were greater by twenty per cent, according to a report by Clarke Bros. Prices were slightly better. The supply of all flowers was ample. Roman hyacinths were plentiful and in good demand. The quality compared favorably with last year's stock. Flowering plants sold in the order named: Poinsettias, cyclamen, azaleas, hyacinths, ericas. The Lorraine begonias did not prove popular. There was an increased demand for flowering plants generally, and for made-up arrangements. Lorraine and Cincinnati begonias seem to be going out of favor here. California red berries were scarce this year. The weather was fine.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. —This year's Christmas trade fell off fully one-third, according to Matthew MacNair, who says that while the retail prices were the same the wholesale prices were "outrageous." The supply of cut flowers was large enough to take care of the trade. There was no demand for bulbous stock. The quality of stock was good, comparing favorably with last year. There was a special call for violets. Plant sales fell far below those of a year ago. The heavy snow storm probably accounted for the poor trade, but business conditions generally had much to do with the decrease.

SEDALIA, MO.—The Archias Floral Co. reports an increase in all lines. The demand was better than ever for baskets and made-up work. All cut flowers brought good prices, although there was a surplus, except in carnations. There was an oversupply of Paper Whites, but Chinese lilies were short. The stock in general was the best yet, as the weather was ideal for blooming. Azaleas, poinsettias, begonias and ferns were all in good supply and sold well. Holly, bouquet green, wreaths and wreathing sold well. The weather was mild and dry.

NEWARK, N. J.—Business was about the same as a year ago and prices were unchanged except for carnations, according to H. C. Strobel & Co. The supply was equal to the demand. There was a good call for valley. The quality of stock compared favorably with that of last year. The sales of flowering plants increased. There were more sales this year, but the call was for lower priced goods as a rule. Where the customer paid from $3 to $10 in 1911 he paid from $3 to $5 this season.

BRAMPTON, ONT.—An increase of about five per cent is noted in this season's business by the estate of H. Dale. Prices were about the same. Carnations and American Beauty roses were not equal to the demand, but other flowers were in ample supply. The supply of and demand for bulbous flowers were about equal. The quality of stock was as good as a year ago. There is difficulty in supplying red flowering stock here when the demand is above normal.

NASHUA, N. H.—A twenty-five per cent increase in business is reported by August Gaedeke & Co. Prices were higher. The supply was sufficient. Bulbous flowers sold well but brought only the usual prices. The quality of all stock was better than usual, and there was no rubbish. There was an increased call for Beacon carnations, which were very scarce. Cyclamen and azaleas sold in increased numbers. Weather conditions were perfect.

SPOKANE, WASH.—This year's Christmas trade was as good as last, although the retail prices were lower. The supply of cut flowers was sufficient to meet all calls, but bulbous flowers were short. The quality was not so good as a year ago. There was an increased call for poinsettias in pans and baskets. Plants sold better this season, also. Cut flowers will have to sell at a lower price if the equilibrium between them and plants is maintained.

BANGOR, ME.—Twenty-five per cent more business is reported for Christmas by Adam Sekinger. Pinks were nearly double in price, but other stock was the same as a year ago. Carnations were scarce, but other cut flowers in ample supply. No bulbous flowers were to be had. The quality of stock was better than ever before. All plants sold well. Poinsettias in pans and azaleas were the best. There was a large demand for all bright flowered stock. Ferns sold well.

TAMPA, FLA.—Business showed an increase of twenty per cent this Christmas season, says the Tampa Floral Co. The prices were the same as last year. There were plenty of roses and violets, but carnations were short. Both the supply and demand for bulbous flowers were satisfactory. Flowers did not have the keeping qualities of last season, owing to the warm weather. There was a great increase in the sale of decorative stock.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The William Blackman Floral Co. reports a greater sale of Christmas stock. Prices were the same as a year ago. The cut flower supply was equal to the demand. Bulbous flowers were more popular than heretofore. The quality of stock was better this year. There was a marked increase in the call for American Beauties and in poinsettia plants. All plants sold in increased quantities and the quality was better.

ABERDEEN, S. D.—Business was greater this year by about 25 per cent and prices were higher, according to Richard Strohmeier. Carnations were short but other stock was plentiful. There was an ample supply of bulbous flowers. All stock was of good quality, better than last year. Everything sold well. There was a large demand for flowering plants on account of the high prices asked for cut stock. Roses and carnations went the best.

HALIFAX, N. S.—Sales were greater this season than last, says F. W. Killiam. Prices were about the same. Carnations were short, but other cut stock plentiful. There was a good supply of bulbous stock. The quality of this season's stock was better than a year ago. Flowering plants sold more readily. There was an especially brisk demand for fancy baskets filled with decorative and flowering plants.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—A twenty-five per cent increase in Christmas trade is reported by Mills, the Florist. Prices were higher, though the supply was equal to the demand. The bulbous flower supply and demand were both good also. Quality was better than a year ago. Richmond roses and American Beauties sold especially well this season. Both flowering and decorative plants sold better.

PETERSBURG, VA.—This season's Christmas trade was greater than last year's and prices were better, says Wm. S. Young. The supply of cut flowers was not equal to the demand. Bulbous flowers were ample and the demand fair. There was a marked increase in the call for poinsettias. Flowering plants generally sold more readily. The stock this season was better than a year ago.

OGDEN, UTAH.—This season's trade was greater than last, with prices about the same. F. J. Hendershot & Son say there were plenty of roses, but carnations were short. The quality was as good as a year ago. Plant sales were about the same. More roses are home-grown, as there has been a great increase in glass area, especially for this flower.

POMONA, CALIF. Business was fifteen per cent better than a year ago. This is the estimate of O. Roessner, who says that prices were the same. The supply of cut flowers was insufficient. There was little call for bulbous flowers. The quality of the season's stock was inferior to that of

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS.

In the Greenhouse of E. P. Hostetter, Manheim, Pa., November 30, 1912.

SIoux FALLS, S. D.—The sale of roses, carnations and plants was 30 per cent greater than last year, with prices about the same, according to J. Tossini. The supply was larger than the demand. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths sold well. The quality of the stock this season was better than a year ago. There was an increased demand for Boston ferns and all kinds of plants.

1911. Carnations sold best. All flowering plants sold well.

DULUTH, MINN.—An increase of one-third is noted in this season's trade by John J. LeBorlous. The prices were about the same as in 1911. The supply of cut stock was equal to the demand. There was little call for bulbous stock. The quality compared favorably with the stock sold a year ago.

WAUKEGAN, ILL.—The trade increased 25 per cent this season, says Theo. Meyer. Prices of cut flowers were one-fourth higher. The supply was ample. The call for bulbous flowers was fair. The quality of this season's stock was about like that of last year. More flowering plants were sold.

LEXINGTON, KY.—The Christmas trade, says Miss Fannie D. White, was all any one could expect. Plants of all kinds and cut flowers as well sold without trouble. Miss White sold an entire house of 2,000 poinsettias.

BALTIMORE, MD.—This year's business was greater than in 1911, according to Halliday Bros. Prices were about the same. The supply was equal to the demand. Plants sold in increased numbers.

SANTA CRUZ, CALIF.—Sales and prices this year were about the same as last, says W. E. King. The supply of cut stock was not equal to the demand. Bulbous flowers were short also.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Every one here seems to have done a good business. The weather was ideal, more like Easter than Christmas.

Chicago Housing Problem.

To further the work of housing reform in Chicago, the City Club has offered 3 prizes amounting to $600 in all in a competition for the laying out of a scheme of development for residential purposes of a quarter section of unoccupied land in the city. The program for the competition has been drawn up by the Illinois Chapter of the American Institute of Architects and is addressed particularly to landscape architects, engineers and sociologists. Recognizing the hodge podge nature of the city's growth in the past and desiring to correct this state of affairs in future additions, it has been decided that the area shall not be precisely located, but an imaginary or assumed site as follows:

"The site comprises a quarter section of land assumed to be located on the level prairie about eight miles from the business district. The tract is without trees or buildings and is not subdivided. The surrounding property is subdivided in the prevailing gridiron fashion. It is assumed that within a mile of the site are to be found numerous scattered instances and several groups of ordinary frame and brick houses such as prevail on the southwest, the west and the northwest outlying sections. The site is served by street car lines on two sides, and there is a possibility of street car lines on the other two sides.

"Each competitor will submit two drawings: First a plan, drawn to the scale of 80 ft. to the inch, showing the streets as proposed to be laid out in respect to direction, width, grass plots for gardens or plantations of trees along them; size and location of lots, location of dwellings," business buildings, etc. The second will be a birdseye perspective of the area or some proportion of it in the proposed developed condition. Twelve hundred and eighty families is the limit of population for the quarter section.

A jury of five will make the awards. The drawings are to be delivered to the office of the City Club, 315 Plymouth court, Chicago, at or before noon of March 3, 1913, and the awards will be announced on or before March 10. Books and pamphlets describing the progress of the garden city and garden suburban movement, especially in Great Britain and Germany, are placed on sale by the club to entrants.

OBITUARY.

John T. Temple.

John T. Temple, pioneer florist of Davenport, Ia., and one of the best known men in the trade, died January 4. Although apparently in good health, Mr. Temple had had frequent attacks of heart trouble. It was while attending the funeral of William Day, an old friend and brother Odd Fellow, and taking part in the services of the local Odd Fellows over the body of the departed member, that the end came to Mr. Temple. The obsequies were nearly finished and the coffin was being lowered into the grave when Mr. Temple fell to the ground. Members of the lodge who had been participating in the service hurried to his aid. Dr. W. F. Hunt, who was present, lent his assistance, but Mr. Temple passed away almost instantly.

The Late John T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.

John T. Temple was born in New York city in 1844. He was of Scotch and English parentage and came from a family of florists, his father and both his maternal and paternal grandfathers having been gardeners and florists in England. As a lad he was early initiated into the flower business, selling cut flowers on the streets of New York city. He sold the first bouquets at the opening of the Academy of Music about 1855. In the year 1859 Mr. Temple started in business with his father in Davenport, Ia. This was the pioneer florist's firm in that city, and there Mr. Temple continued as a successful florist and nurseryman to the day of his death. He was the first to use steam-heated greenhouses in the state of Iowa and was an authority of high standing on garden and other cultivated plants in this country.

In organizations pertaining to the trade, Mr. Temple was actively interested. At the time of his death he was secretary of the Tri-City Florists' Association, which covers Davenport, Ia., Moline and Rock Island, Ill. During the period 1902 to 1906 and again from 1907 to 1908, Mr. Temple was a director of the Florists' Hall Association. He was also vice president of this organization from 1910 to the time of his death. Mr. Temple was a charter member of the Society of American Florists and it is indicative of his unswerving interest that he missed but one of the annual meetings of the society since its organization in 1885. This was the Baltimore meeting in 1911, when illness prevented his attendance. He was present at the Chicago meeting last year. He was the first Iowa vice-president of the national organization and for three years, 1889-91, he was a member of its executive committee. He was ever a willing worker in the cause of floriculture and had a large store of practical knowledge and experience to apply when needed.

Mr. Temple was prominent in lodge work. He belonged to the Masonic order, was a charter member of Davenport Lodge No. 10, Knights of Pythias, and was active in I. O. O. F. work, both in local chapters and in state councils. During the last years he held several offices in the state organizations.

In 1868 Mr. Temple was married to Miss Josephine Ahern, of Davenport, who died in 1906. Two sisters, Mrs. Joseph Gayman and Mrs. Louisa Downs, of Davenport, survive.

The funeral was held on Tuesday from the home of Mrs. Louisa Downs, with services at the Trinity cathedral, the Very Reverend Marmaduke Hare officiating. The remains were laid to rest in Pine Hill cemetery.

[The data herein regarding Mr. Temple's birthplace differ from those given in other publications and are taken from his own account, written in 1903.—Ed.]

Belgium Flower Trade.

Conditions in the horticultural industries [of Belgium] would have been more favorable if the excessive drought had not caused considerable damage and contributed to the partial paralysis of these industries. The demand for azaleas was still stronger in 1911 than in 1910 and the prices obtained were considered remunerative. It appears that the demand for Belgian azaleas in Germany and Austria is continually increasing. The demand for bay trees was regular, although there seemed to be a scarcity of those of larger dimensions, and for these varieties there seems to be a tendency toward a decrease in prices.

The raising of begonias and gloxinias turned out to be unsuccessful, although the export trade with all European countries showed a continual increase. Statistics show that the total quantity of plants shipped by the Terneuzen Canal was 1,734 tons, as against 1,473 tons in 1910. The orchid trade was satisfactory, and certain varieties attained high prices; even the cypripediums, a quality that had been more or less abandoned, are once more in demand. The demand for cut flowers, and particularly for orchids, is increasing from year to year, and at one time last year it was impossible to satisfy the demand for them. The export trade is now principally with England, France, United States, and the Netherlands, orders from France being particularly numerous.

Alabama State Horticultural Society.

The Alabama State Horticultural Society will hold its next meeting January 23-25, 1913, at Bay Minette. The program committee has made a strong and successful effort to prepare an unusually good program for the January meeting. All phases of horticultural work will be thoroughly discussed by men of broad experience along these lines. The full program of the meeting will appear soon.

ENGLISH CONDITIONS.—A prominent horticulturist writes, December 7: "Trade is wonderfully good in this country and that helps the florist growers."

Herman H. Ritter Bankrupt.

Herman H. Ritter, Dayton, O., florist, recently filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court. He lists his liabilities as $24,041.02 and assets $39,164.75. His unsecured indebtedness, according to his schedule, is $7,061.78. Real estate valued at $30,000 but mortgaged to the extent of $15,000, is listed among the assets. The stock and fixtures of his two places of business are valued at $1,500.

Society of American Florists.

President Farquhar has appointed George Asmus, Chicago, a member of the National Flower Show Committee for a full term of six years, to succeed J. A. Valentine, whose term expired December 31, 1912.

American Rose Society.

The prize list for the coming exhibition as part of the National Flower Show has been issued. There will be additional special prizes. The annual bulletin for 1912 will be an interesting document. This record of events of the society is steadily in demand by libraries and students. The correspondence up to this date shows that interest is already alive by the growers of roses to make good in New York. No flower show would be complete unless the roses were there in full force. These flower shows are very effective as trade getters in this wise:

The fame of them goes broadcast. In the city of New York within a radius of twelve miles from the location of the Grand Central Station, where the show is to be held, are 5,000,000 people, and to cultivate the taste of this great population it is necessary to hold exhibitions. There is a place in popular favor for the small roses. The rambler rose is becoming more and more in evidence the country over. During the growing season this class of roses, if you look for them, you will find frequently in the small door yards of the cities. They certainly look pretty.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

Publicity in Flower Trade.

"Holiday Flowers will be Costly," is the headline displayed in the New York Herald for Sunday, December 22, 1912, to a half column article, stating that prices will be raised 50 per cent over those of preceding Christmas prices; that the entire stocks with a few minor exceptions of all plant growers within easy reach of the metropolitan wholesale dealers are exhausted, and that there is no possibility of another cutting reaching the market before Christmas.

A prominent wholesaler was given as authority for this and a lot more, all of which was detrimental to the flower trade of New York city. When publicity was brought up in Chicago, I with a number of others expected a real publicity campaign, headed by the S. A. F., with all the local clubs and associations as allies. A vigorous handling of the press of the United States from a positive point of view and a strict censorship over all negative matter, such as the above, was hoped for.

Our trade is developing in spite of our lethargy, but other business has developed, one hundred, two hundred, yes, some of them five thousand fold, through the aid of the press. There is no other one business in the world that can adapt itself to press manipulation as well as ours and an up-to-date newspaper man assisted and advised by the good live wires we have on our various publicity committees would earn his salary ten times over.

If the S. A. F. is not able to finance such a proposition, and presuming that such a man could be employed for say $3,000.00 per annum, with an additional $2,000.00 for sundry expenses, I will be one of five hundred to give ten dollars a year toward maintaining such a campaign for at least five years, and I am sure there are 499 others in the S. A. F. who will do the same.

This is not decrying the present publicity methods. It is the one thing we can not have too much of and the right kind of a newspaper man could be a great help toward making these local attempts successful. Local clubs could no doubt be induced to contribute toward such a campaign and I am sure our Lancaster County Florists' Club would be right in line with its contribution.

Parcels Post Seems Successful

If the first three days of the parcels post may be taken as a criterion the new system of government delivery of packages will be a great success. Judging by Chicago alone the innovation is going to prove extremely popular and seedsmen and others will be greatly benefited once it has been thoroughly tested and such minor changes as may be necessary are instituted.

The delivery began January 1, a holiday, and naturally business houses did not take advantage of the new law. Nine hundred and seventy-seven packages were mailed at Chicago for outbound points that day. The next day the number jumped to 46,720 and the next to 65,438. All these packages were mailed from the Chicago post office and there is no record of those received to be delivered in the city. Ten of the packages mailed on January 1 were insured and on January 2 the number reached 622. The next day 1,002 packages were insured.

"The system is here to stay," said a post office official on the fourth day after the service was inaugurated, "and it is going to grow by leaps and bounds. We have found our regular force and equipment sufficient to cope with the situation except that more window clerks were necessary. The tests in connection with the deliveries by express, although in the majority of cases more than favorable to the post office department, were not always fair to the government. In one case when the express package was sent from Washington to New York, special automobiles were called into service by the express company, to rush it through as quickly as possible. The government, however, refused to enter into any competition and only the every-day facilities were brought into use."

Bees and Flower Color.

In the old days when everybody was intent on discovering additional proofs in support of the Darwinian theory, it was shown how admirably bees and flowers were adapted to each other to secure cross pollination, by the assumed fact that when the bees set out on their morning expeditions they picked out a color that harmonized with their state of mind and obstinately refused to visit flowers of any other hue during the day. All of which would be, as Horace Greeley used to say, "interesting if true." As a matter of fact, the bee, though supposed to stick to her particular bee line of blossoms doesn't do anything of the kind, according to a writer in the American Botanist, as anyone who will visit a garden of multi-colored flowers may easily discover for himself. If bees are found to be working on flowers of a single color, there are other reasons for it than the hue of the blossoms. If, for instance, a plant with yellow flowers happens to be producing abundant nectar, the flowers are likely to be well patronized by the insects, but when no species with marked nectar flow is blooming the bees visit any likely flower within range. Nor is the bee's reputation for favoring blue and purple flowers sustained in the flower garden, however much it may appear to be when bits of colored paper smeared with honey are substituted for flowers. The bees visit the blossoms having the most nectar. When one of these insects visits a flower and finds plenty of nectar, it is likely to continue its visits to such flowers, and it is doubtless in this way that the bee's reputation for adhering to a single kind of flower while gathering nectar, has been earned. The bee is a saving creature and wastes no more time in flight than necessary; therefore, when it finds flowers of one kind near together it visits them all in preference to searching for fresh fields. In this way the advantage to plants of producing flowers in groups or clusters is explained. It is said that all the highest types of flowers are in clus-

CARNATIONS PLENTIFUL.

The New Year's trade was exceptionally brisk and the market was pretty well cleaned up at noon. The one good feature about it all was that there was very little inferior stock left when the stores closed at noon, practically everything that was saleable having been disposed of. Trade was good the latter part of last week but toward the close the buying was rather light. The stormy weather affected the market considerably the opening of the week with the result that there was plenty of stock of all kinds to be had. Carnations are more plentiful and are now sold in large lots at greatly reduced prices. Roses are becoming more scarce but there is still plenty of stock to meet the demand, especially of Killarney and White Killarney. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst and Prince De Bulgarie are having a good call and bring the best prices. American Beauty roses are moving freely at good figures and there is no surplus to speak of. Orchids are in good supply but gardenias are still scarce and what few are arriving are eagerly taken by the local buyers at $3.00 and $4.00 per dozen. Violets are meeting with very slow sale and can be seen on the counters in good supply at nearly all the stores that handle them. Sweet peas are plentiful and the same can be said of Paper White narcissus. Lily of the valley is about equal to the demand. Stevia, especially the better grades, is bringing better prices but the demand for tulips, Roman hyacinths and Trumpet Majors is none too brisk. Some fine mignonette is now being offered but in no great quantities. Boxwood has been in brisk demand since the holidays. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. The storm was as bad on Tuesday as it was the day before with no improvement in trade. While there is plenty of stock to go around at present it is none too plentiful and would be exceedingly short if demand was at all brisk.

NOTES.

George Perdikas entertained his entire store force, consisting of ten employees, at a splendid dinner at one of the popular eating houses in this city on New Year's day in appreciation of their valuable services rendered during the holidays. The table was beautifully decorated with the choicest of flowers for the occasion which is quite often overlooked at a gathering of this kind. The happy crowd also enjoyed an automobile ride at their employer's expense.

The John C. Moninger Co. will furnish the material for James Prenicka's new range, consisting of about 50,000 square feet of glass, which he will erect at Gross Point in the near future. It is understood that Mr. Prenicka and V. Bezdek, proprietors of the Northwestern Floral Co., will dissolve partnership in the near future, the latter to retain possession.

Joseph Ziska was confined the past week with a severe cold but is again on duty at the store. His son, Joseph, Jr., is building up a good trade in supplies. He says that their holiday trade was so brisk that he was obliged to work overtime for several months.

At Peter Reinberg's store Killarney and White Killarney roses are heading the bill this week, although the cut of stock in general is equal to the demand. Tim Matchen says that his firm is just coming on with a new crop of American Beauty roses.

F. O. Franzen, the enterprising Summerdale avenue florist, is advertising extensively in the north side street cars. If this kind of advertising pays he is destined to be one of the "big fellows" soon.

W. S. Bell, of Lexington, Ky., who was recently with H. W. Buckbee at Rockford and with Chas. A. Samuelson during the holidays, is seriously considering again going into business for himself. He is now looking for a suitable location.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant Thursday evening, January 9, at 8 p. m. when the installation of officers for the present year will take place.

Edw. L. Martin, Mrs. Margaret Thorpe Flint Evans' son, has accepted a position as traveling salesman with the Chicago Carnation Co., starting out on his first trip this week.

Frank Williams, of the Atlas Floral Co., who has been seriously ill for some time past, is progressing favorably, but Mrs. Williams is now confined with a severe cold.

S. A. Jamieson, who is representing the Geo. M. Garland Co. in the northwest, writes that his permanent business address is 826 Plymouth building, Minneapolis, Minn.

John Mangel, the Palmer House florist, had several large hotel decorations for New Year's eve which called for a large amount of stock.

Mrs. W. Burmeister has gone to Bermont, Fla., with her two children to spend the winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kreutz.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago will be held at the Art Institute Tuesday, January 14, at 3 p. m.

The Raedlein Basket Co. started 1913 right by booking an order January 1 for an assortment of 2,000 baskets.

The E. C. Amling Co. celebrated its second birthday in its present quarters this week.

The boys played baseball on the lake front January 2 and the grass was yet green.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is certainly cutting some fine orchids and the stock that is now seen at the store is a sight to behold. Otto W. Frese says that home grown violets, especially his firm's Glencoe brand, are moving quite readily, although trade in general is none too lively. Mr. Frese is accusing Tim Waters of the supply department of dyeing the firm's pet cat a bright russet red last Sunday. Mr. Waters claims to be innocent of the charge so John Enders must be the guilty party.

E. E. Pieser says that the demand for boxwood since the holidays at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store has been in proportion almost as brisk as it was before Christmas. He adds that ferns will not advance any in price at his establishment but that the quotations now in effect will be good for the remainder of this season.

H. C. Wulbrandt, proprietor of the Globe Greenhouses, left this week for Florida and Cuba on a combined business and pleasure trip. During his absence the store will be in charge of his wife who is a practical business woman and one capable of managing a large establishment.

Mrs. Paul Kreuger renewed old acquaintances in the local market this week and was indeed a welcome visitor. Mrs. Kreuger was formerly bookkeeper for her father, George Reinberg.

F. W. Nelson and his large force of assistants were quite busy at the Geo. Wittbold Co.'s store in Buckingham place on New Year's Day with funeral work and hotel decorations. Fred Wittbold and Henry Neve were on the sick list the greater part of the week.

N. J. Wieter says that Wieter Bros. received their first Easter order this week, which is indeed very early. The customer who bought heavily from this firm during the holidays was so well pleased with his stock that he placed his Easter order well in advance.

Percy Jones added more floor space this week to his already large store and now claims to have a larger floor area than any other establishment of its kind in the city. He is now having a special sale on chiffons and ribbons.

The A. L. Randall Co. is making some more changes at its store, the principal one being the removal of the office to the third floor. The traveling men are making preparations to start out, W. W. Randall being the first one to leave.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is showing a fine line of seasonable stock, especially Killarney roses. Law Bros., of Ottawa, are shipping in some extra fancy Lawson carnations now.

Hoerber Bros. are entering upon their fourth year in the wholesale cut flower business. The year which has just closed has been a most successful one for them.

William Wienhoeber who now does the buying in the market for the Ernst Wienhoeber Floral Co. says that his firm's holiday trade was a record breaker.

John Kruchten's home grown gardenias are in brisk demand by the local trade. Carnations of good quality are now seen at this store in quantity.

Henry Wittbold had the decorations at the Chicago Club on New Year's Day which called for 2,500 Richmond roses and a large quantity of greens.

C. Clemenson arranged the table decorations at the South Shore Country Club on New Year's, which helped swell the day's receipts considerably.

Frank M. Smith, of Smith & Fettes, Cleveland, O., en route to Los Angeles, Calif., was the guest of C. L. Washburn here on January 4.

A. Henderson & Co.'s traveling representatives are all out on the road with the exception of D. P. Roy, who will start out shortly.

Erne & Klingel are supplying their customers with a fine grade of Killarney roses and report a brisk demand for fancy stelia.

Andrew J. O'Leary, formerly with the retail firm of Jones & Russel, Cleveland, O., is in the city seeking employment.

A. C. Kohlbrand received a postal this week from Leonard Kill who is now located at Ocean Park, Calif.

D. F. Hawkes, of Wheaton, is shipping some fine single violets to Percy Jones this winter.

Welland & Risch report business as exceptionally good with no surplus of stock whatever.

PRICES SOMEWHAT LOWER.

With summer heat one day, a blizzard the next and rain following, we are certainly having some queer weather. Flowers are coming in much stronger than heretofore, which is slightly reducing prices in the wholesale market. Carnations are the leaders at present, while roses are running a good second. Paper Whites are cleaning up daily, few being thrown away, which is very much the opposite of last year. Violets are rather scarce, as are also yellow roses. Lilac is coming in strong in both quality and quantity. The growers are reporting heavy shipments for the immediate future, which will be somewhat of a relief to the retailers.

NOTES.

Morris Stein, formerly manager of Lorch & Hoffmeister's store on Smithfield street, is leaving for St. Paul, Minn., where he intends to locate permanently. Walter McCalley, with the A. W. Smith Co., will take the position vacated by Mr. Stein.

Jos. M. Jones, of the Pittsburgh Tree & Seed Co., has added a line of cut flowers to his business. Mr. Jones has leased 65 acres of land in Robinson township, which he intends to devote to the growing of such outside flowers as asters, snapdragons, Canterbury bells and dahlias.

F. H. Westhoff, of De Haven, nearly had his roses frozen out Saturday night, the railroad company getting away with his car of coal, but Mr. Westhoff managed to get one from another source, saving his stock, which, by the way, is coming on very finely.

Geo. Crosby, foreman at R. J. Daschbach's greenhouses, who broke his kneecap December 21, is still confined to bed, but expects to be on crutches in two weeks.

DEMAND LIGHT SINCE HOLIDAYS.

New Year's has passed and we enter 1913 with stock of all kinds plentiful and but little demand. American Beauty roses and violets had the call for January 1. Carnations and roses are plentiful but with the prospects of cool and dark weather stock will in all probability shorten up. Receptions and balls during the past few weeks helped somewhat to move the stock. Sweet peas and violets are quoted a little lower and sell fairly well.

NOTES.

At all the wholesale houses an abundance of stock was seen. Many of the incoming carnations are sleepy and it seems that they have made St. Louis the dumping place for split carnations.

The St. Louis Florists' Club meets next Thursday. Some new applications will be voted on and Christmas business will be talked over.

C. Young & Sons Co. had the decorations at the Imperial ball. Several hundred American Beauty and Killarney roses were used.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.'s automobile delivery is a very great help in this firm's growing trade.

The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is receiving some choice consignments of white and pink sweet peas.

The Mullanphy Flower Co. was a heavy buyer of carnations and roses during the last week.

Miss Matilda Waldmann had a splendid holiday trade. Her immense stock of plants sold well.

Otto Sanders had a good holiday business. His trade is select and requires great taste.

C. C. Sanders reports good holiday trade with increased sales of all kinds of plants.

Alexander Waldbart & Sons had a good trade for New Year's.

C. A. Kuehn had a fine stock of flowers for New Year's.

Ostertag Bros. were busy with New Year watch parties.

The Foster Floral Co. did a big business New Year's.

The Retail Florists' Association will meet January 19.

PRICES TAKE DROP.

Since the close of the holidays market conditions have undergone quite a change. Prices have come down to a normal level. The supply of American Beauties easily takes care of the demand. Some very fine Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Brides are coming in. While they are selling up in a way they are not finding the market their quality warrants. The carnation supply is very heavy and at present really more than the requirements. The cut consists of fair numbers of each color. Practically all the stock is very fine. Easter lilies and callas have been proving good property. The call on violets, valley and orchids has fallen off considerably. Offerings in the bulbous line include narcissi, romans, jonquils and freesia. Many good poinsettias are still coming into the market. In green goods conditions are different. All the receipts are cleaning up. During the past week much more plumosus might have been used.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell offered the first daffodils and freesia this year. Mr. Critchell is also getting excellent callas from Dan Ruttle at Latonia.

The Covington Seed Company of Covington, Ky., has entered the retail field there. They have opened a store on Madison avenue.

P. J. Olinger and wife have been spending the past week with relatives in Chicago.

L. H. Kyrk was confined to his home the first part of this week with a bad cold. H.

NEW YEAR'S BUSINESS GOOD.

The New Year's trade was more brisk than for several years. New Year's eve entertainments gave all the florists plenty of business. The day itself was far better than last year. Stock was plentiful with a slight reduction in prices. Several newly elected officials took office January 1, which called forth a big lot of flowers. Funeral work the last part of the week was also good.

NOTES.

All along the line the story has been, "trade was better than last year, and very little loss in delivery."

Out of town deliveries were very satisfactory. For the suburban trade within thirty miles all deliveries by the larger florists were made by special messenger, and the express companies were not depended on.

The fall of snow the last two days has made fair sleighing in the city on residence streets. The drop in temperature warns us that from now until the last of March we may probably expect winter weather.

The Buffalo Florists' Club will hold its regular meeting on Tuesday, when the last flower show business will be settled up.

Daffodils and tulips are on sale at S. A. Anderson's, of his own forcing and of fine quality. BISON.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Henry Smith has the material on the ground for two new American Beauty rose houses each 27 x 300 feet.

YEAR'S BUSINESS GOOD.

Business has been good the past year, although prices of flowers have not gone up in proportion to coal and wages. The business both for Christmas and New Year's was perhaps the best in years. The weather was mild, and the usual worry over late or frozen shipments was eliminated. Stock was unusually good, as very few carnations or roses were held over. Richmond roses were far short of the demand. Paper Whites and stevia were plentiful. Carnations were quite plentiful, but of course the reds were far short of the demand. There was little in the novelty line besides sweet peas, calandulas, mignonette, and baby primroses. Plant growers all report an increased sale of cyclamen, primroses, hyacinths, ramblers, etc. American Beauties were in good supply and condition. Killarneys, both pink and white, were in full crop with most growers and although unusually large shipments arrived, everything with the exception of a few Whites cleaned up. Since the holidays the weather has been somewhat darker and stock is not so plentiful, but the demand has been strong and steady in all lines. The weather has turned decidedly colder the past few days and shipments are late and all require extra care in wrapping.

NOTES.

— Wallbridge, formerly with the J. M. Gasser Co.'s wholesale store, has severed his connection with this firm and gone to New York city, where he is to take charge of a retail store.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange reports the best year since it started in business. The holiday trade in particular was very satisfactory.

The state examiner and an assistant will be in Cleveland in the near future to examine all greenhouse foremen for license.

The automobile show, January 4-11, will be well worth seeing on account of the decorations alone. C. F. B.

Davenport, Ia.

BIGGEST TRADE YET.

The Christmas rush is over and business this year was without doubt the best ever experienced here, with nearly enough stock to meet all demands with the exception of carnations, which for some reason failed to make good for Christmas. However, there will be plenty from now on. Every thing in the way of a flower sold. Prices were about the same as last year. There was a better call for blooming plants this year. Azaleas and poinsettias were in the lead. Few ferns and fewer palms were sold. More made-up stock was sold than ever before. In cut flowers anything in red was at a premium. Violets and sweet peas were in great demand. Paper Whites were sold out, but Romans were rather a drag. A few white mums were still seen around Christmas. The down-town flower shops made a far better window display than usual, and attracted no little attention. The local wholesale groceries handled a better grade of holly than that received from the wholesale florists' supply houses. Dealers in evergreen trees claimed they sold 25 per cent more than last year. The weather was very summer-like, making deliveries an easy matter.

CLUB MEETING.

The Tri-City Florists' Club met at the home of Wm. Goos of Bettendorf, Ia., on the evening of December 19. Owing to the nearness of the holidays very few of the members were present and only routine matters were discussed. The boys found Mr. Goos' greenhouses well kept and full of stock in first-class shape, the roses being exceptionally well grown. After a fine hot supper and an hour spent socially the members adjourned. T. E.

Washington.

BUSINESS BRISK.

Business is still moving briskly. Prices are about the same in roses but carnations dropped immediately after Christmas. The New Year's trade was very satisfactory.

NOTES.

Geo. H. Cooke made the large floral anchor that was placed on the coffin of the late Ambassador Whitelaw Reid. It was made of white carnations with a purple chain of violets. This rested on a base of green Magnolia leaves and Woodwardia ferns, with each corner filled in with white Killarney roses. The anchor was draped with a large English flag. The order was received at the British embassy here by wireless from the ship.

Edward Dick, employed by Wm. H. Ernest, was struck by an automobile last Saturday. He was taken to the hospital and reports say he is doing very well.

The storm of last Friday morning did considerable damage to the establishment of Theo. Diedrick.

Geo. C. Shaffer has moved to his new store just across the street from the present one.

Wm. H. Ernest is just recovering from a severe attack of lumbago.

G. C. D.

Wichita, Kas.

Taken altogether the Christmas trade this year was very satisfactory. The trade began with the call for evergreen and holly. The higher price asked for evergreen rope for the last few years has cut down its use more than one-half. There was about the same quality of holly used as heretofore, some good stock on the market and some very poor. There was a good sale for holly and boxwood wreaths. Mistletoe, from Oklahoma mostly and of fine quality, retailed for 25 cents a pound. The demand for good blooming Christmas plants was the best ever, and the quality of stock offered in Lorraine begonias, cyclamen, Primula obconica, azaleas and poinsettias was very good with the supply equal to the demand. There was quite an increase in the sales of made-up baskets of plants. In cut flowers the trade was about as usual for Christmas. High prices had to be paid for stock and the retailer had to ask high prices also. Good roses in pink and white brought $3.00 a dozen, with reds selling at $4.00 to $5.00. American Beauties brought from $6.00 to $12.00 a dozen. The weather conditions were ideal. This simplified greatly the always serious problem of deliveries. The prospects seem good for a continued good winter season for the trade.

Mentor, O.

The Carl Hagenburger Co. has again taken over its former store at Euclid avenue and One Hundred and Fifth street, Cleveland. They had a splendid holiday trade at both the Cleveland and the Painesville stores.

James Knight of Willoughby had such a good business at home that he had very little to sell to the outside trade. He is doing considerable planting on a private estate near by.

Wm. Hagenburger, head gardener for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad, is on a trip through California and the southern states.

HOLIDAY TRADE IMMENSE.

Never in the history of this city has there been such a volume of business for the holidays. All kinds of tradesmen give the same report and the florists were simply rushed to the limit. Weather conditions were almost ideal for handling plants and cut flowers. Practically any kind of plant could be delivered to any part of the city unwrapped without injury. Truly this is a favored climate for florists during the winter, so far as deliveries are concerned. The call for cut flowers in brighter colors never was greater and plants with any bright color sold quickly. Some very fine red roses from California were handled at a very reasonable price. Violets from the same place were plentiful and in excellent condition. Carnations and chrysanthemums were in liberal supply. The quality was not quite up to the standard, but they brought the cash promptly. Never before was the call so great for English holly and the cedar festooning or wreathing was very liberally used. There were 650 yards in one hotel. Many funerals have made a demand for quantities of all white flowers. Prices were same as in 1911.

NOTES.

Looking backward we can judge the year 1912 to be the best ever in the history of Tacoma from a business point of view for all our florists. Those growing vegetables may be included. Looking forward we find every indication of another year just as good or better, even though the dull days of August are certain to come, we hope the sales may pay expenses and every one reach the year 1914 with the same success that finds the year 1913 at its beginning.

The California Florists certainly had the call for cedar wreathing, and were kept busily employed making it for a week or ten days before Christmas. The manager stated that sales of plants and cut flowers made a small increase over last year. The late improvements made to their store adds much to its beauty and convenience.

The new store lately opened up at 937½ South C street by Mrs. Watson proved one of the busiest places in our city, and although small as regards floor space, is a beauty, and will be a profitable place. She now has two stores and both were rushed to the limit during the Christmas season.

The Tacoma Floral Co. was sold out of both cut flowers and plants and the firm members and employees locked up and came down down to enjoy themselves Christmas Eve.

H. W. Manike had excellent business and his plants brought good prices and sold well. There was nothing left in the way of colors in either cut flowers or plants.

The Smith Floral Co. of 1116 S. C street was rushed and sold great quantities of carnations and pot plants, mostly of their own growing.

The Fifi Floral Co., which had lately started selling plants and cut flowers at the public market, is the only firm to report business poor.

H. H. Hinze enjoyed splendid business and sold all his own cut flowers and a great lot he bought. His plants sold well, also. S. L. H.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The first annual meeting of the American Buttercup Club will be held here in January.

BROOKLINE, MASS.—Albert H. Woods, the local florist who shot and killed Thomas Goldrop last fall after the latter had stolen a quantity of violets, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter, December 18. His case was continued until the April term of court and he was released on $3,000 bail.

Philadelphia Notes.

The mushroom industry is booming in Chester county. A number of the growers have had good crops and prices have averaged very well, ranging from 35 to 40 cents a pound all through the fall. The market is now strong at 40 cents. One of the important factors in the successful culture of the mushroom is good spawn and this is furnished successfully by the Brandywine Mushroom Co. This company is building a new plant on an extensive scale in Manchester. J. B. Swayne, Edward H. Jacob, and Morris Darlington are the men interested and they expect to go into the business of raising and producing pure culture spawn in large quantities. Their plant now in course of erection will occupy a whole square of ground and will be most complete in all details. Morris Thompson of Toughkenamon is refilling his beds for a second crop and has twenty-eight carloads of manure on hand to replace that in his twelve large houses.

A severe windstorm last Friday did considerable damage to greenhouses, all loose glass being caught by the gale and destroyed. The force of the storm was terrific and it is a wonder that more damage was not done. The wind was the most violent in the records of the weather bureau for this season.

Robert Craig says of their Christmas trade that it was the largest and best in the history of the firm. He now sees a great business looming up for Easter and the whole force are now bending all their efforts to getting the stock ready in time. They will be very strong on rambler roses.

A retail florists' association is about to be organized in this city, the object being for mutual benefit socially, but more particularly in a business way. John Gracey is one of the active men in this movement and sees great benefit to the retail trade if a majority of them will get together.

The dinner and theatre party given to the employees of the House of Rice last week by B. Eschner was a most enjoyable affair and will long be remembered by the recipients.

The Jos. Heacock Co. says its December business broke all records. His firm's large rose houses at Roclofs were in full crop and were all marketed at good prices.

Berger Bros.' central market is running strong on violets, choice Lady Campbell being handled in quantity. Select Richmond roses are also a special feature.

The Leo Niessen Co. has as a leader American Beauty roses of the best stock and in the largest quantities ever seen on this market.

There was a very good attendance at the January meeting of the Florists' Club on Tuesday last.

Ed. Reid is strong on carnations, exceptionally fine stock of white and pink Wards being offered.

HOLIDAY TRADE GOOD.

The holiday trade was eminently satisfactory and everybody did a good business. Christmas eve was very sloppy and disagreeable and hurt some, but on the whole all went well. Flowers were exceptionally good and plentiful and there was no increase in prices but they were good. There was an equal demand for both cut flowers and potted plants with, perhaps, a preference for azaleas and poinsettias with asparagus. Hyacinths, narcissi, begonias and other pot plants sold very well. Since the holidays trade has been very good and shows no prospect of dropping down.

McIntyre Bros. introduced an innovation in the way of having a day for sales on roses. They had quite a large cut and put them on the market at sixty cents a dozen. There was a rush for the flowers but it made no appreciable difference in the general trade of the other florists. They had on sale sixteen hundred roses of Killarney, Richmond, Perle and other popular varieties. From time to time they expect to have similar sales.

INCREASE OF 25 PER CENT.

Business was at least 25 per cent better this season than last, says Geo. F. Smith. Prices were about the same except for carnations, which were 50 per cent higher. The cut-flower supply was ample. Bulbous flowers were all sold out. The quality of stock this year compared favorably with that of last season. Cyclamens sold the best of all pot plants. The flower trade shows a substantial growth in common with other local industries.

NOTES.

The Christmas displays by A. Langhans and the Misses Forbes & Donahue were said to be the finest ever seen in this city.

Fred C. Welsgerber has added flowers to his line of fruit and produce.

Peoria, Ill.

B. Juerjens & Co. report a ten per cent increase in Christmas trade this year. Prices were better. Carnations were short, but other cut flowers were plentiful. In bulbous stock the supply and demand were both good. The quality was better than last year except for carnations. Plant baskets sold well. Azaleas and Frederickton, N. B.

The sales were about the same this Christmas as in 1911, according to John Bebbington & Son, who say prices were considerably higher. The supply of cut stock was equal to the demand. Paper White narcissi sold well for church decoration. The quality of the stock was the best ever sold. Carnations led, with roses second. Flowering azaleas, cyclamen and begonias all sold well. People were willing to pay the price for all goods.

John Bebbington & Son had a large amount of funeral work in addition to the usual Christmas trade.

NEW YEAR'S ONLY ORDINARY.

Since the Christmas rush things here have quieted down but there still continues a fair demand. New Year's had not much of a holiday flavor, being in most stores just a good, busy day. Prices have fallen considerably, in some cases 50 per cent. Special Beauties are now offered at this discount from Christmas prices. The quality of the stock in all lines is about at its best. There is a great variety in all lines. Sweet peas are becoming a factor. Some very good long stemmed stock is offered. Single violets have been quite scarce and have sold at higher figures than the doubles. White lilac is now seen in quantity and is in good demand. Calla lilies are now a staple and to be had in quantity. Choice snapdragon finds a ready sale at good prices. Carnations are a little easier and in good demand. Daffodils are much in evidence. Golden spurs are expected in a week or so. K.

BAD WINDSTORM.

Rain and warm weather ended Friday with one of the worst windstorms we have had in many years. Boston had the lowest barometer reading in 40 years. It started blowing in the afternoon and ended in an 80-mile gale from the south, turning to the west towards morning and blowing 60 miles. Considerable glass was blown out even in new houses. The growers had an anxious night, and many of them were missed in Boston Saturday morning. The market is not overloaded with flowers. New Year's cut quite a figure this year. Many parties were given, and considerable flowers used. Neither roses nor carnations are too plentiful. Some of the flowers we noticed Saturday were not up to the standard of the week previous, being cut before they were half open. American Beauty, Mrs. Russell and valley head the list at present.

We noticed some fine pink and white lilies at Welch Bros.

NEW YEAR'S TRADE ONLY FAIR.

Monday, December 30, opened with a violent rain storm which continued throughout the day and practically tied up business. No exceptions could be taken to the weather of December 31 and New Year's Day, both being fair and very mild for winter. As an instance, the street door of practically every wholesale store was wide open throughout New Year's eve and no discomfort was felt. On the other hand, buying was very light. There seems to be a perplexing feature here as to the effect the weather has on business. When it storms, it is said, it hurts business, which is plausible, but when the weather is delightfully mild, we also hear it said: "This is bad for business because it takes the people out of the city." Let us hope for a happy medium, for the business needs it. However, there were plenty of people in the city on New Year's eve, but to many of them at the time the beauty and delight of flowers would have meant nothing. New Year's business, as one wholesaler expressed it, was just about the same as a good Saturday. The wholesale stores were open till midnight on New Year's eve but there was little doing. On some stocks there was a slight advance, but it was spasmodic. The ruling prices on leading stocks were: special American Beauty roses, $35.00 and $40.00 a hundred; special Killarneys, $12.00 a hundred; special violets, $1.00 and $1.25 a hundred; Jardine's, $4.00 and $6.00 a dozen; lilies, $8.00 and $10.00; valley, $3.00 and $4.00; cattleyas, 50 and 60 cents each. These prices, it will be noted, were only for the freshest stock. Carnations sold as high as $8.00 a hundred, but most of them went for less. Lilacs, jonquils and freesias are now to be had.

January 6—Business is very slow with a general decline in prices on nearly every stock. This is very noticeable in roses and carnations. American Beauties and the special grades of tea roses are hard to move. There is a surplus of Paper White narcissi. Tulips are arriving in small lots but few good ones are seen.

We regret to state that Philip Einsmann, a well-known grower of Long Island and prominently connected with the New York Cut Flower Exchange, is in a local hospital and grave concern is felt for the condition of his health.

FLOWERS FOR REID FUNERAL.

The funeral of Whitelaw Reid, late ambassador to Great Britain, which was held January 4 at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, was notable for the many beautiful floral tributes sent by people in every walk of life. There were flowers that had been ordered by the king and queen of Great Britain, by the president of the United States and other high officials, by the employees of the New York Tribune, of which Mr. Reid was for years editor, and from the Captain and company of the British battleship which bore his remains to his native land. Many of the designs were arranged by local florists and some came from other cities. F. W. Smyth of Wadley & Smyth of this city was in charge of the arrangement of flowers at the cathedral and his firm also executed a number of fine designs. Others were executed by Chas. Thorley, I. H. Small & Sons, Geo. M. Stumpp, Alex. McConnell and Peter McHenry. The last named made up a wreath which contained 10,000 violets. A notable design came from Washington, D. C. It was a large anchor, mostly of white carnations, and was the work of George H. Cooke, one of the best known florists of that city. It had been ordered by wireless by the captain of the ship on which the body of the late ambassador was borne to this port. Through the courtesy of officers of the United States battleship Florida, the representative of THE AMERICAN FLORIST was taken aboard the British ship to deliver this design.

NOTES.

The retail business founded and for many years conducted by Adolph Le Moutt at 202 Bowery, has, since his death, been continued and is still under competent management. It is in some of these old stores that we frequently find interesting souvenirs of the past. For years Mr. Le Moutt made a practice of having his best designs photographed. There are albums filled with photographs, some of them dating back for more than forty years, and the exhibit is intensely interesting.

A daily feature at P. J. Smith's is the fine Liliun rubrum which he receives from A. S. Burns, Jr., Spring Valley, N. Y. This reminds us that the Burns family has a fine record in the flower trade of this city. William Burns is still a retailer with a fine store and business at 840 Sixth avenue. In conjunction with his brother, A. S. Burns, Sr., now retired, the business has been in existence for more than forty years.

The great wind storm of January 3 did considerable damage in and about this city. At Charles Thorley's House of Flowers the plate glass show window, fronting on Fifth avenue, was blown out. An eighty-mile gale, as all growers know, whistles through a greenhouse, and on January 4 there were indications that its effect would be shown in a lighter supply of stock for the next week.

A redeeming feature on a declining market Jan. 6 was the Purity freesias which J. K. Allen received from P. J. Schroeder, Pine Brook, N. J. They wholesaled at $9.00 a dozen bunches. Mr. Allen also received very fine My Maryland roses.

I. S. Hendrickson, representing John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., was in the city January 6. He is just recovering from a severe attack of bronchial pneumonia and it was a pleasure to his many friends to see him about.

P. Hamilton Goodsell, importer of nursery stock, who has been for some time confined to his home by blood-poisoning affecting one of his hands, is much improved and will soon be back to business.

Paul Meconi and wife are enjoying their honeymoon and business together, not allowing one to interfere with the other. Both have been daily at their store, and have had a good holiday business.

Alfred Van Praag, of 4 West Fortieth street, reports a good holiday business. He deserves it as the store was kept well supplied with good stock and has a competent force of designers and decorators.

At the Madison avenue store of C. A. Dards, on January 4, we noticed very handsome baskets of spring flowers. Jonquils, freesias and both white and yellow daisies were prominent.

Harry Bunyard of A. T. Boddington's seed store was in Twenty-eighth street January 4 smiling and happy, which, it may be added, is a habit with him and it is a good one.

Horace E. Froment and his staff have got rested after their strenuous Christmas business, but are by no means idle, for a big supply of roses is a daily feature.

A jarring note in trade is the strike of 200,000 garment workers and if it continues the effects will, to some extent, be felt in the flower trade.

In his fine new store, 107 West Twenty-eighth street, William P. Ford is handling fine American Beauties and much other excellent stock.

J. K. Allen is receiving a variety of roses and other good stock, among them some fine carnations from Robert Berry, Summit, N. J.

James McManus seems much pleased with his new location and is keeping up his reputation as an orchid specialist.

HOLIDAY TRADE GOOD.

Reports from the retailers on the holiday business are optimistic. That the volume was equal to a year ago there can be no doubt and some say that the New Year's demand was even better than at the same period in 1912. Plants with red or scarlet flowers sold well and little of this class of stock remained. Cut flowers were high in price but sold satisfactorily. Carnations sold exceptionally high because the retailers had to pay the growers $12 and in a few cases $15 a hundred for them, but this was owing to the great scarcity of the stock.

NOTES.

Endorsement of the new parcels post system which went into effect on January 1 was one of the notable incidents at the January meeting of the Albany Florists' Club. An address on its advantages was given by William C. Gloeckner, a prominent retailer and president of the Boosters' Club of the Albany chamber of commerce. The club also endorsed the DeForest bill, the purpose of which is to make this city a customs district through which the imports for a large section of the state will pass. The growers in the territory favor this bill. The meeting was the first held in the new headquarters, the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, 76 Maiden Lane. The officers for 1913 were installed as follows: Frederick Henkes, president, Newtonville; Frank R. Bilson, vice-president; Patrick Hyde, treasurer; Robert Davidson, secretary. William M. Quinn of the city bureau of parks was elected a member.

Fire on the evening of December 30 damaged the interior of the boiler house of James H. Snyder, violet grower, at Rhinebeck. With the assistance of the local fire department the flames were soon under control. Mr. Snyder carried no insurance. The fire did not damage the boilers enough to put them out of service.

Among the recommendations in the annual report of Wallace Greenalch, commissioner of public works, transmitted to Mayor McEwan, is one for a large greenhouse to be built in Washington park to contain the rare plants now in the park greenhouses on New Scotland avenue, where few persons see them.

R. D.

Rochester, N. Y.

Business for the month of December was very satisfactory. Flowers for New Year's were very good. Violets were in great demand and reached from $3 to $4 a hundred. Roses were in good demand and brought high figures. Japanese Lilies have been added to the market's assortment and find a good sale. Carnations are a little more plentiful and prices hold good.

NOTES.

The next meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association will be held January 13. The election of officers will take place.

Harry Merritt shipped 6,000 cuttings of White Wonder and Delight carnations to a new customer recently.

H. E. Wilson is showing a fine selection of Dutch flowering bulbs.

Connecticut Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of this society was held December 13. The members are encouraged to bring horticultural products for exhibition at each gathering, and the society's large central table was filled with begonias, poinsettias, sweet peas, bouvardia, tomatoes and mushrooms. The judges were George H. Hollister, Carl Peterson and T. B. Brown. They made awards as follows: first-class certificate to President John F. Huss for Glory of Cincinnati, Gloire de Lorraine, Turnford Hall and La Patrie begonias; certificate of merit to Warren S. Mason, of Farmington, for vases of bouvardia; first-class certificate to Vice-President J. Alfred Weber for vases of Euphorbia plenissima (double) and pulcherrima (single); first-class certificate to William H. MacKenzie, of Bristol, for vase of sweet peas; first-class certificate to Alfred Cebelius, of Hartford, for basket of Dreer's Superb Salad tomatoes. Thanks were also extended to Mr. Weber for 21 mushroom caps, all grown on one clump.

The president's, treasurer's and secretary's reports all showed the society to be in a flourishing condition, with a large membership and a goodly sum in the treasury. Two shares of Aetna Life stock have been added to the permanent investment fund during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows: John F. Huss, president; J. Alfred Weber, Alex. Cumming, Jr. and Carl Peterson, vice-presidents; George W. Smith, secretary; W. W. Hunt, treasurer; William T. Hall, librarian; George W. Smith, botanist; C. H. Sierman, pomologist; John Gerard, George B. Baker, George H. Hollister, Howard A. Pinney, and Alex. Cumming, Jr., executive committee.

All the county vice-presidents were re-elected, as follows: Litchfield, Walter Angus, Chapinville; Fairfield, Charles H. Plump, West Redding; New Haven, John H. Slocombe, New Haven; Windham, Frank M. Smith, Willimantic; Tolland, Theodore Staudt, Rockville; Middlesex, Arthur A. Curtis, Deep River. Mr. Huss, after long and indispensable services as president, desired to be relieved, but was prevailed upon to continue his efficient leadership. The treasurer and the secretary were pleased to have the auditing committee, Messrs. Cumming, Baker and Gerard, add the following kind paragraph to their report: "Your committee also wishes to extend their compliments to both the treasurer and the secretary for their neat, accurate, and systematic methods of recording the society's business." The society will enter upon 1913, the twenty-fourth year of its corporate existence, under very favorable auguries.

GEORGE W. SMITH, Sec'y.

Business increased twenty per cent this season, according to G. Fleischer. The prices were the same as in 1911, except for carnations, which were higher as a result of a shortage. The stock was in sufficient supply. Bulbous flowers had a good demand and the supply was good, except in yellow narcissi. The quality of stock this year was better than last. There was an increased sale of flowering plants, especially cyclamen. Holly and holly wreaths sold well. The weather was fine and deliveries were made in open vehicles.

G. Fleischer has been sick with sciatic rheumatism since Thanksgiving, and was unable to attend to the Christmas trade in person.

Kentucky Horticultural Society.

The Kentucky State Horticultural Society will meet at Lexington January 9, which is "Horticultural Day" in the annual farmers' week, held by the state college of agriculture. The morning session will begin at 9 o'clock and there will be an address of welcome by Dr. J. H. Kastle of the college of agriculture. R. M. Cunningham, president of the society, will also deliver an address.

Others on the program are: O. A. Hasse, Cleveland, O., "Spraying;" John A. Keller, Lexington, "Value of Irrigation;" Prof. F. H. Ballou, Newark, O., "The Baby Tree;" C. B. Nichols, Fayette county, "A Blue Grass Orchard;" W. W. Farnsworth, Waterville, O., "Protecting the Orchard;" J. P. Fister, Lexington, "Growing Winter Vegetables Under Glass;" H. F. Hillemeyer, Lexington, "Trees for Forestry and Home Adornment;" W. W. Farnsworth, "Growing and Marketing Small Fruits;" J. E. Barton, state forester, Frankfort, "Outlook for Forestry in Kentucky;" Prof. F. H. Ballou, "Orcharding in a Hill Country;" J. H. Carmody, Lexington, "Extension Division of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station."

The society's annual meeting will be held in Henderson, January 23-24.

Lancaster Florists' Meeting.

On December 19 the usual large attendance of this club met and had a very good paper read by Harry Weaver of Bird-in-Hand, on the subject of "Should We Grow More of a Variety for Christmas?"; in which he emphasized the fact that a grower who is supplying the wholesale market through a commission house is better off if he sticks to one or two things and grows them well. He also deplored the fact that in buying seeds for special crops that results were not nearly so good from bought seeds as could be procured later on from seeds of one's own growing and selection. In the discussion that followed it was generally conceded that situated as we are, a considerable distance from our market, it was best to stick to the standard flowers where growing for cut flowers was carried on.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a banquet after our next meeting, which will be a sort of banner affair, starting with a visiting trip to Strasburg at 1 P. M. Thursday, January 16, returning to Lancaster for the meeting, and after the meeting the banquet in the form of a social session. Any out of town florist who happens to be in the city on this date should meet the crowd at the traction waiting room and enjoy himself.

Dear Sirs:—If you have any copies left of the comparative color plate compiled by F. Schuyler Mathews, I shall be obliged if you will send me one, my copy having somehow got mislaid and I do not like to be without this excellent little production.

Yours truly, ERNST BENARY.

CHICAGO

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID.

Norfolk, Va.

Blick, the Florist, reports Christmas trade as twenty per cent better than last year. Carnations were slightly in advance, but the other prices were normal. Flowers of all kinds were plentiful. The call for Romans and Paper Whites was brisk, but the supply was ample. The quality of all stock was excellent. There was an increased demand for flowering plants.

The firm referred to above has moved from 51 Granby street to 117 Plume street, increased business making larger quarters necessary. The new store is in a fine location, and is up-to-date in every respect.

Denver, Colo.

Leading retailers report the holiday trade as equal to that of last year. In some instances a slight increase in the sale of cut flowers is reported. Prices were the same. Plants have not lost their popularity. Especially is this true of azaleas, cyclamen and poinsettias. Primula obconica has superseded the Chinese type. The Lorraine begonia seems to be losing prestige as a Christmas plant. There was some fine made-up work, but this line as a rule was scarce. Holly, lycopodium and the like were in scanty supply.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Better Understanding

Of our firm, its products, and its methods of doing business means to you, the buyer, Better Service, Better Goods, and Better Satisfaction. Our aim is to produce quality in quantity at reasonable prices.

Better business to us means better employes and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

VISITED NEW YORK: Chas. D. Boyles, Chicago.

BIDS for the government seed contract were opened at Washington, D. C., January 7.

MECHANICSBURG, O.—The Wing & Bros. Seed Co. has increased its capital stock from $30,000 to $100,000.

BULB importations to the United States from Southampton in 1911 amounted to $5,915. Orchids were imported to the value of $1,588.

COMMON and German millet is selling at $1.25 per 100 pounds, good grades, and is selling about as low at Chicago as at Missouri river points.

BEANS for eating are selling in carloads in Michigan at $2.35, an advance of about 10 cents per bushel. Fine grades of these beans will be scarce this spring.

DREEB'S "Garden Book" for 1913 is the 75th, or diamond anniversary, edition of that firm's catalogue and is a well prepared and handsomely illustrated book of 288 pages.

PORTLAND, ORE.—The new five-story building of the Portland Seed Co. is nearing completion. It covers 100 square feet of ground and will cost $40,000. The building will be modern in every respect.

NEW YORK.—F. W. Bruggerhof, of J. M. Thorburn & Co., was the victim of a burglar who entered his country home at Stamford, Conn., and stole all the silver plate in the house besides other valuables, December 30.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Minneapolis, Minn., one of the best known seed firms in the country, suffered a loss of $125,000 as a result of a fire December 21. A hot box on a grain distributor started the blaze, which destroyed the corn elevator and a smaller addition to it.

THE loss of corn elevator at Minneapolis some days ago was unfortunate for the Albert Dickinson Co. as it contained a lot of early varieties specially grown in Minnesota for their trade. This firm has also corn warehouses for storage of their Nebraska seed corn crops.

THE protest of H. G. Hastings and Co., Atlanta, Ga., against the duty on soy beans has been overruled by the board of general appraisers. The firm claimed that the importation should be assessed as peas at 25 cents a bushel or as oil seeds, but the board held that the forty-five cents per bushel of sixty pounds assessed on beans should stand.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade January 8, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $3 to $4.25 per 100 pounds.—Peter Hollenbach, commenting on the Record Herald's news notes of January 8, says that a mother has found onion syrup very efficacious for her boy's cold; suggest that onion set sprouts could possibly be distilled into this syrup and secure some little salvage for the heavy-ily burdened seedsman contractor whose crops are now in storage.—Miss Alice Heath, daughter of Chas. A. Heath, of the Albert Dickinson Co., was married to Daniel Webster Ferguson of this city January 7. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson will take a western trip and will be at home after March 1 at 5466 East End avenue.—J. C. Vaughan, who has been on the sick list, is now much better.

French Bulbs.

Present conditions in the French bulb districts indicate an increased production of low grade stock in the near future, due to the possibility that more of the small land owners will engage in the business. The Dutch growers are likewise increasing their holdings. With an average rainfall from now until March the crop for 1913 probably will come up to the average. The number and value of bulbs shipped to the United States in 1912 shows considerable increase.

Vaughan's Gardeners' Calendar.

The 1913 edition of Vaughan's pocket calendar for amateur and professional gardeners is at hand. In addition to the usual indispensable planting and other tables this handy booklet contains valuable data on "Vegetables for Succession," "Color Schemes for Gardens," "Annuals and Perennials for Cut Flowers," "Shrubs for Special Purposes," etc. New features this year include a list of the common names of garden plants and flowers with botanical references and details of the new parcels post.

Melon Seeds of China.

The melon (Citrullus vulgaris) is a well known and widely cultivated garden product both in South China and the north as well, the best quality coming from Newchang. It is grown almost entirely for the seeds, which are to be found on almost every Chinese table. The black quality is raised mostly in the north of China and as a general rule is not found in any great quantities in the markets of Hongkong. The melons themselves are not used to a great extent for food and not at all for medicinal purposes and must not be confounded with the American variety of the watermelon. The latter is grown to a limited extent at Castle Peak, near Hongkong, from American seeds.

There are two kinds of these melon seeds which find ready acceptance among the Chinese, namely, red and black. The red are deemed the best and bring, according to grade, $8 to $15 per picul of 133½ pounds and the black are valued in the same way from $5 to $7 per picul, gold currency. In 1910, the value of these seeds exported amounted to $297,914, and last year the value was $249,498, gold currency. It is impossible to state the proportion going to the United States, but it is undoubtedly considerable, as the Chinese are very partial to this product and do not consider dinners, festivals, or other ceremonies complete without a liberal supply.

It Is Said

A Sharp Knife Makes A Tender Turkey. Apparently it does but in reality it does not.

It is also said certain CHRYSANTHEMUMS possess Commercial Qualities which do not meet the requirements of most Growers. Many of the novelties are worthy of trial; some of the older sorts are among the best.

If undecided what to grow for 1913 crop, ask for our catalogue, now ready. We will be pleased to make suggestions to those who can not determine their needs. The third edition of Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual ready Jan. 10th. The most complete and comprehensive work on this subject. Price, 50c postpaid.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

Cucumber Seed.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Would cucumber seed, saved last summer from plants grown under glass, go to vine if sown this winter or early spring?

Indiana.

H. J. P.

Cucumber seed saved last summer should give good results this spring, provided the parent plants were all right and no cross-pollination was possible; that is, no other varieties of cucumbers being near. Cucumbers mix badly and where several varieties are grown the seeds saved are undesirable. Our markets demand very uniform cucumbers; hence, any varying types are not desired.

As regards growing to vine, that is in our opinion rather an advantage, as we certainly prefer thrifty plants to weakly ones. An old melon-grower told the writer once that if you can induce a wealth of vine and foliage you are on the road to a good crop. There is much truth in this. Greenhouse men often have their beds too rich in nitrogen and lacking potash and phosphoric acid. These latter elements are most important to fruit production; in fact, the available phosphoric acid almost determines the fruiting. Hence by adding the proper chemicals and following good cultural methods the new seeds should produce a good crop.

There is no doubt that age of seed reduces growth, but we doubt very much if this is an advantage. Greenhouse crops are so valuable that one cannot run much risk. If H. J. P. is in doubt he had better plant heavily of some standard stock and use a small percentage of his own seed, then if that turns out well he can make the main planting from his own seed another year. Cucumber seeds are good for many years, therefore we can try out stocks before using them extensively.

BELLEVIEW, ILL.—Fire on December 25 destroyed $1,000 worth of young trees set out last spring by the Harper Bros. Nursery Co. of East St. Louis.

FRESNO, CALIF.—Six thousand acres of new orange orchards were planted in this county during 1912, according to the estimate of Horticultural Commissioner A. G. Schulz.

EVANS CITY, PA.—The Harmony Nurseries of this place have been organized and incorporated, capital $10,000. B. W. Smith and C. H. Smith, Pittsburg, and H. L. Blind, a local man, are the incorporators.

Gooseberry Importations Prohibited.

By a law of September 23, 1912, the Dutch government prohibits the importation and transit shipment of gooseberry, red and white currant, and raspberry bushes, parts of such bushes, and objects which have served as packing for such bushes. However, the Minister of Agriculture, Industry, and Commerce is authorized to make special exemptions in the case of plants introduced for scientific purposes. The privilege even in such cases is not to be granted until after the plants in question have been duly examined and pronounced free from the American gooseberry mildew.

THE NEW GOLD MEDAL ROSE

"Mrs. Charles Russell"

This Giant Forcing Rose is an American Seedling raised at the Waban Rose Conservatories, and has been tested in our houses for several years.

It has proved to be a strong, vigorous grower, and its freedom of bloom is remarkable for a Rose that is fully as large as an American Beauty.

Its large pointed buds, of a clear rose pink and delightfully sweet fragrance, are the admiration of all who have seen it, either growing in our houses or as exhibited by us at the different shows.

It has received high honors when exhibited at such centers as Philadelphia, New York and Boston. At the latter place the Massachusetts Horticultural Society honored it with a Gold Medal, a rare distinction from this conservative society.

"History Repeats Itself"

Some Roses are like men—they have to be transplanted to bring out their best qualities. American Beauty never attained the importance in its native France as "Mme. Ferdinand Jamain," that it has in America. The same was true of "Katherine Mermet," from which we got the two sports Bride and Bridesmaid. Liberty and Killarney never developed under the weepy skies of Ireland as they did in America.

The latest aspirant, "MRS. GEO. SHAWYER," we predict will find its way to the front just as have the varieties mentioned. Come and see it growing and convince yourself. $30.00 per hundred; $250.00 per thousand. Grafted or own root.

You Can't Get Away From These Facts as Told by Mr. L. S. Baker, Baker Floral Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

As we approach the close of the first year during which we have used the greenhouses we purchased of you in 1911, our experience convinces us that you are entitled to a statement and expression of our appreciation.

In 1904, we started in the business by building a house 50 feet long and 20 feet wide, using material milled locally. The next year we erected a second of same construction. In 1907 we secured additional land about two miles from our original venture, and before building, looked into various commercial houses, finally, deciding on the same material as the original, but adopted your semi-iron idea and bought our fittings for this construction from you.

The next year, when planning an addition, I took a trip through to Chicago, noting houses and calling on builders at different points. I finally decided on the construction used in our 1909 house, 40x200, with the trussed construction. An addition of two houses 200 feet long, one 40, and the other 32 feet wide was planned and after consulting various plans and specifications we decided on one iron and one semi-iron L. & B., and had the same erected by you.

I cannot give you a comparison as to the results obtained in these two houses as they were planted to different stock. But the two large houses, your iron and the trussed house, we have planted to carnations, and we find a very decided advantage in favor of your house, in numbers, cut and quality. These houses are similarly located and are cared for by the same men.

It is a pleasure to go through the large house, 40x200, on account of the large area exposed, with no obstructions as posts or net-work of wires overhead, and everything seems to be worked out to such a nicety that there is no sacrifice of strength to gain light.

During the winter, we have had several very severe wind storms, and the two houses erected by you we have found well made, showing no signs of wear, and we have had no up-keep expenses. They appear to be very rigid under any condition and do not cause us the trouble and expense of replacing broken glass. We can assure you that we are greatly pleased that we adopted your plans and had the houses erected by you.

Yours very truly,

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Seeds for Present Sowing.

There are a number of plants that in order to obtain the best stock it is necessary that the seeds be sown during January. Centurea gymnocarpa is slow in making its growth and to have nice plants for edging the beds of geraniums and other plants an early start is required. Vinca rosea should be sown in January to obtain good blooming stock at planting time. *Lobelia*s should be sown by February 1 that fine stock plants may be had. If it is proposed to reset the Smilax beds next year this is the time to get the seed started. Begonia Vernon and the other summer blooming varieties, if sown early, make fine plants by May, full of flowers. Gloxinias and Tuberous begonias can be sown at this time and blooming plants had for the coming summer. Many growers have given up the propagation of Verbenas from cuttings and depend upon seedlings and to have a nicely branched plant by June 1 the seed should be sown the last of January. Another useful border plant is Pyrethrum aureum (Golden Feverfew) and this should be sown early to get good sized plants at bedding out time. There are not many cannas these days, grown from seed, but anyone intending to grow them in that manner should sow the seeds in January. These seeds will germinate much more readily and evenly if soaked in water for 24 hours before planting. Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri should be sown now when there is good heat in the greenhouses, and these seeds, like the cannas, start much more evenly if soaked.

Spireas.

The spireas are always a very useful plant at Easter, but they are classed among the cheaper plants at that time, so should be grown in such a way that they do not occupy valuable space any more than possible. They should be brought into a cool house by the middle of January and until the foliage begins to grow can be placed along the edge of the walks if room is not available, but they must not be left standing in this location too long, for when the leaves begin to unfold they quickly draw toward the light and a plant growing to one side of the pot will be the result. So as soon as growth starts they should be placed on the bench in full light. They can be grown quite close together for some time, but when the foliage begins to touch that of the plants beside it they should be spaced out and given room enough for the plants to grow shapely. Spireas require a large quantity of water during their entire culture, especially those that are potted in as small a pot as possible, which is the general custom with all growers. To make the large specimens two or three clumps are planted in the same pot when started. These will make large plants for church decorations at Easter. If the plants are grown in a house which is to be fumigated by tobacco smoke they should either be removed from the house or well covered with papers; the foliage quickly burns when subjected to tobacco smoke and the plants are blemished.

Cyclamens.

"What can we do with the old cyclamen plants?" is a question often asked by many growers. As a rule the answer is, "Throw them away," for a plant can be grown to a 6-inch or 7-inch pot size in 16 months. That is, seed sown in September will produce such a plant for Christmas the following year, and it is uncertain how the old plants will carry through the spring and summer. There is a limited demand for cyclamen plants in larger sizes than 7-inch pots and they must of necessity bring a good figure to make them remunerative. After they are through blooming the best way to handle them is to shake the old soil out and pot them up in fresh soil, two parts loam, one part well rotted manure and one part leaf mould, with a good sprinkling of sharp sand. If the soil is inclined to be heavy and sticky add more sand. They can frequently be potted in a pot a size smaller than that in which they have been growing. Place them in a cool temperature, that is, in a house from 45° to 50° at night, so as to encourage root action and slow growth. It used to be the custom to dry the bulbs off so that they lost all their foliage, and start them in the spring, but growers have found that our springs and summers are too hot and dry and it is often difficult to make the bulb, after it has been dried off, break a good luxuriant foliage, and it is far better to keep the plant growing all the time. As the warm, sunny days of spring come in, the plants should be slightly shaded and as early as possible placed in cold frames and the glass shaded. The shade should not be made too heavy or the leaves will become drawn and an unshapely plant be the result. After the plants have begun to grow care should be taken that they do not become pot bound, but shifted into large sizes as soon as necessary. The watering of this stock will require constant study and attention. They should never become too dry and it is very easy to over-water, so they will require looking after very closely until a good growth has been encouraged.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

For the large plants for next winter's flowering we are placing the cuttings in the propagating bench now. The plants were selected before Christmas and strong, healthy specimens taken for propagation. The flowers were removed and the plants given a warm location that the best vigor might be maintained. Any leaf showing bluish is discarded, only clean, healthy leaves being used from which to raise the young stock. A warm propagating bed is chosen for these plants and the stems are inserted in the sand deep enough so that about half an inch of the leaf is below the surface. They are kept moist and warm until they are rooted, when they are potted in 2½-inch pots and placed in a warm house and shifted along as required. This may seem a trifle early by many growers to start the propagating of these plants, but there is always demand for some large specimens and fine leaves are obtainable at this time and they root easily during January and February when the propagating bench is warm. The plants will require considerable care and attention during the heated spell of July and August, but with plenty of ventilation and a light shade, they are easily kept moving and make fine plants for the holidays.

MISSOULA, MONT.—The enormous increase of about 100 per cent is reported for this season's Christmas trade by the R. & S. Flower Store. Prices were the same as in 1911 except for carnations, which were 50 per cent higher. The supply of both these flowers and violets was insufficient. The bulbous flower trade was brisk and the supply adequate. The quality of stock compared favorably with that of a year ago. The call for poinsettias was not so great. Ruscus was in great demand. There was a very large increase in the demand for flowering plants. Lillium giganteums sold well. A cut in price by one of the stores caused some dissatisfaction among patrons of those places which refused to make a reduction, but everybody sold out.

Fine Wedding Decorations

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the residence of Patrick Calhoun, Cleveland, O., October 12, the occasion being the wedding of Mr. Calhoun's daughter. The decorations were arranged by the J. M. Gasser Co., which has a nationwide reputation for fine work. On the same day this company executed another beautiful decoration for the wedding of a daughter of Dr. J. C. Wood, Cleveland.

The Spirit of the Times.

Paper read by Charles Henry Fox before the Philadelphia Florists' Club January 7, 1913.

Mr. President and fellow members of the Florists' Club: I feel highly honored in being asked to address you this evening. I don't know what you expect to hear, boys, but no doubt some of you have your hammers with you, while some of you may feel like the colored man in the story as related by "Hope Miller." "Said he: 'My father has been in the habit for years of buying his Christmas turkey of a colored gentleman in the neighborhood commonly known as 'Henry.' This year he took particular pains to instruct him as to what he wanted. He said, 'Henry, be sure to get me a nice tame turkey, a tame one, mind you; none of those game birds for me.' 'All right, sah, I'll sure do dat, I'll get you a tame one for suah,' the negro said.

"Christmas came, the turkey was served and all went well until father suddenly bit down on something hard. 'It's shot I tell you—that nigger has shot this turkey in spite of what I told him.'

"The next day when Henry turned up father was ready for him. 'See here, Henry, I thought I was to have a tame turkey.'

"You sure had, boss, dat sure was a tame turkey.'

"Nonsense, Henry, I bit down on the shot myself that I found in the wing.'

"Well, why why, marsa, dat sure was a tame turkey, but to tell you de truth dat shot wasn't meant for the turkey—dat shot was intended for me.'

So, if any of you fellows here bite on the shot just remember that it was intended for the other fellow.

About ten days ago I blew into the catacombs of Ransstead street and as I entered the white-haired laird emerged from the frost covered cave and greeted me with these words: "You're just the man I want to see. I've got you down for the first Tuesday in January."

I was wondering what was coming off. I thought perhaps it was a dinner at the new Ritz or a spread at the Bellevue. Instead he poked fun at me, wanted to know if I had seen any more red lights flashed up Broad street. Instantly I recalled my talk with you at this club on the follies of 1900. I told him I hadn't anything to talk about. 'Business is good, everybody had a good Christmas and is happy as far as I know, what will I talk about?'

"Now, look here," said he, "there's no getting out of it, we want to hear more about the red lights." So, gentlemen, I am here tonight in response to the call of the laird, not to talk of any more follies but to give you the hand of fellowship, to start a new thought—"the zeitgeist"—"the spirit of the times," the "get together spirit." This will be our subject tonight.

We are a fraternity, and a fraternity is strong only when they pull together. This is something the florists have never done. We want co-operation—sympathy with one another. We want to plan our business interests together. We want to study the needs of the commission man, the needs of the retailer, and especially we want to study what interests the public.

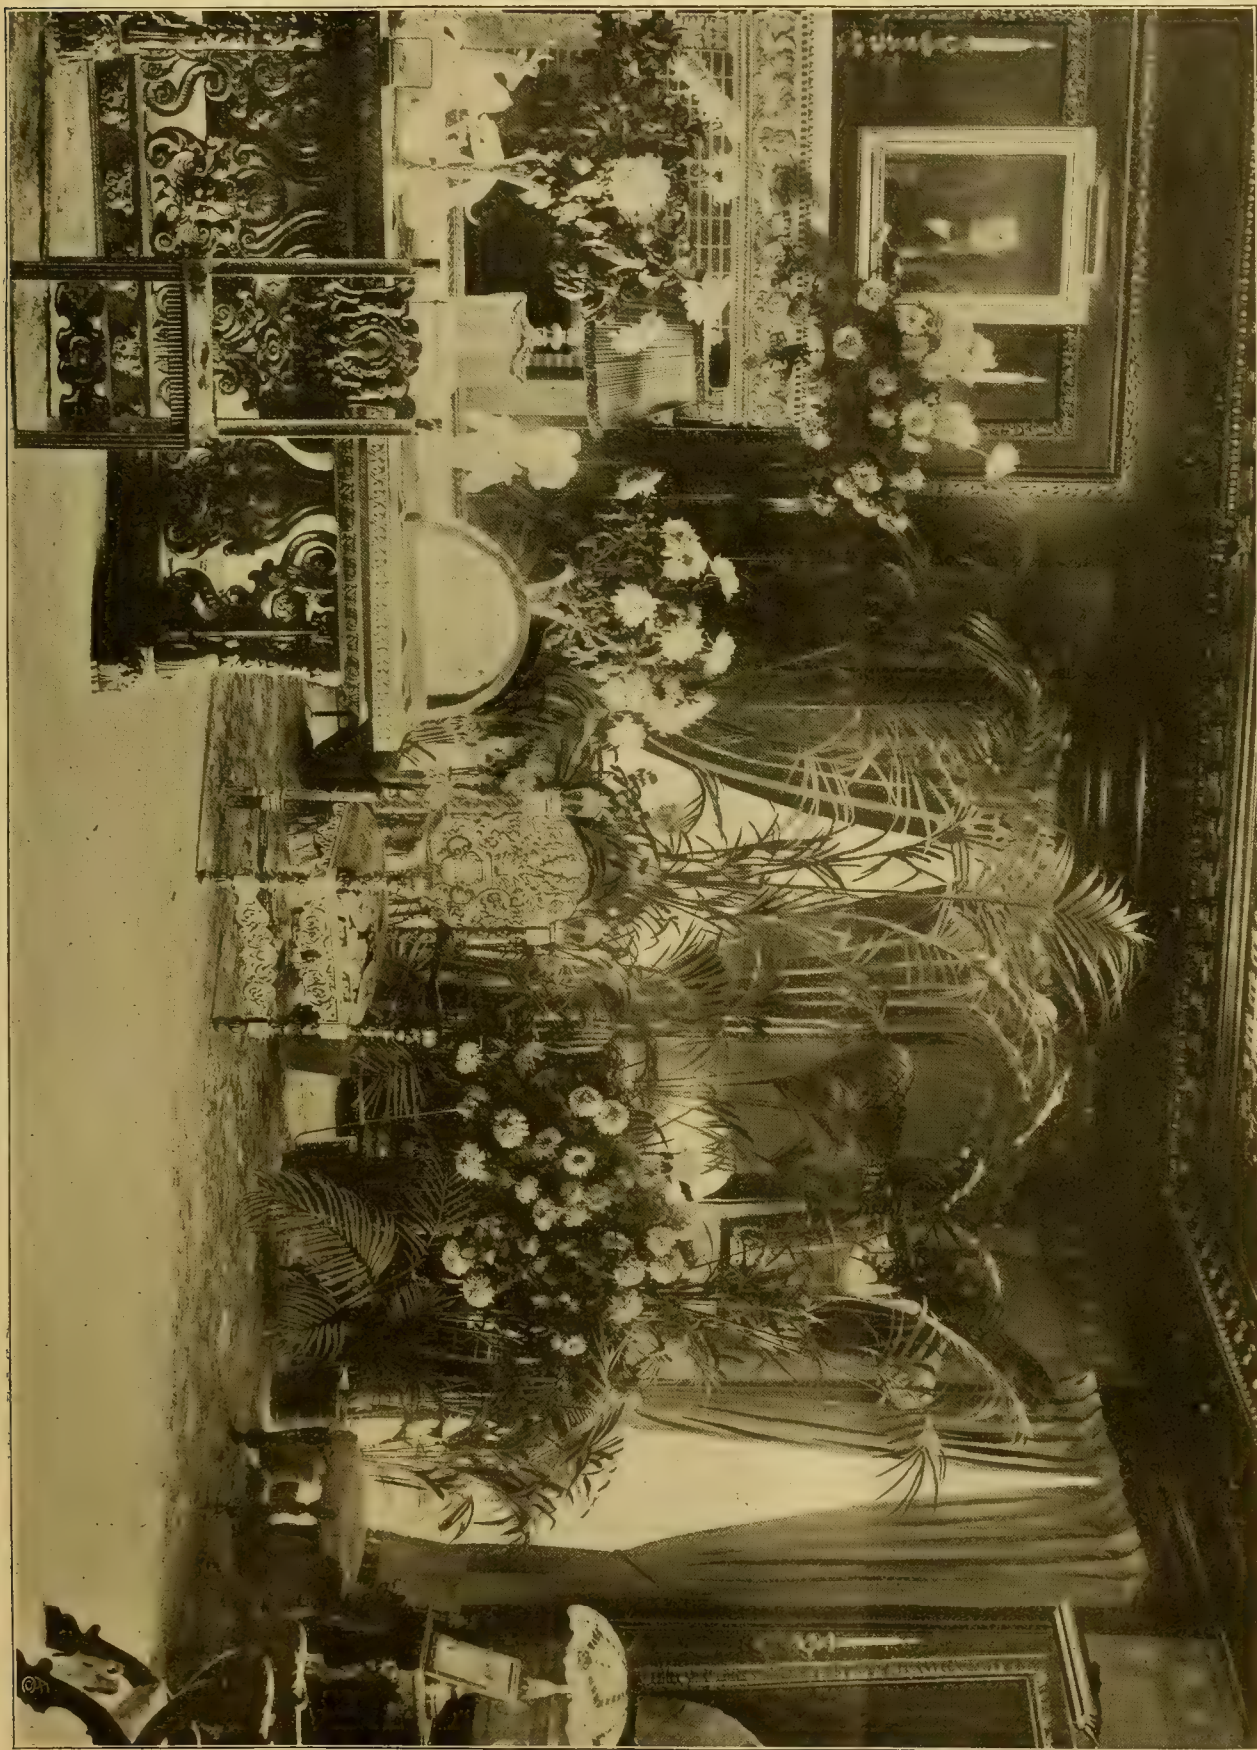

The pathway to success lies in serving the public, not in affronting it, and this can only be done when the grower, the commission man and the retailer work hand in hand.

Now, would it not be beneficial for the grower to visit the retailer, to come in direct contact with him, to get better acquainted; not look upon him as an outsider just because he does not deal directly with him? We could tell him and demonstrate why carnations were "tabooed." At the same time we could show him how carnations would be in demand if they were grown and packed as they should be. We could also give him a line on many little things that we could use at a profit to him, if he would grow them for us in the style that the public demands. To my mind, such an exquisite, delicate and perishable product as flowers should be handled with the utmost care and dispatch.

If we could adopt a plan whereby we could give an order for a certain amount of stock, have it packed by the grower and shipped direct (without any delay or handling) to the retailer, it would eliminate an immense amount of loss and waste. Through this close association between the grower and the retailer a more perfect understanding would naturally be the outcome, and a great many irregularities might be corrected, for he would then realize how much better and how much more advantageous it would be for him to make his regular shipments daily right up to Christmas, selling them at a good price instead of holding them up, and in the end not getting as much as he would have in the first place.

Every year I hear the commission man say: "I told them. I told them. I told them to ship the goods at such and such a date." But will they do it? No. As a consequence the commission man is up in the air. He doesn't know what to promise the retailer. He hasn't the vaguest idea as to how much he will have or what prices to quote. The retailer is likewise "up in the air." He doesn't know what he will have to pay for the stock, nor how much he can expect to get.

Now, gentlemen, who suffers by this? To safeguard himself at Christmas the store man sidetracks cut flowers, stocks up his place with desirable and saleable blooming plants, something he knows the price of. This is something he is really forced to do, very much against his will, for cut flowers are very much easier to handle than plants. Now, then, the last few days before Christmas, when it is too late to swing around to cut flowers, the retailer finds that he could have bought cut flowers from 30 to 50 per cent cheaper than he thought he could when he quoted retail prices to his customers. There is no doubt about it, this curtails many a sale for cut flowers.

HOME WEDDING DECORATION BY THE J. M. GASSER CO., CLEVELAND, O.

Now for the commission man. He has come to stay—a very necessary factor for the economic development and distribution of our product. It is he who has enabled us to have the choice of stock grown in the surrounding country, and I believe I am safe in saying that there is no other city where the service is as good as that given by the Philadelphia commission houses. Through them we are able to replenish our stock with fresh goods from hour to hour. Through them we are able to buy the cream of the stock of a number of growers, as well as the cheaper grades if we want them. Right here I might add: We, as retailers, can greatly facilitate and conserve this service by thinking of all we want to order before we hang up the receiver, rather than ordering in sections, thus keeping the delivery boy on the run when one delivery might answer the purpose.

Now, while we are getting* this excellent service it is necessary for us to keep up the proper balance. By that I mean to support and encourage the growers who sell their goods direct. This always has a wholesome effect on the commission man and makes him behave. We do not want any flower trust. We do want co-operation. In my previous remarks I spoke of direct shipment from the grower to the retailer. Do not misunderstand me, I do not recommend for one minute the elimination of the commission man, nor do I want to belittle his very necessary service. I simply want to make a plea for a change in the shipment, that the order shall go through the hands of the commission man as of old but the shipment be direct, thus eliminating the second handling.

Let me say right here, the reason this has never been encouraged by the commission man has been because he has always seemed so envious of his consignor. There always seemed to be much secrecy as to where the goods came from. He would never think of telling you, and after all, why should there be any secrecy about it? The retailer certainly does not want the consignor. He could not handle all of his product at any rate, and it is not reasonable to suppose that the grower, as long as he is treated right, will go back on the commission man who handles his goods. This is just another little suggestion in the "get together plan"—the "zeitgeist"—the "spirit of the times."

Another clause that might be inserted in this grand fraternity, and one which our friends the commission men might well consider, would be the living up to their advertisements, to be wholesale men in every sense of the word; not to sell flowers to any person or corporation that is not a florist. I, of course, am not alluding to the fakers. They are one of the necessary evils, but I do insist that it is absolutely wrong to take orders for funerals, etc.; to deliver flowers to hotels, restaurants, clubs and colleges, when these orders might be turned into the retail channels.

It is nothing new for a hotel man to ask me to quote prices on a little bunch of stock, and after I have given him the price have him turn to me and say: "Why, I can beat you all hollow; I can buy these things as cheap as you can. I can buy them over at So & So's," mentioning the name of the wholesaler. This is certainly an exasperating and an embarrassing position for the retailer, and such conditions should not exist.

What does it profit the wholesaler? These people want the goods and they would buy them of us at a retail profit and we, in turn, would be giving the wholesaler the price asked. Although every establishment has the sign conspicuously displayed, "Wholesale Only," I am told by a wholesaler himself that every commission man in the city does the same thing. This is one of the reasons that the statement is true that is made by so many florists, that, "Our business is different." We certainly are different from any other line of business that I know of.

I have a friend, the president of a very large concern. He is a member of the same Masonic fraternity that I am, a fellow member in several clubs, and I eat lunch with him every day. I buy about $100 worth of ribbon from him a year, and with all that he would not sell me a pair of suspenders or a dozen handkerchiefs, because I am not a dealer in that line. That is what I call the true fraternal spirit—the setting up of such a standard that the public must respect you as a true business people. There's no doubt in my mind that once the "get together plan" gets in action it will only be a very short time when all these abuses will be done away with. All we want to do is to understand each other better. We are all friends and we are each one of us dependent on the other. I have no enemies. If I have, I do not recognize them as such. They are only my friends who do not understand me.

Now, as to the retailer. He is on the firing line. It is he who is directly or indirectly responsible for public opinion on the flower trade. The "zeitgeist"—the spirit of the times—calls for a "square deal"—efficiency, organization, loyalty. First of all, have your goods marked in plain figures, and marked by the buyer, so that every customer gets a square deal. Do not sell them for what you think the customer will stand for.

To the backwoods, gone forever, are the second story or catspaw methods of yesterday, where the salesman quotes prices in a subdued tone for fear the customer at his elbow is being offered the same goods a dollar or so cheaper than he is selling them, or where the salesman has his particular favorites to whom he sells at greatly reduced prices, while another customer buys the same goods at a much higher price. For instance, just a little experience of my own in buying sealing wax. We use a lot of it on our boxes, and naturally buy it in bulk. The first price quoted was 35 cents a pound. When our second order was placed with another salesman in the same firm we got it for 25 cents. Noting this difference in the price, we began to look about, for every quotation was different. At the present time we purchase the same way at 7 cents per pound. We are wondering whether this is real value, or whether we have farther to go to reach better.

Our next consideration is efficiency, which means living up to a 100 point standard. For instance, the 100 point man needs no supervision. His work is always finished. His customers are always pleased. There is no comeback. The difference between a $5.00 a day man and a $2.00 a day man is that the latter requires $3.00 worth of supervision, for which he has to pay. Responsibility gravitates to the man who can shoulder it.

Under the head of organization let us look at business as a composite whole. Without composite salesmanship your business cannot be a success. The errand boy is just as important as the salesman, and the salesman is of little use if the bookkeeper does not keep track of the sales.

Right here, while it is fresh in my mind, I want to illustrate how this law of composite salesmanship works out. It was Christmas day. All our work was finished. The orders had all been sent out. We were ready for any customers that might come along. About 10 o'clock there came a lull. The phone bell rang. Our chauffeur was on the wire. "Our car is broken down in Overbrook with thirty packages yet to deliver," he said. We immediately dispatched five men and boys to get out the packages. Each one was given six packages to deliver. At Christmas we have to engage extra help. Two of these boys were extras. One of them delivered one package and then, tired of tramping around through the snow, came back with the rest. Our store, all work being finished, closed at 2 o'clock. The boy finding it closed, left his packages in care of the taxicab man next door and skipped.

A little later on one of our regular boys—one of the composite whole—arrived and discovered the packages that had been left. "Great Scott! this will never do," he said. He hired a taxicab, delivered the goods, saved the customers from being disappointed, and turned in the bill to the house. This boy is a 100 pointer. We need more of them. Educate them. Elevate them. Make them proud of the flower business. We do not want any kickers among us. Either get in line or get out.

We have long felt the necessity for just such loyal, efficient, earnest people in the flower business, people who are interested in their work. To this end we established some four years ago a school of floral art. Each year we take several students who pay us a nominal sum for tuition and practical training in the flower business as we know it. There is a vast difference between being taught the whys and wherefores and the ordinary way of getting a job and learning it in the hit-or-miss spend for flowers feels assured that he is just as welcome as the man who drives up in a taxicab with $25.00 to spend, a wonderful increase will be seen in the sale of flowers. When we can drive it home to the hard-headed business man that it is the right thing for him to do to remember birthdays and other anniversaries with the windows with cradles of all sizes, filled with flowers from $1.00 to $10.00 and in two weeks we sold over fifty of them. Now remember this was all done by suggestion. None of these people would ever have thought of the new arrival had they not seen the cradles in the window, and everybody does not walk down Broad street either.

Let every one of the craft put his shoulder to the wheel and we will sell 500 cradles instead of fifty. This illustrates very clearly what can be done to increase the sale of flowers and without any bargain business either. People will pay you a fair price for anything that is gotten up in an attractive, unique way, but one or two men cannot bring about this favorable impression—we must have concerted action. We must work hand in hand and spend money on general publicity to make flowers popular for all occasions.

Here, gentlemen, is one of the cardinal points of the "zeitgeist"—the get together spirit. One has to eliminate all selfishness; not as one of our esteemed writers for a trade journal said to me when talking over this plan: "What good will it be to the grower?" This fellow had the lead pencil too close to his nose to see the point. Doesn't it follow that if the retailer sells more flowers that the commission man's bills will be higher and the grower will get better returns? He would then naturally have more money to put into trade journal advertising.

Every now and again you see editorials in the newspapers and magazines: "This year little French bouquets of artificial flowers will be the vogue for street wear." While they are very effective and nice looking, nevertheless they are artificial flowers and interfere with the sale of cut flowers. They eliminate one of our most profitable lines—the corsage bunch.

What have we as florists done to counteract this whim of the public, this whim of the modiste? Nothing. We simply sit by and let them wear artificial flowers while we keep the fresh ones. This is where the advertising fashion. We have turned out in one season men who have been able to do better work than those who have spent five years in a flower shop under the "catch as catch can" method.

I want to be in a position, gentlemen, in another year or so to be able to supply to you, if you are in need, a good, faithful, loyal man who will work with his head as well as his hands; who will not work by the clock and leave as it strikes; who does not work for wages alone but lets the wages gravitate to him. I want to be in a position to recommend just such a man. Many have said to me: "Aren't you foolish in this sort of thing? Can you afford to give away your ideas? They simply have missed the "zeitgeist"—the spirit of the times—for after all we only get by giving.

The retailer should make an effort to feature the use of flowers for every occasion by having his windows appropriately decorated for Halloween, Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's, Lincoln's birthday, St. Valentine's day, Washington's birthday, St. Patrick's day, Easter, Memorial day, bon voyage. All of which offer excellent opportunities for window display advertising. Your windows are the mirrors of your business.

I myself am very much in favor of a plan of publicity, an organized publicity bureau, including the growers, the commission man, the retailer and the trade journals. Let each subscribe a specific amount per year to feature the use of flowers for the various occasions. Give out the idea broadcast that the use of it is not a millionaire's luxury, that we have something to sell that everyone should use, and just as necessary to our happiness in civilized life as the more staple articles of merchandise. Once we can start this favorable impression, when the man with $1.00 to gift of flowers; that married as well as single men should remember St. Valentine's day and send their wives a box of flowers; that it will please the whole family and not make any of them sick either if a box of flowers is taken home once or twice a week instead of candy.

On the occasion of the new arrival all relatives and friends should send flowers, but the public must be educated up to that point. To show how these suggestions work, we filled our bureau will come in strong. Get a good first-class advertising man, have him meet with us at the regular meetings, talk over our different plans with him, open up our business secrets to him, then let him write good copy favorable to the use of flowers. In many cases this can be inserted in the newspapers for nothing, classed as a story. In fact, the newspapers are glad to get just such copy and the way it is written has all to do with it. Do this for a year or so and you will find a wonderful change in the public mind in regard to flowers.

Women will wear anything that is stylish. If it was out of date for a woman to wear artificial flowers, you would not find one who would have nerve enough to wear them. So you see it is in our power. All we want to do is to get together; not in a half-hearted way, one afraid of the other getting a little advantage, but go for it strong and we will sell the stock, and the grower, the commission man and the trade journal will benefit by it.

About three weeks before the holidays four newspaper representatives called on me for news on Christmas flowers and their prices. I told every one this was going to be a flower year. Flowers were never so good or so plentiful as this year and they would be very cheap—very little above the popular price. Every one was amazed, for the first question they greeted me with was: "Flowers will be very high, won't they?" It was the same with the customers in the store. I instructed every salesman not to dare mention the words "expensive" or "scarce" in regard to Christmas flowers.

Did all this leave a favorable impression? Of course it did. It was positive instead of negative. It helped the public to decide in favor of flowers. Every florist, as far as I know, had a good Christmas. We had the best one we ever had—more than we could handle—and we did not sell without profit either. This, gentlemen, is, I think, the proper spirit. This is what we should do to bring the public mind with us, instead of diverting it by scaring them into other channels.

In closing, let me say once more, what we want to do is to come to a more perfect understanding; get more closely associated; study each other's needs and boost the flower business for all it's worth. Remember that no one can harm you but yourself. For every idea you give away you get a four-fold return. To try to hold everything to yourself is to lose it and narrow down your personality besides.

The day when one man thought he was "it" and could control certain stock has passed and passed for good. The "zeitgeist"—the spirit of the times—is against special privilege. Its plea is for co-operation, loyalty, sympathy, and when we have mastered these we will find ourselves on the high road toward the "zeitgeist."

Evergreen Window Boxes.

This is a good time to make some observations in regard to the filling of window boxes. Not only can we now judge of the artistic qualities of the work, but we can see also how the material used stands the winter. I note that many boxes are already failing. Some are full of withering plants; some are getting naked from the falling leaves, and have a sort of a been-out-all-night appearance. Where suitable plants have been used and planted at the proper time, this should not occur. There is no reason why the boxes should not go through the entire winter in fair shape.

Probably the reason for a large proportion of this unsatisfactory condition is due to the fact that the boxes were made up too late in the season. Unless the filling is done early, so that the plants can become established before freezing weather sets in, they will not carry. One might about as well cut the plants down, sharpen the ends of the stems and stick them into the sod and expect them to do well, as to wait until freezing time comes, and plant with the roots on. Unless planted early so that the root action can begin and the plants get established in the soil they are sure to suffer. August or early September is not too soon to plant, if evergreens are to be used. After planting, the boxes should be set in a sheltered place and carefully watered and sprayed until the foliage becomes plump and firm.

I have never seen a satisfactory result accomplished by crowding a lot of one-sided poorly developed conifers into a box to give it fullness and form. Eventually the plants shrink and get displaced, and a ragged untidy box is the result. Better use good well formed plants and not so many of them. Today I saw a lot of boxes about six feet long by eight inches wide and eight inches deep, containing from ten to fourteen small pinus and spruces, all of them inferior. They may have looked fairly well when first filled, but now (January 8) they have shriveled and separated and look extremely ragged. Six shapely, well selected plants would have filled the bill and would have retained their shape all winter. The fourteen plants used probably cost about $1.25. Seven selected plants of about the same height and twice as thick would probably cost $1.10, a gain of fifteen cents in cost and one hundred per cent in appearance. There is good money in this business and the florist should see to it that it is not killed by poor work.

Young conifers of many kinds are available for this work, giving quite a wide range of color and form. Pines, spruces, junipers, retinisporas, thuyas, and yews in many species and varieties are suitable. In broad leaved evergreens, box, euonymus, teucium, daphne, leucothoe, kalmia, mahonia and others lend themselves kindly to this form of decoration. Sometimes one sees small plants with colored bark and deciduous shrubs with red fruit used in these boxes with excellent effect.

W. J. Pilcher's New Greenhouses.

The accompanying illustration is of three greenhouses which have been recently erected by W. J. Pilcher, Kirkwood, Mo. The material for this compact range was furnished by the Foley Manufacturing Co., of Chicago, and the illustration plainly shows what nice looking and light greenhouses can be built with the modern construction adopted by the large commercial building concerns.

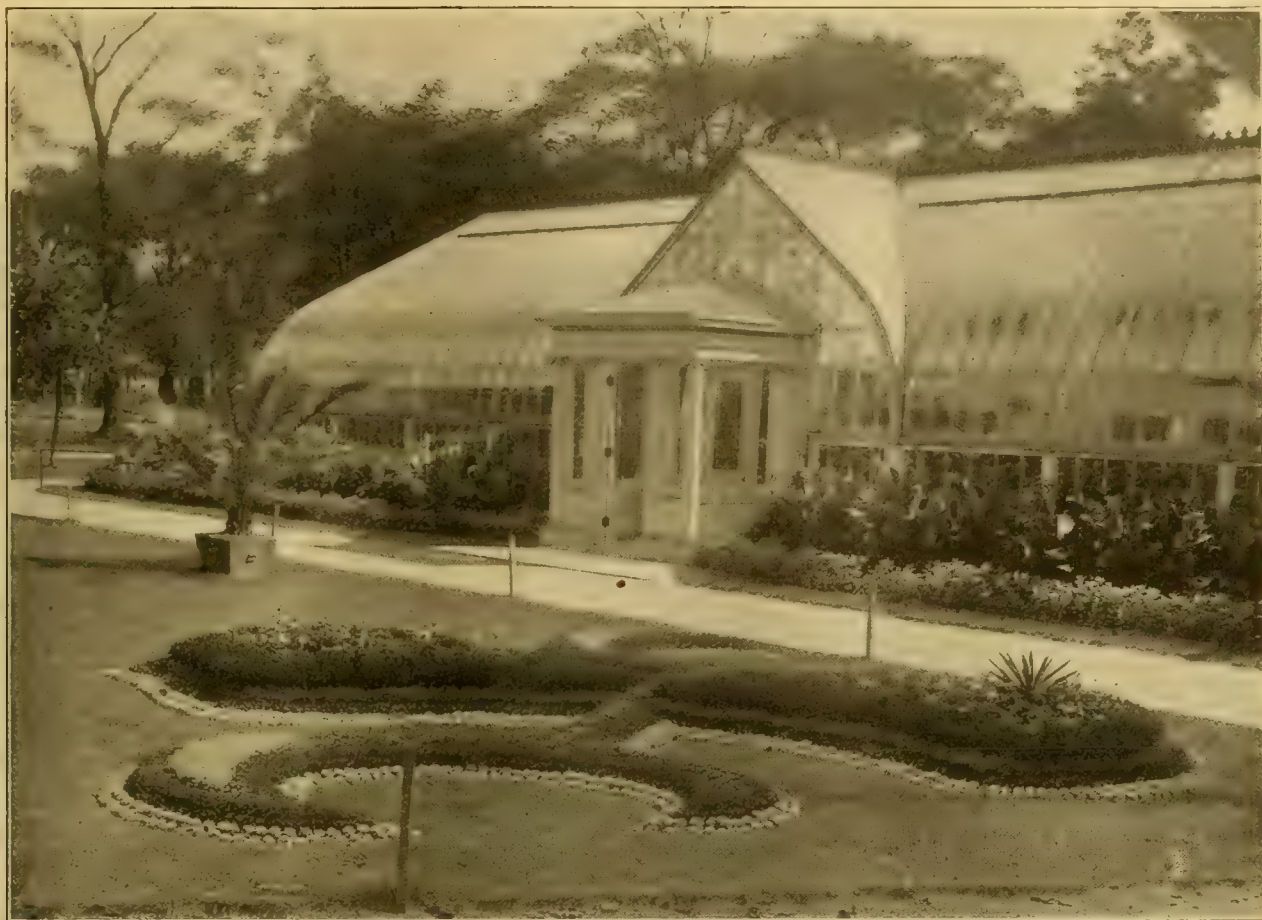

WEBSTER CITY, IA.—The Curtis Floral Co. will start the erection of two new greenhouses and an office building as soon as weather conditions permit.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—The Aldrich-McFee flower store is being moved to the Post Tavern. Hereafter it will be known as the Post Tavern Flower Parlor.

FREEMONT, L. I.—A fire, apparently of incendiary origin, crosses marked on his front door and a "prayer chain" letter which carried a veiled threat, have led Charles Lenker, one of this city's well-known florists, to believe that a black hand agency has marked him for its victim.

Buffalo Parks.

Superintendent of Parks Henry Elbers of Buffalo, N. Y., has made great improvements in the past two years. The greenhouses have been newly constructed and what was formerly known as the Parade House is now one of the finest of Buffalo's parks. Visitors by the thousands are there each Sunday and take great pleasure in viewing the numerous flower beds that he has so artistically arranged.

BISON.

Marguerites in Benches.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly tell me if marguerites can be grown in benches as successfully as in pots? If not, are 7-inch pots large enough and when is the proper time to take cuttings for winter blooming?

SUBSCRIBER.

New Jersey.

The proper time to take cuttings of marguerites for winter blooming is in April or May. These should be handled just the same as chrysanthemums. They can be grown on till they are large enough to fill in pots by November and will, if they have been properly pinched, produce large crops of flowers during winter. By planting in the field in May and potting in September they will do equally well. Many growers favor planting on benches or in boxes, claiming a crop of larger blooms and longer stems through the season, but by judicious feeding excellent flowers and good stems can be produced by pot culture.

C.

THE CARNATION.

Propagating.

A very important part of the work of the grower in charge of the carnations is that of propagating, and now is the best time of any to attend to it. Cuttings put into the propagating beds now will be ready for taking out early in February. Plants grown from the cuttings rooted at this period, if given the proper attention from the start, will give the best results for a long flowering season. The selection of the cuttings is of the greatest importance and only those that are perfect in health and vigor should be used. It is poor policy to take cuttings from plants showing traces of stigmamose, bacteria or any other condition but that of perfect health, and expect them to grow out of it. The disease is more likely to develop steadily along with the growth of the plant.

There is good and poor material for cuttings on every plant. The wood that is in the heart of the plant and shaded from the light is inclined to be soft and spindling and is not nearly so good as that on the outside that has had the full benefit of exposure to the light and air. Avoid using the cuttings from plants that have developed streaky flowers and select only from plants which have blooms that are pure in tone of color and true to type. Watch closely the cuttings from the time they are taken from the plants until they are potted from the propagating bed. They should not be allowed to wilt at any time, neither should they be treated to an overabundance of moisture to cause dampness and rot. Maintain a cool, even temperature with ventilation at every favorable opportunity, making sure at all times to guard against draughts.

The cuttings should be potted as soon as rooted in a fresh, live soil, but not a rich soil, and should be given plenty of light and grown cool from the outset. It is very important that the young plants be given the closest attention to their needs after being potted. They are better for being held a little to the dry side at the roots and watered only as they require it. Light and fresh air are also important items for their well being and look well to the work of keeping the insects in check. As the young plants extend their growth it will be necessary to syringe them occasionally to keep down the red spider.

The flowering plants are now at the height of their season, full of buds and flowers, and the general routine in caring for them must be followed up closely right along. Pay particular attention to the cutting. See that it is done on time and that there is proper accommodations for the flowers after they are cut. It would appear to be hardly necessary to write here that directly after being cut the flowers should be put in fresh water and placed in a cool place. Also it is necessary when they are to be shipped or marketed that they be held in water a few hours before sending them out.

The weather is colder, the plants are large and the soil full of roots, consequently more firing has to be done and the soil dries out more quickly than a short while ago, so that a sharp lookout has to be kept up in regard to the watering and some parts of the beds need to be looked after almost every other day. The temperature should be kept as even to the mark as is possible. There is nothing more detrimental to the plants' well being than variations of temperature.

C. W. JOHNSON.

FLORISTS' FERNS.

The Rest Period.

This is the quiet season for most of the ferns. This is because the majority take a more or less marked period of rest. In some instances this rest period is accompanied by the loss of all the foliage, while among the ever-green species it is marked by a cessation of growth for two or three months and a smaller consumption of water.

This does not mean that they will do without water for that length of time, but that watering will not be required so frequently, for ferns require moisture at all times at the root. And during this midwinter dormant period there is but little gained by repotting or shifting, or making up into pans for future sales, unless it be some stock that is very badly in need of a shift, there being the possibility of getting the soil soured by overwatering such freshly potted stock.

But the removal of the Christmas stock will doubtless give space in the houses for the setting over and spacing out of the ferns, an operation that will be especially helpful to the young nephrolepis that are being prepared for the spring trade. These very useful ferns are now sold at such low prices that the only way to get a fair return from the space is by preparing a succession of crops, keeping a lot of young plants on hand all the time in order to fill up as space may be found.

If one has bench room for the purpose it pays to raise one's own stock by planting out a quantity of plants for that purpose only, but many growers find it troublesome to reserve space for stock ferns, and those so situated prefer to depend upon getting young stock in thumb pots from some of the specialists who raise these plants by the thousand. Generally speaking, the plain-leaved forms of nephrolepis exaltata are the most satisfactory for the average florist to handle, for, while the many cut-leaved and crested varieties derived from this species are all interesting, and many of them very beautiful, yet they do not give the best results to the ultimate consumer, who buys a fern for his window or his table.

The original Boston fern, or its dwarf progeny, such as N. Scotti, N. Giatrasi, or the wavy-leaved variety that originated with the late W. K. Harris—each of these has its good points, and all are well worth growing. If any of the early crop of these ferns is left behind after the holiday trade is over there is a promising opening for the larger sizes when the season for porch plants and window boxes opens, for thousands of such plants are needed every spring to supply this demand.

During the past season or two the trade in pans of ferns for house decoration has increased greatly, the ferns most used for such purpose being several varieties of the Pterises, for example P. cretica major, P. Wimsetti, and P. Wilsoni. Four or five plants are placed in a 7 or 8 inch pan, grown on until the plant assumes a salable shape and size, and then sold as a single specimen to those who wish a change from the nephrolepis. Such plants when well grown are very attractive, do not cost very much to produce, and will bring a fair price in the retail market. The cyrtomiums may also be grown in this fashion, and give a pleasing variety to the stock.

Those who raise their own stock of ferns from spores will now be thinking of sowing and thus preparing for the coming season, the month of January being a good time for sowing this sometimes troublesome but always interesting crop. The details of sowing the spores have been so often referred to that it is only for the benefit of the beginner that we return to that point once more, and very briefly. Clean seed pots, plenty of drainage, the soil fine and pressed down firmly in the pots, then well watered with a fine rose on the watering can, all are important. Allow the pots to drain for a couple of hours, or longer, then they will be ready for a very thin sowing of the spores on the surface of the soil.

The seed pots are then placed in a propagating frame or covered with panes of glass, protected from sun and wind, and if properly cared for should not require watering again until after the spores have germinated, the period required for this process varying with the different species from one week to a month or more. The temperature for the seed pots should average about 60 degrees, and while they do not require much ventilation, yet much care is needed to avoid fungoid troubles.

Then there is the pricking off of the sporelings, and ultimately the potting of the young plants, in all quite a lot of work before the plants are worth $40.00 per thousand, and frequently less. It is interesting, though somewhat tedious, and for the latter cause we find that many of the plant dealers permit the fern specialists to do all this preliminary work and then buy the young plants from them after they are pricked out in flats.

W. H. TAPLIN.

Nephrolepis Muscosa.

Really we have lost count of the many sports of Nephrolepis exaltata but we feel sure that Nephrolepis muscosa has thus far escaped mention. It is reported to be a sport from N. exaltata f. superbissima but should probably be named N. exaltata f. muscosa. Still another form has been named veridissima in allusion to its dark green color. Incidentally the name itself, according to the Fern Bulletin, more than alludes to the ignorance of the namer in regard to the Latin word for green. Nephrodium Giatrasi is another sport hitherto uncatalogued. The inordinate multiplication of forms in this one species must already make British form makers tremble for their laurels. What is a mere three hundred forms of Scolopendrium or five hundred of the lady fern, to what we can produce if we try. Exaltata is a fine specific name; just the thing to exalt this side of fern growing. All we need is time.

National Association of Gardeners.

The executive board of the National Association of Gardeners held its first meeting for the year on Wednesday afternoon, January 8, at the Murray Hill Hotel, New York city. President William H. Waite was in the chair. After disposing of the routine business before the meeting the subject of the association maintaining a department, along the lines of foreign horticultural societies, to which members of the profession may look for opportunity for advancement, was brought up for discussion, and resulted in the secretary being empowered to take the necessary steps to bring about the establishment of such a department.

On motion made by former President Logan it was also decided that the association award a medal for any new meritorious varieties of flowers, plants, vegetables or fruits originated by a gardener member of the association and that the president annually appoint a committee of judges for that purpose. Mr. White appointed William Kleinheinz, of Pennsylvania; Peter Duff, of New Jersey, and James Stuart, of New York, to serve as a committee for 1913.

An appropriation was voted for the purpose of holding a national gardeners and florists' bowling tournament in New York during the week of the International Flower Show, to which members of the Society of American Florists are to be invited. The event will be held at Thumm's Alleys, on Broadway, famous for many big bowling events, and the association will offer two cups—one for the team and one for the individual making the highest score at the tournament. The tournament will be open to teams of three men, members of any local florists' or gardeners' club which they represent, and members either of the N. A. G. or S. A. F. The individual tournament will be open to members of the N. A. G. and S. A. F. The following committee was appointed to complete all arrangements. John Dodds, John W. Everett, A. Bauer, James Stuart and William Robertson, of Jenkintown, Pa. Many valuable prizes have already been contributed.

Lester E. Ortiz, superintendent of the Pratt Estate at Glen Cove, N. Y., and vice-president of the Farmers' Congress, of New York, addressed the meeting. He said that in his opinion the men who serve as superintendents on the private estates of the future will have to be informed on every branch that goes to make up a complete private establishment. He urged that the gardeners co-operate with the farmers to influence a more liberal appropriation of the millions expended annually, by the nation and states, for educational work in agriculture and horticulture. He said that sixteen or seventeen millions will be appropriated this year and that the gardeners of the nation should have a voice in the recommendations for distributing this vast sum. A meeting of the Farmers' Congress will shortly be held in New York. Mr. Ortiz invited his fellow members and all gardeners to attend.

The directors decided to hold their next meeting in New York during the International Flower Show, to which meeting an invitation will be extended to all members of the association. The officers and executive members of the association as at present constituted are: William H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y., president; A. J. Smith, Lake Geneva, N. Y., vice-president; Martin C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., secretary; James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y., treasurer. Trustees for 1913: Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; William Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Alexander MacKenzie, Glen Cove, N. Y.; John Dodds, Wyncote, Pa.

The following are the directors: To serve until 1914: Robert Angus, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Robert Bottomley, New Canaan, Conn.; Carl Schaeffer, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; E. Wetterlow, West Manchester, Mass.; T. J. Kempton, Baychester, N. Y.; E. Trethewey, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Alexander Fraser, Newport, R. I. To serve until 1915: John Shore, Harrison, N. Y.; Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass.; William N. Craig, North Easton, Mass.; Frank E. Witney, Fishkill, N. Y.; Robert Williamson, Greenwich, Conn.; F. Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.; James Bell, New York, N. Y. To serve until 1916: Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; John F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; John W. Everett, Glen Cove, N. Y.; A. Bauer, Deal Beach, N. J.; John W. Jones, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Alexander McPherson, Washington, D. C.; James C. Shield, Monticello, Ill.

Reports of the various committees show that the association is in excellent condition financially and otherwise, with prospects that its growth during 1913 will even exceed the phenomenal strides it made during the last year.

Minneapolis, Minn.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. convention, to be held here in August, 1913, has held three meetings and recommends that the affairs of the convention be conducted by the Convention Association, to consist of members of the Minneapolis Florists' Club and the Minnesota State Florists' Association. The appointment of a finance committee is also recommended as follows: J. S. Mitchell, chairman; Hugh Will, R. A. Latham, C. F. Rice, O. H. Carlson, W. D. Desmond, O. J. Olson and C. E. Schaeffer. Other committees are also recommended. The raising of a fund to meet all expenses is urged.

Stephen A. Jamieson, North-Western representative of the Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, Ill., has opened an office at 826 Plymouth building.

The second annual ball of the Minneapolis Florists' Club was held January 13, at the Masonic Temple.

Nebraska Horticultural Society AND STATE FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

The forty-fourth annual meeting of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society will be held in the Lindell Hotel, Lincoln, January 21-23. The Nebraska State Florists' Society, an auxiliary organization, will hold a meeting in connection and will take part in the program.

There will be demonstrations in box packing in addition to the fruit and flower show. On the afternoon of January 21, President A. J. Brown of Geneva, will deliver an address and there will be addresses by others on horticulture and kindred subjects, followed by general discussions. An election of officers will take place January 22.

HARBOR SPRINGS, MICH.—John Hickman, a local florist, died here recently.

OBITUARY.

James B. Kidd.

James B. Kidd, well known in the seed trade, died suddenly, January 10, on a Ninth avenue elevated train at Franklin and Greenwich streets, New York. He had started from the United States appraisers' stores, where he had been employed as expert horticultural examiner about five years, to go down town to lunch when stricken with heart disease. He was 62 years of age. The body was taken to the Leonard street station, where it was identified by David S. F. Adams.

Mr. Kidd was unusually well informed in all departments of the seed, plant and bulb business. The son of a Scotch gardener, he came to this country when young and entered the employ of B. K. Bliss, then a seedsman of Barclay street, New York. From there he went to J. M. Thorburn & Co., remaining with the latter firm several years. He went to San Francisco and was with Timothy Hopkins and the Cox Seed & Plant Co. Returning to New York, he was for a time with Wm. Elliott & Sons, leaving to take the position in the appraisers' stores. Mr. Kidd, in private life, was genial and companionable and had many friends. He is survived by a wife and daughters, who reside in San Francisco, and by a son, George, who is employed by the Edison Electric Co. of New York.

The funeral was held January 12 at 10:30 a. m. at the chapel of Stephen Merritt Burial and Cremation Co., Eighth avenue and Nineteenth street, New York. It is understood that the interment, which will take place at the convenience of the family, will be at Newark, N. J. His son and a number of former associates were present at the funeral. Mr. Kidd resided at 486 Bramhall avenue, Jersey City.

William S. Fisher.

William S. Fisher, for a number of years an employe of J. H. Small & Sons, Washington, D. C., and previously at the Botanic Gardens and at the White House, but of late years with the Washington Florists Company, died suddenly on Sunday, January 5, 1913.

Mr. Fisher was about fifty-four years old and was well known in South Washington, where his father and mother, Capt. Marvin P. and Mrs. Mary E. Fisher, lived for a number of years. Both parents are dead. Two sisters, Misses Hattie V. and Mattie Fisher, survive. Funeral services were held at St. James P. E. Church, Eighth street between B and C streets N. E., at 9:30 a. m., Tuesday, January 7.

Samuel Reisner.

Samuel Reisner of the firm of Reisner & Schaeffer, retail florists of 1249 Lexington avenue, New York, who had taken a trip to Bermuda, was run down by a cyclist January 10, four hours after landing in Hamilton, and died the same night. At the time of the accident he did not seem badly hurt and continued going about, but soon collapsed and died of cerebral hemorrhage caused by the fall. He was about 45 years old and unmarried. His partner Phillip Reisner sailed at once for Bermuda on receipt of a cablegram telling of the sad event.

CARNATION growers will recall that McKinley day is January 29.

THE Hill-Heller Co., Cincinnati, O., is advertising in the local daily papers that it will deliver flowers by parcels post within 300 miles of its address free of charge.

THE board of general appraisers has ruled that dried flowers, such as helichrysum and statice, not bleached or dyed, are dutiable at the rate of 25 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 263, tariff act of 1909. When bleached or dyed they are dutiable at the rate of 60 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 438 of the tariff act.

THE following weeds are unlawful in Iowa according to an act of the general assembly, although it is said the law is violated in many parts of the state because the farmers and some of the officers are unfamiliar with it: Quack grass, Canada thistle, cocklebur, wild mustard, curled dock, smooth dock, buckhorn, wild parsnip, horse nettle, velvet weed, burdock.

American Gladiolus Society.

The National Flower Show committee has set aside April 8 as Gladiolus Day. Intending exhibitors will please take note, and endeavor to make a good show of blooms on that day. Send me a postal card so that you may receive the splendid schedule of prizes which will be distributed in due time.

American Rose Society.

The president of the American Rose Society wishes to have a meeting of the Executive Committee on Thursday, Jan. 16, 1913, at 2 p. m., to consider matters of various kinds pertaining to the society and to arrange for the coming annual exhibition. The meeting is to be held at the office of Vice-President Traendley, 131 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York city.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Sec'y.

New York Federation of Floral Clubs.

There will be a meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs during farmers' week exercises at the New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, on Wednesday, February 12, at 12 o'clock. As several matters of great importance will be presented, it is earnestly requested that all florists' associations or florists' clubs in the state be well represented.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Third National Flower Show.

There have been so many inquiries regarding the privilege of selling cut flowers and plants at the National Flower Show, at the New Grand Central Palace, New York, April 5-12, 1913, that I have been authorized to receive bids for this important privilege, the space to be provided free. The committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids. Proposed space to be allotted is 150 square feet, and the lessee to furnish booth and necessary furnishings. Additional space may be secured at the regular rates. Bids will be opened February 15, 1913.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y Committee.

Browne Sells Seedling Carnation.

A carnation deal of considerable magnitude and much interest was consummated on Monday, January 13, between Thomas Browne, Greenfield, Mich., and S. S. Skidelsky, Robert Rahaley and Fred Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., whereby the latter trio acquired the entire ownership of Mr. Browne's seedling pink carnation. A large sum of money was necessary to induce the grower to part with the stock of this seedling that has attracted the attention of the trade for the past four years. It was shown a year ago at the Rose and Carnation Show here, receiving a certificate of merit and eliciting much favorable comment from some of the largest carnation growers in the country, several of whom visited the Browne establishment to see it growing. It is said to be a strong continuous bloomer and has no split calyx. It is a soft, glistening pink, unlike any commercial variety now grown. It has been named Philadelphia and will be disseminated the season of 1914.

Plant Breeding and Evolution.

The relative values of cross-fertilization and self-pollination are discussed at length in a recent bulletin of the Agriculture Department entitled "Heterozygosis in Evolution and Plant Breeding." The bulletin says:

"The first point we will consider is the benefit arising from cross-fertilization. It must be granted from the data already presented that an increase in vigor generally results when different species or markedly different varieties are crossed. It is also perfectly obvious that many plants are naturally designed for cross-fertilization. It can hardly be argued, however, that specific crosses could have had a widespread value in the course of evolution. It must be shown, therefore, that in plants not widely different in character cross-fertilization shows an advantage over self-fertilization. * * * * * It seems logical to argue that cross-fertilization between nearly related plants is often a benefit, yet since types that are self-pollinated in nature—legumes, wheat, tobacco, etc.—are among the most vigorous of living plants, it can not be said to be indisputable."

After quoting Darwin to the effect that crosses between plants which have long been self-fertilized do not benefit the offspring the bulletin continues: "In other experiments that Darwin performed it was shown conclusively that crosses between individual flowers borne on the same plant conferred no benefit whatever on the progeny. It is evident, therefore, since plants may differ in non-visible transmissible characters, that differences in transmissible factors alone account for the benefit produced by crossing and are indispensable to its occurrence. This is clearly shown by the fact that even types naturally self-fertilized, such as the garden pea, showed a remarkable increase in vigor when entirely different strains were crossed."

The bulletin further avers that "first-generation hybrids of many economic plants give a yield sufficiently greater than pure strains to pay for their production and leave a profit. This is true only of crops where crossing is easy and where profit is made from accelerated and increased cell division or number of fruits. In general, it is not true where the selling price is greatly increased by the possession of some special quality. As Collins has remarked, value may at times accrue also from the fact that a plant breeder who has found a great increase in yield from growing the first hybrid generation of a particular cross may keep the parents a secret and maintain a justly remunerative business by selling hybridized seed or seedlings."

Arkansas Horticultural Society.

This society will hold its thirty-third annual meeting at Ft. Smith, Jan. 21-22-23, 1913. Noted speakers, good papers, bulb exhibits of boxed apples, vegetables, implements, sprayers, etc., are on the programme. Big cash premiums are offered on Arkansas products. This is a fine chance to get acquainted with Arkansas. Bert Johnson, the Arkansas "Peach King," is president of the society and Ernest Walker, secretary.

A QUIET MARKET.

Trade is quiet and there has been no great change in the market conditions since last week. Although there is plenty of stock at present roses are not in large supply and the demand for them is light. Richmond roses are scarce but the supply of Killarney and White Killarney is quite large. Long stemmed American Beauty roses are plentiful and some magnificent stock is obtainable. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Prince De Bulgarie and Sunburst are in heavy demand and are sold quickly at good prices. Carnations are very plentiful and are being sold in large lots at greatly reduced prices. The supply of orchids is equal to the demand but gardenias are still scarce. Sweet peas have been moving fast and there is no surplus to speak of. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are seen in large quantities at all the stores and the same holds good for tulips. Lily of the valley is in good supply and some very fine stock is now arriving. Violets have had very little call and sold for less money this week than they ever did before. The supply of stevia has shortened up considerably and some fine snapdragons are now to be had. Freesias are plentiful and greens of all kinds are in good supply. There is a great deal of funeral work and the demand for white roses is better than it has been for some time past. The cold clear weather we are having is doing wonders with the stock, especially with the Killarney rose, which is rapidly assuming its natural color. On Wednesday the weather was very cloudy and trade was none too lively. Roses have shortened up considerably and some houses are having trouble in filling all their orders. Bulbous flowers are greatly in evidence and the supply of carnations is rapidly increasing.

NOTES.

N. J. Wietor and wife left on January 13 for a visit at Ocean Springs, Miss., and other southern towns, principally New Orleans, La. W. Gast and wife accompanied them on the trip and according to the well known wholesaler the party will be gone for about three weeks. Gus. Alles, Wietor Bros.' old reliable storeman, will be in charge as usual during his employer's absence.

Peter Reinberg.
Pres. Elect of the Board of Education.

Peter Reinberg, the well known wholesale florist of this city, was again honored this week when he was unanimously elected president of the board of education at its annual meeting, January 9. He succeeds Dr. James B. McFatrach, who resigned after serving two years of a term expiring on July 1, 1913.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is having a brisk demand for rooted carnation cuttings and over 30,000 have been delivered since January 1, 1913. The Herald, this firm's new scarlet carnation, is attracting a great deal of attention on the local market where it is eagerly sought for by the best trade.

August Poehlmann, H. N. Bruns and M. Barker, representing the Florists' Club, visited Wm. J. Smyth at St. Luke's hospital January 10 and found him progressing favorably under the careful attention of Mrs. Smyth.

S. F. Willard, Jr., who has been in the employ of Vaughan's Seed Store's greenhouses at Western Springs for the past three years, has resigned to accept a position with Kendel's Seed Store at Cleveland, O.

Wendland & Keimel, the well known rose growers at Elmhurst, have incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. The incorporators are Henry C. Wendland, William J. Keimel and Henry C. Schumacher.

Weiland & Risch are headquarters for fine snapdragons, daisies and smilax. H. W. Rogers says that trade at this house has been good considering the present market conditions.

The Northwestern Floral Co., of Gross Point, has placed an order with the A. Dietsch Co. for four new greenhouses, three 35 x 100 feet and one 31 x 100.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society has been postponed, awaiting the return of Secretary Haight, who is in Florida.

COOK COUNTY FLORISTS' LEAGUE.

The fight for first place is becoming warm and the Violets, Carnations and Orchids are only a few games behind the Roses. The individual race is also close with Allie Zech leading Fred Price and Al. Fischer by about 10 pins. The Orchids broke all records for the season and now have the highest single game score and the highest three game average. John Zech rolled 214, J. Jacobs and Brostrom 210 and Eddie Schultz 206, which were the four highest single game scores of the evening.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant January 9, President Foley in the chair. The principal business of the evening was the installation of officers, which was carried out in the style provided by the new by-laws. The report of Treasurer Winterson was presented, showing a healthy condition of the club's finances. President Foley then thanked the members for their assistance and co-operation during the past year and bespoke similar encouragement for the new officers, who were then introduced and with appropriate remarks installed in their respective places.

President-Elect French on taking his seat made a good address, full of suggestion and promise for the coming year. He dwelt at length on the need of publicity in times of oversupply and this topic brought out an animated discussion in which Wm. F. Kasting, W. N. Rudd, W. S. McGee, Geo. Asmus, Richard Salms and others took part. The new president announced some of his committees as follows:

Reception Committee—George Asmus, chairman; P. J. Foley, T. E. Waters, Richard Salms, E. F. Winterson and W. S. McGee.

Transportation Committee—J. B. Deamud, chairman; Fred Lautenschlager and Chas. W. Johnson.

Committees were also appointed, one to visit W. J. Smyth, whose recent accident still confines him to St. Luke's hospital, a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of John T. Temple of Davenport, Ia., and a committee to operate with the Horticultural Society in planning for the November show of the Chrysanthemum Society of America in this city.

The visitors included Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Harry Balsley, Detroit, Mich.; Peter Fornof and F. S. Miller and son, Columbus, O.

CARNATIONS MORE PLENTIFUL.

Carnations are becoming more plentiful and are again selling at normal prices. Roses, especially the short grade which are in great demand, are rather scarce. There seems to be little call for lilies of the valley and they move slowly. Lilies are coming in more plentifully and there are enough to fill all orders. Sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities, due to a few bright days which we had last week. There are plenty of greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

J. Verry, who conducted a very neat little flower store on Grand avenue and Second street for sometime, has discontinued the sale of flowers and has

CARNATIONS MORE PLENTIFUL.

Business since the first of the year has been nothing to boast about. Funeral orders are quite numerous, however. Carnations are coming in more plentifully now and are first-class in every respect. Roses could not be much better. Violets are rather scarce just at present. Tulips have made their appearance but are still very short of stem. Plenty of other bulb stock is now being shown.

CLUB MEETING.

The January meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the home of Henry Pauli on the afternoon and evening of January 7. Every member was present with the exception of two. The members had attended the funeral of the late John Temple in a body and met with Mr. Pauli after the services. Only routine matters came before the club for a hearing, the regular topic being postponed to the February meeting. A committee appointed to draft resolutions on the death of Mr. Temple prepared and submitted the following: Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has called from our midst our brother florist, John Temple, therefore be it resolved, that our organization has suffered the loss of a loyal member, each of us a true friend and the interests of floriculture and horticulture an energetic and tireless worker. And be it resolved, that the members of the association attend the funeral in a body and extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy. Also resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent the daily papers, the trade papers, the family and spread on the books of the association. John Staack, Henry Meyer, Harry Bills, committee. Edw. Goldenstein and Clifford Pruner, both representing Chicago firms, were guests of the club. Henry Gaethje invited the club to meet with him in February. His invitation was accepted.

THE TEMPLE FUNERAL.

Funeral services over the body of the late John Temple were held January 7. Edw. Goldenstein represented J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, who was too ill to be present in person, and Clifford Pruner represented the Poehlmann Bros. Co. Mr. Vaughan sent a fine large wreath of white roses and M. Barker of THE AMERICAN FLORIST a spray of Pink Killarney roses. A vast number of floral tributes decked the coffin. The Masons, K. of P.'s, Volunteer Firemen, Tri-City Florists, Odd Fellows, and Rebekahs all sent beautiful pieces. There were also numbers of sprays and wreaths from individuals.

NOTES.

The writer takes this means in behalf of the family of the late John Temple to thank members of the trade for their letters of sympathy and for their many floral offerings. Also members of the Tri-City Florists' Club for their attendance at the services.

Henry Ewoldt, father of the Ewoldt Bros., who has been seriously ill for the past five weeks, is slowly improving.

WEEK CLOSES WELL.

The market last week took a rather unexpected and peculiar turn. The week opened with everything in good strong supply and the receipts were taken up only moderately well. As the week progressed market affairs took a turn for the better and by the close almost everything that was good was cleaning up nicely. The size of the daily cut of roses decreased very perceptibly. A very easy market changed to one where most of all the receipts cleaned up each day. The demand is especially strong for white and pink. The American Beauty supply, too, has diminished but the receipts are ample for requirements right now. Carnations are in a very large supply. The supply the first few days of last week could not nearly be utilized by the call for these blooms. They, however, experienced a turn for the better as the close of the week drew near and on Friday and Saturday they sold up nicely. The prices realized were low. Both callas and giganteum are proving good property. In valley only the best is selling. The offerings in single violets are elegant. The stems are long and blooms large. Bulbous stock is finding only an ordinary market and is bringing prices commensurate with the demand. The supply of double violets and orchids is easily adequate. A few tulips have made their appearance.

Boston.ROSES AND CARNATIONS SHORT.

Weather predictions here are hard to make. We have had all kinds of weather handed out to us. All we needed sometimes was the robins to make us think of spring. Between south winds and rain we had a remarkable January. Roses and carnations are short in supply and prices are keeping up. With the exception of funeral work there is no great call, but the scarcity of those two flowers make it sometimes hard to fill orders. There is no apparent scarcity of other flowers.

NOTES.

We met Wm. Young one day last week, and he says he had two individual orders for plants of the Mrs. Charles Russell rose which totaled 24,000. Fourteen thousand of the order went west. Some of the western boys must have big stockings. Some of them can almost see the cups they are going to bring home from the Third National Show.

Penn. the Florist, had a notable window decoration at his store Saturday. It was made of Mrs. Russell roses, violets and orchids. The latter were hung in receptacles on a wire screen and filled in with asparagus plumosus. The effect was very fine.

The high cost of living has struck some of the plantmen and seedmen. Prices have been raised except to those who got in before the gate was shut.

There has been no ice cut here as yet. Some of the ice houses are empty and it looks bad for the florists next summer.

The market conditions have been influenced greatly by the inclement weather of the past week. Carnations, especially, were very plentiful and in lots were sold at very low prices. Roses also suffered. American Beauty in many cases arrives bull-headed and shapeless; violets and sweet peas also increased in supply. Transient trade is poor and the only outlet is caused by funerals and a few society events.

NOTES.

A very interesting meeting was held last Thursday by the St. Louis Florists' Club; F. H. Weber, president, in the chair; 25 members present. Alex. Siegel was elected a member and will prove a good one, as Alex. is popular with the boys. A committee, appointed by the Retail Florists' Association, will meet the publicity committee of the St. Louis Florists' Club at the next meeting in reference to the advisability of holding a fall flower show.—Jamke of the Missouri Botanical Garden, Fred Ammann and J. J. Beneke spoke in its favor. The prospects are bright. The show, if given, will be held entirely under new management and there will be special features which will attract growers and retailers alike.

R. A. McPherson of Litchfield, Ill., was a visitor and was enthusiastic over Christmas business. He has as fine carnations as grown anywhere. He is now busy completing a new chrysanthemum house to grow special varieties.

Henry Ostertag and a force of twenty-five men left St. Louis Friday night for Jefferson City with a carload of flowers to be used at the inauguration of Elliot W. Major, the governor of Missouri.

All five of the wholesale houses are well stocked with flowers. With better weather conditions it is hoped trade will improve.

Mrs. Pelletier had, last week, one of the largest floral pieces ever put up in the shape of a very large and beautiful vase.

Miss Olga Maul, formerly with Grimm & Gorly, is now with John Barnard who is working up a fine trade.

At last reports we are glad to announce a slight improvement in Mrs. H. G. Berning's health.

BUSINESS QUIET.

The last few days of the past week were quiet, there being little demand reported by the stores and the commission houses all complained of the light business. The stock in all lines is plentiful but owing to the dull weather roses are off color, particularly Killarneys, which are very light. White Killarney appears very plentiful and of fine quality, but has found very few buyers and prices have ruled low in consequence. Carnations are increasing in quantity daily and some very fine stock is seen. Prices are away down when the quality of the stock is considered. The ever welcome freesia is now a staple flower and is in fair demand. All kinds of bulbous stock is increasing. Cattleyas are offered in quantity. Gardenias have suddenly jumped ahead and are piling up in the boxes of the commission men. Good flowers were offered as low as $5 a hundred the past week. For Christmas flowers no better brought $5 a dozen. Violets are cheaper—both single and double are being pushed in a slow market with the inevitable results. Callas are now in the race in earnest with the Easter lily, and both move slowly at buyer's prices.

NOTES.

The incorporation of the M. Rice Co. on January 6 was one of the features of the past week. This was done under the laws of Pennsylvania. The capital stock is $100,000, all paid in. The incorporators are: B. Escher, president and treasurer; Arthur Zirkman, vice-president; Raymond Brunswick, secretary; Robert Q. Shock and Frank Farnley. The company own the large building in which the business is carried on at 1220 Race street. This was recently enlarged by the addition of one floor, but another large building in the rear was found necessary for their rapidly increasing business. The gentlemen associated with Mr. Escher are all hustlers and with this close connection with the business great results may now be looked for. Samuel Eddleman is to have charge of the city trade, he being promoted to this position from the force in the store. K.

BUSINESS NOT ENCOURAGING.

The condition of business during the past week was not encouraging. It cannot be said that there was a great influx of stock to the wholesale district but there was enough to supply all demands and buying was light. Toward the last of the week there were not so many American Beauty roses on the market and prices advanced. At some wholesale places $1.00 each was asked for special American Beauties but we do not believe that many sold for that price. Carnations keep accumulating and prices are down with prospects of going lower. Paper White narcissi are a drug and hard to move at $1.00 a hundred. There is a fair movement in jonquils and tulips but the latter are very short. There has been much sloppy, rainy and generally disagreeable weather during the past week, which did not improve anybody's temper, not even the optimists'.

New York, January 13.—There is an active market today, particularly in American Beauty roses, which are scarce and advancing in price. Much of the tea rose stock arriving is poor color, but such as it is, the supply is ample. The ruling price for carnations is $2 to $4 per one hundred. A few specials and fancies, but not many, may be bringing $5. Weather clear and cold and more favorable for business.

NOTES.

The death in Bermuda of Samuel Reisner was a very sad occurrence. It seems like the irony of fate that a comparatively young man should for years escape the innumerable dangers of the streets of New York and meet death in the streets of a place like Hamilton, Bermuda, widely advertised for its restful quietude.

The sudden death of James B. Kidd was a shock to many in the trade for it was not generally known that he had been ill.

Vaughan's Seed Store has been very busy the past 10 days with their extra bulb shipments, tuberose, gladiolus, etc. A. F. F.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the club was held in the Grand Opera house building on the night of January 13. The retiring president, Joseph A. Manda, made a graceful address in which he thanked the officers and members of the club for their support during his term of office. His address was greeted with deserved applause, for though he is modest and unassuming, it is well known that the club has had a great increase in its membership during his term of office.

The retiring president then introduced President Wm. H. Siebrecht, who spoke at length, his remarks being well received. He appointed committees as follows:

Essay Committee.—J. Austin Shaw; Leonard Barron; M. C. Ebel. Legislative committee.—Frank R. Pierson; Patrick O'Mara; Walter Sheridan. Exhibition committee.—John Miesem, Charles Schenck; Patrick J. Smith; A. Kakuda; Charles Weber. House and Entertainment committee.—Frank M. Duggan; Alex J. Guttman; Alfred E. Wheeler. Award committee.—Joseph A. Manda; John Donaldson; Wallace Pierson; A. L. Miller; Frank Traendly; Robert Simpson; I. S. Hendrickson. Dinner committee.—J. B. Nugent, Jr.; Alex. McConnell; Walter F. Sheridan; Thomas B. DeForest; Robert Koehne; Joseph Fenrich. Outing committee.—Philip F. Kessler; Victor Dorval; Henry Weston; A. Buckholtz; Louis Schmutz, Jr.; W. Phillips; Bert Chadwick; Roman Irwin; Anton Schultheis, Jr.; A. Demeusy, Jr.; H. C. Reidel; Paul Meconi.

John Donaldson, vice-president, was then introduced and spoke briefly, but to the point, pledging himself to do his utmost for the success of the club. Wm. C. Richards, treasurer, and John Young, secretary, were in turn called on and each in a few appropriate remarks, thanked the members for their renewed confidence. Those who had been proposed for membership at the December meeting were elected.

The awards committee having visited the range of J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., N. Y., to view his pink carnation Northport, reported $6½ points and awarded a certificate of merit. From the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., viewing the white carnation Matchless, they reported 89 points with a certificate of merit.

The newly elected members that were present were introduced. It is so seldom that a retailer ever appears in the New York Florists' Club that we herewith give the remarks of Max Schling, one of the new members: "I am not an orator. I am really at a loss for the appropriate things to say, but will add that I have many friends here and hope to be a friend to all that I do not now know." He pledged himself to do his utmost for the good of the club.

Chas. H. Totty spoke for the National Flower Show. He is always able and interesting, but on this occasion he was eloquent. He made a stirring appeal for the show, saying that many thousands of dollars had already been invested in space in the Grand Central Palace and that he felt sure that the growers and the lovers of flowers throughout this great land would rally to the support of the enterprise.

Robert M. Schultz of Madison, N. J., a valued member of the club, who has been ill for sometime, was able to be present at the meeting and made an appropriate address.

Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., exhibited their carnation Enchantress Supreme. James D. Cockcroft, Northport, N. Y., exhibited his pink carnation Northport. Frank Niquet, Patchogue, N. Y., exhibited his carnation Improved Enchantress. The Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., exhibited the white carnation Matchless. Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., exhibited the red carnation Wm. Eccles and the pink carnation Lady Northcliffe. Traendly & Schenck, wholesalers of New York, with greenhouses at Rowayton, Conn., exhibited their carnation Salmon Beauty. A. F. F.

Philadelphia Florists' Club.

The January meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club was a good one. There was a banner attendance, nearly 100 members being present, and great interest was taken in the proceedings. Nine new associate members were elected, which is a great addition. The feature of the meeting was the paper of Chas. Henry Fox on "The Zeitgeist, or spirit of the times." This proved very interesting as live topics were handled without gloves and quite a number of good points were brought out. Mr. Fox was listened to with marked attention and judging from the liberal applause his opinions were heartily endorsed.

Wallace Pierson was present, and being called on to speak, said he was much pleased with the paper of Mr. Fox, particularly his ideas of general publicity for the flower business. He had been much interested in pushing this movement along but he regretted to say that he found it easier to get $50 for a feed than $5 for a publicity movement, it being very hard to impress quite intelligent men that this was a good thing for them to subscribe to. He spoke of the high prices at Christmas which were a mistake and said that it was the business of all branches of the trade to keep them down. He hoped to get the Society of American Florists interested in floral publicity. A delegate from each florists' club who has the interest at heart would establish a country wide movement that would amount to something. He said that growers who force lily of the valley should get together here and protect themselves from the importers who had cornered the market and held prices or controlled the stock in such a way that the grower here could not handle his stock with any profit.

Walter Stokes said high prices at holidays were a mistake. The public resents the thought that they are being gouged. He endorsed the speaker in his efforts toward bringing the trade together for the general betterment of the business as one of the greatest pleasures of life was the mingling of men with their fellows.

Adolph Fahrenwald made a plea for higher prices at holidays to make up for the lean times at other seasons. He declared the retailers made the prices for ten months of the year and they ought to let the growers have their say for the other two. He complained of the little interest taken by the retail men in the florists' clubs and in movements for the good of the business.

Charles Grokelow said that prices at holidays and other times were regulated by supply and demand and could not be set arbitrarily. He objected strenuously to the wholesalers doing retail business, which he said was done quite extensively and to the detriment of the retail trade.

Ed. Reid was called for as the "white haired laird." He thought cooperation by the retail and wholesale men all right but each was looking after his own end of it. He did retail business when it came his way but he did not go after it, he said. He complained that the retail dealer did not carry stock enough and wanted to make too much profit. Dealers should go each day and inspect the stock, keeping in closer touch with the market, and not depend so much on the phone.

Mark Mills was much pleased with Mr. Fox's paper and hoped something would be done to help popularize the business with the people. With Mr. Reid he agreed that storekeepers should keep more stock and make a larger display and they would do more business. He thought special sales were a good thing and spoke of one dealer who had handled 7,000 daffodils from one advertisement.

Charles Meehan urged retailers to take chances in times of overproduction, carry larger stocks and take small profits. They had to retail at times to protect themselves but did not go out of their way to get it. There was no city in the country where the retail florists got such service from the wholesaler as he did in Philadelphia, but if it was not for the trade they had worked up outside of this city they could not continue in business.

Leo Niessen, referring to high prices, said that at holiday seasons they were always ready to meet their customers with prices 20 per cent lower for orders in advance. Orders booked ahead were a great help to them and it would pay retailers to take advantage of such a system, but they never could get any, or very few, of the city trade to look ahead in this way. The methods of the wholesale men in finding markets outside had built up the growers' business in this vicinity and incidentally gave the city retailers a better market to buy in. They could have sold every flower they had out of town at the holidays but held a lot for the local trade.

BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

Business has been very good during the past week, there being just enough stock to fill all of the orders, but much more could have been used. The weather has turned a little colder but it is always cloudy. Prices have been very good of late but are considerably lower than those of last week. Fine sweet peas are coming in. The most of them bring $1 a hundred in the longer stems. Carnations are much better, the stems being much stronger than heretofore. Rubrum and calla lilies have appeared and prove popular. The roses all over town are very poor, especially the Killarneys, which are of a very poor light shade. This makes them very hard to sell. Valley has been very scarce the past week, but it is coming in a little stronger now. Yellow Trumpets are now in great quantity. The stock is fine, which makes them find ready sales. Gardenias are now arriving by the hundreds, but do not seem to sell well.

NOTES.

The Pittsburg Florists & Gardeners' Club met Tuesday evening at the Fort Pitt hotel with a very good exhibition of roses. There was a large gathering, this being election night.

Miss Louise Anderson is preparing for a trip to California following her resignation at R. J. Daschbach's, which will take effect next month.

The poor health of Mrs. J. B. Smith of McKeesport has made it necessary for her to go to Virginia, where it is hoped she will find renewed health.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a large decoration at the Darlington ball. A large quantity of wild smilax was used with good effect.

The McCallum Co. is handling a fine grade of daffodils, which sell well. Also some good gardenias and cattleyas.

W. S. Kidd of Beaver was on the sick list last week, but from the latest reports is recovering.

The A. W. Smith Co. is receiving some fine Cattleya orchids from their plant at Canfield, O.

O. A. Leistner of Chicago stopped off on his way home from the east.

John Martin visited his home in Waynesburg Sunday.

ROSES ARE SCARCE.

There was a scarcity of short stock for funeral work, especially in Pink and White Killarney roses, the last week. American Beauties are not very plentiful and the quality also shows the effect of the dark, rainy weather. Richmond roses are in short supply. Carnations in this part of the country are not over-plentiful and are bringing a fair price. They clean up daily, although the price has dropped a trifle. Violets have been selling up very nicely, but these too have come down in price. Easter lilies are still scarce, and callas are used freely as a substitute. Valley is more plentiful and will be from now on. Orchids are to be had in limited quantities, both in white and lavender. Sweet peas are good stock, pink and white selling on sight. A few good poinsettias are still on the market with no demand. Paper White narcissi and tulips are arriving in large supply. The Prosperpine tulips are too short in the stem, however, to be of much use. A little stevia still arrives. Growers generally are busy getting stock in shape for Easter, and unless the unexpected happens it will probably be cold and stormy, and the shipping of plants will be a gamble. C. F. B.

N. Y. and N. J. Plant Growers.

The fifth annual dinner of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will be held Wednesday evening, January 23, 1913, at 6:30 p. m., at Louis Martin's, Broadway, between Forty-first and Forty-second streets, New York. The committee assures all of its guests, not only of the best dinner ever given by the association, but also of a first class entertainment for which the best music and vaudeville acts have been engaged. Private rooms have been engaged and full arrangements have been made for the comfort and convenience of guests. In order to facilitate the committee's work and so that proper arrangements can be made, each person is requested to immediately notify the secretary how many tickets are desired.

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE.

The last week was about as disagreeable as could be. Consequently the quality of the stock has not been what it should have been and the supply was none too good. Bulb stock is getting more plentiful.

NOTES.

The event of the week was a ball given by one of the city's most charming hostesses in honor of her grandson. The decorations were very elaborate and great credit is due Fred Kattol, the Linwood avenue florist, who carried out the work, in which American Beauties, orchids and Killarney roses were used, to good effect. Palms and specimen ferns were used in the banking, while asparagus was also used in profusion. The whole house was most beautifully decorated.

Cupid has again visited the flower stores. This time he captured one of our most popular maidens. Miss Eckert of Elmwood avenue filled all the New Year orders, walked out and returned a few days later, saying that she was now Mrs. Briggs. The best wishes of all are extended to the happy couple, who expect to make their future home on a farm.

It has been demonstrated that judicious advertising in the daily papers pays and the florists are as wise as any others. It is now a regular thing for several of them to take good generous spaces and they seem to be getting results. If you have anything to sell let the people know it. Write it so that it is attractive and they will come to you.

It is a treat to see S. A. Anderson's lilies. They are certainly in fine shape, just far enough advanced and perfect plants. Other plants in his greenhouse assure him of a plentiful stock for Easter.

Milton Shaefer, who has been with L. H. Neubeck for a year, is now taking a course in floriculture at Cornell University.

George Cramer, the only Monroe county birch bark artist, has finished his work in Buffalo and returned to Rochester.

The Holland bulb men are with us again, the first calling about 8 a. m., January 2, and others are coming daily.

Funeral work last week was very heavy, all florists having their share.

Notes of Washington, D. C.

During a few days of the past week spent at the national capital we saw many evidences of prosperity among the florists. The weather was very mild, sometimes rainy, which made heavy firing unnecessary. In the growing no less than in other lines of the business, the Washington florists have made great progress in the past few years. In fact, it seems that the District of Columbia might soon be able, if it chose, to declare independence of the rest of the country in the matter of an adequate supply of good flowers.

The business founded by the late J. R. Freeman is being successfully carried on by his sons and many good features are seen. There are in the District a number of growers who if not so well known to the outside world as those previously mentioned, nevertheless, grow good stock and are prosperous. Among these may be mentioned Theodore Dietrich, John Guttman and Robert Lacey.

Geo. C. Shaffer has just moved across Fourteenth street to a much better store than the one he vacated. It has a fine expanse of plate glass both on the Fourteenth and I street fronts. The interior is handsomely fitted up, the floor and counters are neat designs in tiling, and there is ample room for all purposes.

J. H. Small & Sons have a considerable glass area which is largely utilized for plant growing and forcing, their cut flowers being largely received from the New York market. Their new retail store on H street is one of the show places of that section of the city.

Turning to those who are exclusively retailers, we find them busy and prosperous. Geo. H. Cooke is always busy at this season with decorations for dinners and other social events, in which line of work he excels.

The ranges of the Washington Florist Co. and David Grillbortzer are located at Alexandria, Va., but their stock is sold in Washington, the former company having a fine retail store.

F. H. Kramer is another grower whose activities are noteworthy. He always has a good supply of stock from his own range and his retail store is a busy place.

Alexander B. Garden, the original native born florist of the District, keeps increasing his output of good roses and carnations, as well as numerous other stocks.

We found Z. D. Blackstone very busy. In fact, his store is literally a "busy corner." It is well located for drawing business.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

The regular monthly meeting of this society was held in Doran's Hall, Greenwich, January 10, President Robt. Williamson in the chair. Judging by the number of members present and the excellent financial standing of the society we are looking forward to a very prosperous year. A noticeable feature of the meeting was the large number of splendid exhibits staged, which received awards as follows: Geo. E. Baldwin Co., special mention for a well grown plant of white Cattleya trianae, and cultural certificate for a collection of fine flowered Cattleyas trianae of good type. James Aitchison, honorable mention for well grown plants of Primula malacoides. Robt. Williamson, honorable mention for fine specimen Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and cultural certificate for the now seldom seen Plumbago coccinea. James Stuart, honorable mention for well flowered spikes of Calanthe Veitchii and Euphorbia jacquiniæ-flora. P. W. Popp, highly commended for carnation yellow sport of Mrs. C. W. Ward. Thos. Ryan, highly commended for mixed vase of carnations and vote of thanks for well grown plants of Lilium Harrisii in 4-inch pots. E. Johnson, vote of thanks for mixed vase of carnations. A. L. Marshall, vote of thanks for mixed vase of carnations. Wm. Sealey, honorable mention for vase of mignonette. William Smith, vote of thanks for Primula malacoides. Robt. Williamson, vote of thanks for Primula malacoides. A. E. Townsend, vote of thanks for carnations and gardenias. Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., vote of thanks for carnations Lady Northcliffe and British Triumph.

We are promised an educational treat at our next meeting in an illustrated lecture on the International Exhibition, London, 1912, to be delivered by Harry A. Bunyard of New York. It is requested that every member make a special effort to be present, as we feel sure the lecture will prove of benefit to all concerned. Other important business to be taken up is the location of the summer and fall shows. Among the visitors present were: Maurice Fuld, representative of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who addressed the meeting with a few well chosen remarks. Joseph Manda, Orange, N. J., and William Scott of Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y., were also visitors.

Better Understanding

Of our firm, its products, and its methods of doing business means to you, the buyer, Better Service, Better Goods, and Better Satisfaction. Our aim is to produce quality in quantity at reasonable prices.

Better business to us means better employees and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12 inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch 9-inch and 12 inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

New American Beauty GERANIUM

WE take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 our New American Beauty Geranium for the first. After working on it for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. Our claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color; the individual blooms measure 2¼ inches across. It is semi double medium dwarf of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade, 2½-inch pots, 50 cents each; $5.00 per doz. 3-inch pots, $1.00 each; $10.00 per doz. cash.

Write for circulars in natural colors and prices on large lots.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

ALBERT DICKINSON and wife, of Chicago, are in Florida for the winter.

VENTURA, CALIF., January 6.—No rains have yet fallen here to put the land in shape for seed sowing.

NEW contract pea prices show slight reduction from last year; the bean prices have been slightly advanced.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Jones Seed Co., formerly the L. F. Jones Seed Co., has filed articles of incorporation; capital, $12,000.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—It is reported that C. F. Wood, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., has sold out his interest to his partners, who will continue.

JAMES B. KIDD, horticultural expert at the United States appraisers' stores, New York, and well known to seedsmen throughout the country, died suddenly January 10. See obituary notice elsewhere in this issue.

ZANESVILLE, O.—The Imlay Co. of this city has incorporated to deal in seeds and nursery stock. The company is capitalized at $20,000 and the incorporators are John D. Imlay, Hugh A. Imlay, Wm. S. Imlay, Manning Imlay and John R. Stonesipher.

THE annual convention of the National Canners' Association will be held at Louisville, Ky., February 10-15, inclusive, with headquarters at the Seelback hotel. Machinery hall has been reserved for the great exhibition to be held in connection with this meeting.

CINCINNATI, O.—Some of the seedsmen here are having trouble with water in their warehouses, compelling them to move their stocks from the lower floors. The river appears to be at a stand but it is thought the trouble from this source will not continue more than a few days.

GEO. C. WATSON sees demoralization of values in Burpee's new 2-cent seed packets; George says seed prices in America are already much too low. It is not many years since eastern catalogue seedsmen, Mr. Burpee among them, were making frantic protests against the 3-cent packets offered by some of the western mail-order seedsmen. While the Burpee 2-cent packets are offered as children's size, yet he sells 25 regular packets for $1, four cents each.

FRENCH BULBS.—A letter from the south of France, dated January 3, advises that French Roman hyacinths have not yet commenced to flower and nothing can be said about what the harvest will be. Up to the present time the winter has been dry and cold and there is no probability that the crop will be other than normal, but as the planting stock was reduced by liberal sales of the 10 to 11-centimeter bulbs last August, it is probable that there will not be so many of the larger grades of hyacinth bulbs harvested the coming season.

Tariff Hearings.

Washington, D. C., January 13.—The ways and means committee of the House of Representatives having tariff matters under consideration have set January 20 as date for hearings on agricultural schedule section G, which includes seeds, bulbs and plants. The hearings on this schedule will commence Monday, January 20, and if there are enough witnesses here to occupy two days they will continue through Tuesday, January 21. It will be necessary to get opinions before the committee on one of those two days. The hearings will close Tuesday night.

Bids For Congressional Seeds.

Bids for furnishing seeds for the 1913-14 congressional distribution were opened January 7 at the Department of Agriculture in the office of Dr. C. C. Clark, chief clerk of the department and chairman of the board of awards. A number of seedsmen and their representatives were present, including J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia. F. H. Woodruff, of Milford, Conn., F. H. Hunter, representing Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif., and Colladay, representing Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, Mass. Before the bids were opened the chairman announced that seedsmen and their representatives would be permitted to examine any or all of the bids. There were 85 sealed proposals submitted, which is the largest number received in recent years. Each section of the country was well represented, including the principal seed houses and growers of New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts; Chicago and Minneapolis; Sioux City, Ia., Nebraska and Kansas; the Rocky Ford district; Oklahoma, Texas and the Pacific coast. Among the larger bidders were the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston, Mass., Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., and Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Calif. Among the foreign firms who submitted bids were the Vilmorin-Andrieux Co., of Paris, France, and Carter Dunnett & Beale, of London, England.

A hasty examination of the bids indicates that larger quantities of surplus stocks were offered this year than formerly, especially of such items as vine-seeds, garden beet, corn and onion. Surplus parsley, turnip, carrot, collards, brussels sprouts and sweet peas are comparatively short. Normal quantities of other items appear to be carried in stock. Large acreages for 1913 contracts were offered.

Prices quoted are about as follows:

	Surplus.	Contract.
Peas	$2.75 to $7.00	$2.24 to $6.00
Garden beet	.15 to .40	.12 to .35
Beans	2.40 to 4.50	2.60 to 5.00
Carrot	.12½ to .55	.17½ to .30
Sweet corn	1.40 to 2.25	1.25 to 2.25
Cucumber	.19½ to .26	.22 to .28
Muskmelon	.12 to .28	.12½ to .25
Lettuce	.15 to .17	.12½ to .48
Onion	.20 to 1.00	.40 to 1.10
Radish	.19 to .19	.09 to .17
Watermelon (unlimited quantities)	.09 to .14	.10 to .16
Sweet peas		.13 to .28

Parcels Post Premium on Lying.

The first job to be undertaken by Congressman-elect Geo. J. Kindel will be to eliminate the jokers from the parcels post law. Kindel declares that the government needs somebody to keep it from making a monkey of itself. "The new law states that if seeds are to be planted they can be sent anywhere in the Denver zone for 88 cents for 11 pounds," said Kindel. "If they are to be eaten, they can be sent for 15 cents. This places a premium of 73 cents on lying to anyone who wants to evade the law. These same seeds can be sent to Augusta, Me., for 88 cents by this fool law if they are to be planted, while if for eating purposes the cost will be $1.32."—Denver Express.

The "Spencer" Type of Sweet Peas

Burpee's Unequaled List for 1913,—Arranged Alphabetically. Choicest Re-selected Stocks Grown on "Floradale Farm."

Spencer Sweet Peas are a great specialty with us! We were the first to grow the seed in America—the stock having been entrusted to us before introduction, even in England, of the original Countess Spencer. We have grown "the original Beauty" and its many "sportive" children with painstaking care each season since. There are but few other growers,—either in England or America,—who can supply an equal assortment of the True RE-SELECTED "SPENCERS" that are uniformly of such choice quality. Seedsmen and planters generally can see how superior our stocks now are by the trials at FORDHOOK FARMS next June or July, while those who may be in California are invited also to inspect the growing crops at our FLORADALE FARM in the beautiful Lompoc Valley. Every planter's garden, however, is really a trial ground and we shall be quite content if any "Doubting Thomas" will send us only a portion of his order and note the difference in character of flowers produced!

Burpee's Blue List for 1913.

THE most complete catalog published for MARKET GARDENERS, TRUCKERS and FLORISTS. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913 contains 148 pages with hundreds of half-tone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalog we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalog, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

Enchantress Supreme

THE Best Sport from Enchantress up-to-date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguishes its parent.

Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching.

A good all around Carnation that retains its color at all seasons.

Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster.

The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years duration convinces us of its great value.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Plans have been accepted for four new vegetable greenhouses to be built next summer for the Battle Creek Sanitarium. The buildings will be 34x126 feet.

BENJAMIN F. YOAKUM, the railroad magnate, says that it cost $7,000,000,000 to distribute $6,000,000,000 worth of farm products last year. In other words, the public paid $13,000,000,000 for what was worth less than half that amount. According to Mr. Yoakum the middleman gets too much and the grower and consumer are the ones who suffer.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, January 13.—Mushrooms, 20 cents to 50 cents per pound; lettuce, 20 cents to 22½ cents, small cases; radishes, 25 cents to 60 cents per dozen bunches; pieplant, 50 cents to 65 cents per bunch; tomatoes, 15 cents to 18 cents per pound.

New York, January 11.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.12 per doz. and $2 to $4 per box; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1.75 per 4-pound basket; tomatoes, 22 cents to 25 cents per pound; radishes, $2.50 per 100 bunches; mint, 50 cents to 65 cents per dozen bunches; rhubarb, 75 cents per dozen bunches.

OMAHA, NEB.—The Omaha Florists' Club held its annual meeting Thursday, January 9. Officers were elected as follows: Charles Faulkner, president; M. Stanch, vice-president; George Swanson, treasurer; Lewis Henderson, secretary. George Swoboda, A. Hooge and Paul Floth were elected trustees.

ATCHISON, KANS.—Sales were a little better this Christmas than a year ago and prices about the same, according to a report from Grove's Greenhouses. Carnations were short. Bulbous flowers did not sell well. Carnations locally grown, were better than a year ago. Outside stock was poor. Roses were better than in 1911. There was a marked demand for Richmond roses, red carnations and stevia. More begonias and poinsettias were sold. People are being educated to the fact that a plant in an artistic setting is much better than in a plain pot and are willing to pay the difference. Baskets were quite popular.

What More Should You Expect?

THE following is from a communication received from Messrs. Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., January 8, 1913:—

"We wish to say that we find the Vermine an excellent thing. We used it on a bench planted with Smilax to kill root lice, or maggots, which ate the roots, and after two applications our Smilax is taking on new life, and has started off to grow."

The following from Messrs. Newman & Legg, of Manasquan, N. Y., January 4, 1913:—

"This fall we had occasion to try your Fungine on a large house of sweet peas. They were so badly affected with mildew that we were going to throw them out,—meaning a total loss of the crop.

We had tried sulphur and all the usual mildew remedies without being able to control it. A caller asked us if we had tried Fungine, saying that he had heard it was good for mildew. We gave them one good syringing with Fungine, with the result that in forty-eight hours there was not a particle of live mildew in the house."

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting at Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, L. I., on Wednesday, January 8, at 2 p. m.; President Brown in the chair. It was decided to accept Elmer D. Smith's offer of a prize ($10) for 6 blooms chrysanthemum Yonkers at the fall show. The dinner committee reported having made satisfactory arrangements with the Oriental Hotel, Glen Cove, for January 23. A special prize offered by J. Canning for 18 carnations, three varieties, brought out a large exhibit of very fine flowers. After much deliberation the judges awarded the first prize to Oscar Bjorkreen, who staged fine flowers of Enchantress, White Perfection and May Day. Alex. MacKenzie was second with Mrs. C. W. Ward, Enchantress and White Enchantress. The prizes for tomatoes, violets and freezias were awarded to J. McCarthy, R. Marshall and J. MacDonald. Other awards were as follows: Certificate of culture to Valentine Cleres for new seedling carnation Red Springs; honorable mention to John Johnston for vase of Calycanthus. John Canning, Ardsley, N. Y., and W. D. Robertson, Roslyn, L. I., were elected to active membership. Prizes will be offered at the next meeting, February 12, for three cauliflower, 25 sprays of sweet peas and six gardenias.

JAMES MACDONALD, Sec'y.

PRINCETON, ILL.—The Trimble Greenhouse Co. has added four greenhouses to its plant. Two of them were purchased from the Colberg estate. The company now has a glass area of 80,000 square feet. It recently made a contract with the Rock Island railroad for 65,000 carnations to be delivered during the year to be used in dining cars and hotels.

It Is Said

A Sharp Knife Makes A Tender Turkey. Apparently it does but in reality it does not.

It is also said certain CHRYSANTHEMUMS possess Commercial Qualities which do not meet the requirements of most Growers. Many of the novelties are worthy of trial; some of the older sorts are among the best.

If undecided what to grow for 1913 crop, ask for our catalogue now ready. We will be pleased to make suggestions to those who can not determine their needs. "History Repeats Itself"

Some Roses are like men—they have to be transplanted to bring out their best qualities. American Beauty never attained the importance in its native France as "Mme. Ferdinand Jamain," that it has in America. The same was true of "Katherine Mermet," from which we got the two sports Bride and Bridesmaid. Liberty and Killarney never developed under the weepy skies of Ireland as they did in America.

The latest aspirant, "MRS. GEO. SHAWYER," we predict will find its way to the front just as have the varieties mentioned. Come and see it growing and convince yourself. $30.00 per hundred; $250.00 per thousand. Grafted or own root.

NO, we are not "married" to any particular method of supporting and bracing the main members of our iron frame work, aside from the fact that we do insist on using compression trussing as the main trussing, when trussing is necessary.

The truth of the matter is, we first figure the stress and strain on a house and then build to meet the figures with a 20% margin for safety. Let us send you particulars of our new construction, making it possible to build a house 70 feet wide, with only two columns.

WHAT THE USERS SAY ABOUT KROESCHELL BOILERS

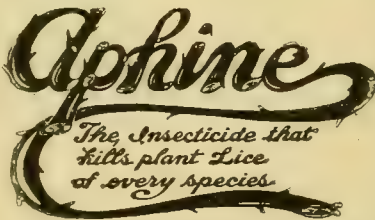

Kroeschell Boiler Generator and Heating System INSURE PERFECT RESULTS.

Having promised you a letter as soon as we passed through a good fair test, I consider it now most timely. We had the thermometer 18 degrees below zero and we've just gone through a blizzard bad enough for most any season, and am very well pleased to inform you that our heating system was equal to the occasion. So far as we have gone, am certainly well satisfied with the Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System.

CURVED IRON EAVE STYLE "S"

This Eave is intended for use on detached houses with either fixed glass or side sash. It is practically all exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse and so is ice clearing.

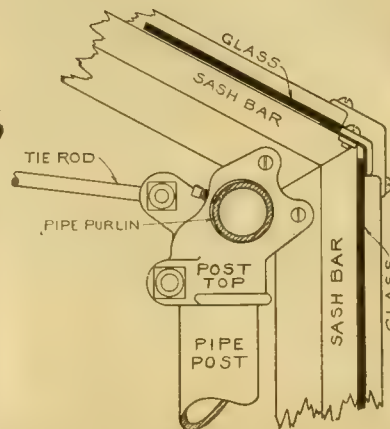

KING GREENHOUSE EAVES

They solve the Eave problem. They make the least possible shade. And, as you can see, present no surface for icicles to form on. They have great strength with lightness. They are designed and made for the purpose and not adapted from stock structural shapes. We want to figure with you.

Owning Your Greenhouse—What It Means.

This is the U-Bar, the bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

You can talk about the things cold frames will do for you "until the cows come home," but if you want real flowers, real bedding plants that you can count on being top notch year in and year out—then a greenhouse is the only thing. The only thing because it is the sure thing. With a greenhouse your frames become doubly valuable, as then one helps the other greatly to the advantage of both. With a greenhouse you control temperatures and conditions and can have what you want when you want it. But don't allow anyone to persuade you that any other curved eave house is just as good as the U-Bar. It is not so. We want to show you exactly why. Send for the catalog as a starter.
